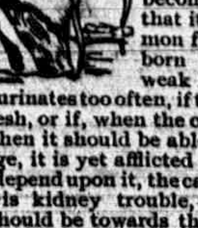
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.



Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Concerning the Letter "Y."

A writer in Science denies that the letter "y" is a lineal descendant from the Roman "Y," which in the time of Cicero was borrowed from the Greek alphabet to represent upsilon in the translation of Greek names. The latter is only used, he says, as a vowel to transliterate upsilon in loan words either direct from the Greek or indirectly through Latin or French. In a great majority of cases the English "y" is a semiconsonant corresponding in value with the continental "j." Along with the other Roman letters, "y" was adopted by the Anglo-Saxons from the Latin alphabet, with a value approximating to that of "i." In fact, he claims that there is not a lineal descendant of the Anglo-Saxon "y" now in existence. The letter "y" in modern English words is, curiously enough, he claims, not a "y" at all, but a lineal descendant of the Anglo-Saxon "g," which was the Roman "G" evolved by the Romans out of an earlier "C."

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflames the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

When Gaslight Was New.

The first shop in London lighted by gas was one of which a Mr. Ackerman, a German, was the proprietor. This shop was on the Strand, and the date was 1810. One of the ladies of rank who often visited the Ackerman shop was so delighted with the brilliancy of a gas jet on one of the counters that she requested the proprietor to let her take it home for the evening, promising to return it safe and sound on the morrow.

Sorrow In Childhood.

A lady was once talking to Queen Elizabeth of Roumania and advanced the theory that sorrow in childhood cast a shadow over the whole life, rendering happiness in later years impossible.

"Do not believe it," replied the queen. "Happiness is like an ocean. It bears you away from the past and all its many sorrows, provided only that you do not persist in looking backward."

Only Place For Him.

Some one said to Brother Dickey:

"Here's a story of a man who has five wives."

Brother Dickey didn't reply for a second or two. Then he said:

"I s'pose dey'll keep him dar all de time now?"

"Keep him where?"

The Place For It.

"What are you snorting about?" asked the young walrus of the old one, who was perusing a scrap of newspaper.

"Here's a doctor who says it's unhealthy to go into the water after a meal. How would we get it if we didn't?"—Philadelphia Press.

Native Australian Tree Climbers.

A black never uses his knees when climbing. If the tree is small in girth he sometimes uses a vine, passing it around the tree and holding on to it as he ascends. The most common way, however, is to ascend by means of notches cut into the tree or bark about one and a half inches deep and about three feet apart. Having fixed upon the side he intends ascending, the climber cuts a notch with his tomahawk about the height of his waist and another on a level with his head, but a little to the right or left of the lower notch, as the case may be. These notches are made by a few taps of the hatchet, first horizontally and then down at an agle of forty-five degrees. Having cut the two lower ones, the ascent is made by standing on the ball of the foot, with the great toe in the notch, while the climber cuts a fresh notch level with his head, and so on until the lower branches are gained.

Often the gum trees run eighty feet from the ground up to the lowest limb, the trunk of the tree being perfectly smooth. These notches are cut with great regularity, for, measured on a fallen tree, the distance between them seldom varies half an inch. In reascending a tree fresh cuts are made for every fresh ascent.

Science has demonstrated most conclusively that mental and nerve power is dependent upon food containing phosphorus.

It is but natural that the same laws which apply to the muscular system should apply likewise to the brain. For instance, wheat contains phosphorus, which it gets from the soil and in the absence of which it could not live.

Wheat is supposed to supply to the human system the elements it gets from the soil. Since the action of the mind is dependent on phosphorus, wheat, fish, cheese, oatmeal and barley can be regarded as brain foods.

It is a well known fact that the brain contains phosphorus in proportion to its power of producing mental effort and that this element must be supplied in proportion to mental activity.

So it can be readily seen that one's mental education begins in the dining room as well as in the classroom.—American Queen.

How Flies Are Able to Taste.

The proboscis of the fly and the tongues of bees and ants are furnished with numerous delicate hairs set in minute pits. These are perhaps connected with the organ of taste; but, though the exact locality of this sense in insects is uncertain, we know that the groups of cells in the tongues of animals called taste bulbs form in part the ends of the organ of taste. These vary in number, increasing in the higher animals. They are very close and exceedingly numerous in man, while the tongue of even the cow has some 35,000 taste bulbs.

It would be interesting to know whether each special taste excites a special group of nerves and that only, thus corresponding to the auditory nerves. These taste bulbs were discovered in 1867. Each one consists of two kinds of cells, one set forming an outer protective covering, through an opening in which project from five to ten of the true taste cells. Though important, they are not apparently an essential part of the organ, for birds and reptiles have none, but neither have they a keen sense of taste, except perhaps the parrot.—Chambers' Journal.

Too Much Realism For the Manager.

"So you had to close the show?"

"Yes," answered the manager with the plaid vest.

"What was the trouble?"

"Too much craze for realism. There was a counterfeiting scene, and the actors said they couldn't go through with it unless they could see what money looked like once in awhile."—Washington Star.

Overworked.

"She is suffering from overwork."

"Mental or physical?"

Beware of ointments for catarrh that contains mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

A very close call.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright. Price 50 cents.

Children Poisoned.

Many children are poisoned and made nervous and weak if not killed outright by mothers giving them cough syrups containing opiates. Dislocated her shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's pain balm advertised for sprains and soreness and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER III.

"It is impossible for me to account for it. I have, however, always supposed that Prosper was led astray by a young man whom he met at my house about this time, M. Raoul de Lagors."

"Ah! And who is this young man?"

The judge listened attentively to this, then wrote the name Lagors at the bottom of an already long list of his memoranda.

"Now," he said, "we are coming to the point. You are sure that the robbery was not committed by any in your house?"

"Quite sure, monsieur."

"You always kept your key?"

"Usually I carried it about on my person, and whenever I left it at home I put it in the secretary drawer in my bed chamber."

"Where was it the evening of the robbery?"

"In my secretary."

"But then"—

"Pardon me for interrupting you," said M. Fauvel, "and permit me to tell you that to a safe like mine the key is of no importance. In the first place, one must know the word upon which the five movable buttons turn. With the word one can open it without the key, but without the word"—

"And this word you never told to any one?"

"To no one in the world, monsieur, and sometimes I would have been puzzled to know myself with what word the safe had been shut."

"Had you forgotten it on the day of the theft?"

"No; the word had been changed the day before, and its peculiarity struck me."

"What was it?"

"Gipsy—G-i-p-s-y," said the banker, spelling the name.

M. Patrigent wrote down the name.

"One more question, monsieur. Were you at home the evening before the robbery?"

"No; I dined and spent the evening with a friend. When I returned home about 1 o'clock, my wife was in bed, and I went to bed immediately."

"And you were ignorant of what sum there was in the safe?"

"Absolutely. After my positive orders I could only suppose that a small sum had been left there over night. I stated this fact to the commissary in M. Bertomy's presence, and he acknowledged it to be the case."

"That will do, monsieur."

M. Patrigent was well informed of the high standing of the banker and knew almost as much of his affairs as did M. Fauvel himself.

He asked him to sign his testimony and then escorted him to the door of his office, a rare favor on his part.

Five o'clock struck before the list of witnesses summoned for the day was exhausted, but the task of M. Patrigent was not yet finished. He rang for his bailiff, who instantly appeared, and said to him:

"Go at once and bring Fanferlot here."

It was some time before the detective answered the summons. Having met a colleague on the gallery, he thought it his duty to treat him to a drink, and the bailiff had found it necessary to bring him from the little inn at the corner.

"How is it that you keep people waiting?" said the judge.

Fanferlot bowed almost to the floor. Despite his smiling face, he was very uneasy. To follow the Bertomy case alone it required a double play that might be discovered at any moment. To manage at once the cause of justice and his own ambition he took great risks, the least of which was the losing his place.

"I have had a great deal to do," he said to excuse himself, "and have not lost any time."

And he began to give a detailed account of his movements. He was embarrassed, for he spoke with all sorts of restrictions, picking out what was to be said and avoiding what was to be left unsaid. Thus he gave the history of Cavaillon's letter, which he handed to the judge, but he did not breathe a word of Madeleine. On the other hand, he gave biographical details, very minute indeed, of Prosper and Mme. Gipsy, which he had collected from various quarters. As he heard the story M. Patrigent's convictions were strengthened.

"The young man is evidently guilty," he said.

Fanferlot did not reply. His opinion was different, but he was delighted that the judge was on the wrong track, thinking that his own glory would thereby be the greater when he discovered the real culprit. The fact was that this grand discovery was as far off as it had ever been.

After hearing all he had to tell, the judge dismissed Fanferlot, telling him to return in the morning.

"Above all," he said as Fanferlot left the room, "do not lose sight of the girl Gipsy. She must know where the money is and can put us on the track."

Left to himself, although the evening was far advanced, M. Patrigent continued to busy himself with the case and to arrange that the rest of the depositions should be made. This case had actually taken possession of his mind. It was at the same time puzzling and attractive. It seemed to be surrounded by a cloud of mystery, which he determined to penetrate.

The next morning he was in his office much earlier than usual. On this day he examined Mme. Gipsy, called Cavaillon and sent again for M. Fauvel. For several days he displayed the same activity. Of all the witnesses subpœnaed only two failed to appear. The first was the office boy sent by Prosper to bring the money from the bank. He was ill from a fall. The second was M. Raoul de Lagors. But their absence did not prevent the file of papers relating to Prosper's case from growing, and on the ensuing Monday, five days after the robbery, M. Patrigent thought he held in his hands enough moral proof to crush the accused.

CHAPTER IV.

DURING these minute investigations of his past life Prosper was in prison in a secret cell. The first two days had not appeared very long. He had requested and been granted some sheets of paper, numbered, which he was obliged to account for, and he wrote with a sort of rage plans of defense and memoranda of justification. The third day he began to be uneasy at not seeing any one except the condemned prisoners who were employed to serve those confined in secret cells and the jailer who brought him his food.

"Am I not to be examined again?" he would ask.

"Your turn is coming," the jailer invariably answered.

Time passed, and the wretched man, tortured by the sufferings of solitary confinement, which quickly break the spirit, sank into despair.

"Am I to stay here forever?" he moaned.

The cell door opened, and the jailer's gruff voice called out, "Come to the court of instruction!"

He instantly obeyed the order. But his step was no longer unsteady, as a few days previous a complete change had taken place within him. He walked with head erect, a firm step and the fire of resolution shining in his eye. He knew the way now, and he walked a little ahead of the guard who escorted him. As he was passing through the room full of officers he met the man with the gold spectacles who had watched him so intently the day he was searched.

"Courage, M. Prosper Bertomy," he said. "If you are innocent, there are those who will help you."

Prosper started with surprise and was about to reply when the man disappeared.

"Who is that gentleman?" he asked of the guard.

"Don't you know him?" replied the policeman, with surprise. "Why, it is M. Lecoq of the secret service."

"You say his name is Lecoq?"

"You might as well say 'monsieur,'" said the offended policeman. "It would not burn your mouth. M. Lecoq is a man who knows everything he wants to know without its ever being told to him. If you had had him instead of that imbecile Fanferlot, your case would have been settled long ago. Nobody is allowed to waste time when he has command. But he seems to be a friend of yours."

"I never saw him until the first day I came here."

"You can't swear to that, because no one is sure of the real face of M. Lecoq. It is one thing today and another tomorrow. Sometimes he is a dark man, sometimes a fair one, sometimes quite young and then a centenarian. Why, often he deceives even me. I begin to talk to a stranger—presto! It is M. Lecoq! Anybody on the face of the earth might be he. If I were told that you were he, I should say, 'It is possible.' He can convert himself into any shape and form he chooses."

The guard would have continued forever his praises of M. Lecoq had not the sight of the judge's door put an end to them. This time Prosper was not kept waiting on the wooden bench. The judge, on the contrary, was waiting for him. His surprise was great to see the cashier's bearing—resolute without obstinacy, firm and assured without defiance.

"Well," he said, "have you reflected?"

"Not being guilty, monsieur, I had nothing to reflect upon."

"Ah, the prison has not been a good counselor. You forget that sincerity and repentance are the first things necessary to obtain the indulgence of a judge. Will you be good enough to tell me," he added, "how much you have spent during the last year?"

Prosper did not find it necessary to stop to reflect and calculate.

"Yes, monsieur," he answered unhesitatingly. "Circumstances made it necessary for me to preserve the greatest order in my extravagance. I spent about 50,000 francs."

"Where did you get it?"

"In the first place, 12,000 francs was left to me by my mother. I received from M. Fauvel 14,000 francs as my salary and share of the profits. At the Stock Exchange I gained 8,000 francs. The rest I borrowed and intend repaying out of the 15,000 francs which I have with M. Fauvel."

"Who lent you the money?"

"M. Raoul de Lagors."

This witness had left Paris the day of the robbery and could not be found. For the time being M. Patrigent was compelled to rely upon Prosper's word.

"Well," he said, "I will not press this point. But tell me why, in spite of the formal order of M. Fauvel, you drew the money from the Bank of France the night before instead of waiting till the morning of the payment."

"Because M. de Clameran had told me that it would be agreeable, even necessary, for him to have his money early in the morning. He will testify to that fact if you ask him. I knew that I would reach my office late."

"By no means. I have always felt a sort of repulsion for him, but he is the intimate friend of my friend, M. Lagors."

"One more thing," said the judge. "How did you spend the evening, the night of the crime?"

"When I left my office, at 5 o'clock, I took the St. Germain train and went to Vesinet, M. de Lagors' country seat. I carried him 1,500 francs, which he had asked for, and, not finding him at home, I left it with his servant."

"Did he tell you that M. de Lagors was going on a journey?"

"I returned to Paris and dined at a restaurant on the boulevard with a friend."

"And then?"

Prosper hesitated.

"You are silent," said M. Patrigent. "Then I will tell you how you employed your time. You returned to your rooms in Chaptal street, dressed yourself and attended a dance."

"You are right, monsieur."

"And did you not play at baccarat and lose 1,800 francs?"

"Pardon me, monsieur; only 1,100."

"Very well. In the morning you paid a note of a thousand francs?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Moreover, there remained 500 francs in your desk, and you had 400 in your purse when you were arrested. So that altogether in twenty-four hours 4,500 francs"—

Prosper was not discountenanced, but stupefied.

Not being aware of the powerful means of investigation possessed by the law, he wondered how in so short a time the judge could have obtained such accurate information.

"Your statement is correct, monsieur," he said finally.

"Where did all this money come from? The evening before you had so little that you were obliged to defer the payment of a small bill."

"Monsieur, the day of which you speak I sold through an agent some bonds I had, about 3,000 francs. Besides, I took from the safe 2,000 francs in advance on my salary. I have nothing to hide."

The prisoner had given clear answers. M. Patrigent determined to attack him from a new point.

"You say you have no wish to conceal any of your actions. Then why did you write this note to one of your companions?"

This time the blow told. Prosper's eyes dropped before the inquiring look of the judge.

"I thought," he stammered—"I wished"—

"You wished to screen this woman?"

"Yes, monsieur, that is true. I knew that when a man in my condition is accused of robbery he has every fault, every weakness, of his life charged against him."

"I suppose you know who this woman is?"

"Mme. Gipsy was a governess when I first knew her. She was born at Oporto and came to France with a Portuguese family."

"Her name is not Gipsy. She has never been a governess, and she is not a Portuguese."

Prosper was about to protest, but M. Patrigent imposed silence. He shrugged his shoulders and began looking over a large file of papers on his desk.

"Ah, here it is," he said. "Listen! Palmyre Chocareille, born at Paris in 1840, daughter of Chocareille (James), undertaker's assistant, and of Caroline Piedlent, his wife."

The prisoner made a gesture of impatience. He did not know that the judge was reading him this report to convince him that nothing can escape the police.

"Palmyre Chocareille," he continued, "at twelve years of age was apprenticed to a shoemaker and remained with him until she was sixteen. Traces of her are lost for one year. At seventeen she is hired as a servant by a grocer on St. Denis street named Dombas and remains there three months. She passed this same year, 1857, at eight or ten different places. In 1858 she entered as a shopgirl the store of a fan merchant in Choiseul alley."

While he read the judge watched Prosper's face to observe the effect of these revelations.

"Toward the close of 1858," he continued, "the girl Chocareille was employed as a servant by Mme. Munes and accompanied her to Lisbon. How long did she remain in Lisbon? What did she do while she remained there? We have no information as to this. However, it is certain that in 1861 she returned to Paris and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for an assault. Ah, she returned from Portugal with the name of Nina Gipsy."

"But I assure you, monsieur," Prosper began—"I assure you"—

"Yes, I comprehend. This history is less romantic doubtless than the one you have understood, but, then, it has the merit of being true. We lost sight of Palmyre Chocareille, called Gipsy, upon her release from prison, but we meet her again six months later, having made the acquaintance of a travelling agent who became infatuated with her beauty. She deserted him to devote herself to you."

The judge paused for a moment, as if to give Prosper time for reflection, and then slowly said:

"And this is the woman whom you have made your companion, the woman for whom you have committed robbery."

Once more M. Patrigent was on the wrong track owing to Fanferlot's incomplete information. Prosper remained silent.

"At any rate," insisted M. Patrigent, "you will confess that this girl has caused your ruin."

"I cannot confess that, monsieur, for it is not true."

"You will also say that it was not for this girl's sake you renounced an intimacy of many years and ceased spending your evenings at your employer's."

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

A school mam not over a thousand miles away found a lad in the geography class who was deeply interested in learning the points of the compass. The teacher said: "You have in front of you, the north; on your right, the east; and on your left, the west. What have you behind you?" After a few moments' reflection, Allen exclaimed: "A patch on my pants," and to make the information more emphatic, Allen continued in a shame-faced manner: "I knew you'd see it. I told ma you would."—Ex.

Seymour Clark, residing southwest of Manchester, owns the farm his father obtained in 1837 from Uncle Sam. It is a farm of 80 acres. The taxes in 1840 were $2.24; the tax for liberty and Freeman, the republican push all over the state in 1903 was $36.13. It is worth something to be permitted to live these days. Thus far, there has never been a mortgage on the farm, but Clark is not certain what another term of republican prosperity may bring forth, and he has mortgage blanks on hand to meet any emergency.—Adrian Press.

Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

DETROIT SOUTHERN

May be extended to

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Will It Be a Good Thing for Tecumseh?

Announcement of the formation of a company to build a steam line from Toledo to Indianapolis, to be known as the Toledo, Indianapolis & Southwestern, has raised the query as to whether there is a deal between the Detroit Southern and the Toledo Railway & Terminal Co., whereby the new company is to build the proposed Detroit Southern's connecting link between Toledo and the main line, passing through Henry county. Some months ago there was incorporated a company known as the Toledo Southern, and the avowed purpose of the corporation being to build a steam line from this city south of the Maumee river to Hamler, in Henry county. This company, while taking a different name, is composed of the same people as the Detroit Southern and therefore represents the interests of that company. The Toledo Southern Co. acquired some valuable dock property, also considerable land for terminals, near Ironville. Since then the company has done nothing in the direction of securing right of way for the proposed new line although railroad men claim there never was a more opportune time for securing right of way.

It is assumed by practical railroad men that rival companies would not simultaneously build parallel lines through a territory already partly developed, and as the Toledo, Indianapolis & Southwestern has announced its intention of building over practically the same route suggested by the Toledo Southern, it would appear that the surmises of certain individuals are correct.

The Toledo Railway & Terminal company is handling all of the Detroit Southern's Toledo business and there are other evidences of the close relationship of the two companies.

The Detroit Southern extends from Detroit, Mich., to Jackson, Ohio, tapping a vast coal field at the southern terminus. The road would be a valuable feeder of the Toledo, Indianapolis & Southwestern and would bring to the Toledo Railway & Terminal company, which is to be the local terminal of the proposed new road, a large amount of business.

That the Toledo, Indianapolis & Southwestern is to be built within the next two years there can be no question. Such men as T. H. Tracy do not take hold of such projects without the best assurances of success, beside back of it is the Toledo Railway & Terminal company, one of the most important railway enterprises carried to a successful consummation within the past few years.

Incidentally it may be mentioned that the Toledo, Indianapolis & Southwestern, incorporated yesterday at Columbus, will be incorporated in Indiana soon and the building of the line will not stop at the western borders of Ohio, but will be pushed through to the Hoosier capital.—Toledo Blade.

The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Among the guests from out of the city were Mrs. and Miss Corey of Tecumseh, Mich., relatives of the bride, who are stopping with Miss Hutchinson at the Palms.

It shocks us that some newspaper men are such terrible liars. In writing of a cyclone out west, one of them said it turned a well inside out, a cellar upside down, moved a township line, blew all the stars out of a whiskey barrel and left nothing but a bunghole, hanged the day of the week, blew the hair off a bald headed man, blew mortgages off the farms, blew all the cracks out of a fence and took all the wind out of a politican.—Ex.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, Jan. 9, 1904.

The political situation is calm but advancing. On the 7th inst., Senator Morgan began a speech regarding Panama, in reply to Senator Lodge. He claimed that the revolution was assisted by officers and citizens of the United States. He would refuse to ratify any treaty until the contract with the Panama canal company is completed. The committee on foreign relations is daily considering the treaty, and the republicans announce their willingness to amend it if desirable.

Senator Morgan's contention that the revolution in Panama is a pinch-beck revolt and that whatever dissatisfaction there was resulted from an illegal conspiracy in which the president took part, is vigorously opposed and even resented by Lodge, Spooner, Fairbanks and other senators, who insist that the administration is blameless in the affair and quote precedents to abundantly justify him. The Boston Anti-Imperialist league has sent a committee here to take a hand.

Thursday evening, the 7th inst., the president gave a notable reception to the diplomatic corps. All the nations except Colombia were represented. Three thousand invitations were issued to the most prominent people in the land, and the crowd was so great many had to wait in line for an hour, while some left unable to get in. The supreme court was present, also senators, representatives, the cabinet and officers of the army and navy. Mrs. Roosevelt wore white, as usual, and some of the ladies wore coronets of diamonds. Lady Durand of the British embassy was in purple velvet.

There was a brilliant wedding in supreme court circles on the 6th inst., when Mr. Pitts Duffield, nephew of Mr. Justice Brown, married Miss Isabel, daughter of Justice McKenna. The wedding took place at home and was witnessed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the justice of the court, senators and high government officials. A chime of white satin bells hung in the bay window where the ceremony took place. Guests limited to 125. The presents included many costly jewels, a "barrel" of cut glass, much silver and china, numerous large checks, and enough other things to furnish a house.

On the 12th inst., there will be a great meeting in the interest of peace and arbitration, at the Lafayette opera house here. Eminent men from all parts of the country will be present, and the speakers announced include Andrew Carnegie, Cardinal Gibbons, Rabbi Hirsch, the presidents of Princeton and Colombia colleges, Gov. Durbin of Ind., Rev. E. E. Hale and Clark Howell of Atlanta. Although there will be a special meeting of the American hierarchy of the Catholic church in Washington on the 31st inst., it is denied that Cardinal Gibbons is to be elected primate of all America.

Reports of the big McClellan dinner in New York, on the 4th, cheered the democrats in Washington, but caused a division of sentiment over the list of proposed presidential candidates. There are those who consider Mr. Cleveland's declination as final. At a dinner given to Senator Platt of New York, by the republican delegation from his state, on the 5th, Congressman Payne rejoiced at republican harmony. Senator Depew was as optimistic as always after a good dinner, and Senator Platt warned his hearers that the democratic party was becoming sane and therefore was in a dangerous condition. He gave the president credit for a wise and strong government, and had a good word for the Panama canal. Senator Quarles of Wisconsin, after a tour of the southern states, announces that the best element regards the canal as a commercial enterprise and is solidly in favor of it. Thus far but two southern senators have been instructed to vote for the treaty—those from Louisiana.

Congress will pass a bill appropriating a large sum of money to investigate the cotton boll weevil which destroyed so much of the crop in Texas. The census bureau announces that up to Dec. 13, 1903, the number of bales of cotton ginned in the south was 8,848,747. In view of this fact the department of agriculture admits that its estimates of the last crop were too high. Dr. Wiley, the agricultural chemist, has been urging congress to make his bureau one of foods also. He says that last year 50 cargoes of German wines were turned back because the wine contained salicylic acid. Much other impure food from Europe was also refused. Congress hesitates to give one man the power to say what food stuffs may or may not be imported into America. A report from the library of congress announces that the building is already over-crowded, although it was erected with a view of meeting the wants of a century. The daily visitors number about 2,500.

Mrs. Admiral Schley, a very popular hostess, gave a tea on the 5th inst., attended by some 400 people. Admiral Schley was present most of the time. Maj. Charles L. McCawley of the Marine corps, has been appointed cotillion leader at the White House. He will be the major-domo of social functions. Prince Cupid, nephew of the ex-Queen of the Sandwich Island, and delegate in Congress from Hawaii, has fallen into the hands of the police and put into a cell. There was a little disturbance in a saloon.

The President's sons, Theodore and Kermit, have returned to school at Groton, Mass.

In the supreme court, on the 7th inst. argument was begun by the Atty. General of Minnesota on behalf of his state against the merger of the northwestern railways. He held that it would create a monopoly; that it was against the laws of Minnesota and the inter-state commerce laws, and injured the proprietary rights of the state. U. S. Senator Dietrich, of Nebraska, is on trial for bribery, and Ex-Congressman Driggs, of New York, has just been convicted of the same offence and will go to prison.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Of course the story may not be true, but a county paper tells of an absent-minded man that came home in a heavy rain a few nights ago, put his wet umbrella to bed, and stood up in the corner until day-light.—Onsted News.

An exchange tells of a young man who had occasion to use the 'phone a few evenings since and laid his cigar in a chair, rung the bell, took down the receiver and just as the central girl answered, a friend came in and was about to sit down on the cigar when the young man exclaimed. "Look, you'll burn your pants!" He tried hard to explain and it is hoped that "central" forgave him.

According to a despatch from Jonesville the division of an estate of $20,000 rests on the solution of the time of death of two of the victims of the Chicago fire. If Mrs. Pierce died first, the property goes to her daughter, Gretchen, also a victim of the tragedy, and from the latter reverts to Dr. Pierce. Otherwise it goes to Miss Addie Siddell, a sister of Mrs. Pierce, who is a missionary in India.—Adrian Telegram.

During Saturday night's terrible storm two Loundberry boys and one Dutcher boy were frozen to death on the bay at Bay Port. The boys were fishermen's sons and had gone out to their parents' fish shanties and became lost in the blinding snow. They were missed at supper time and search was made, but the boys were not discovered until Sunday morning. The eldest boy was 11 and the youngest 7.—Reese Review.

Thoughts of death or of the grave do not oppress John G. Angelo, a blacksmith at Pocomoke City, eastern shore of Maryland, who is hale and hearty at the age of 89 years. But realizing that the length of his years cannot be much longer extended he has made provision for the disposal of his remains in a manner at once unique and in accord with his trade. With his own hands he has fashioned a tomb. The most notable features of it are the anvil and hammer which he used during his apprenticeship and with which he has worked for over 60 years.

The hammer and handle are riveted to the anvil, which in turn is fastened to a marble base and set up at the spot where he will rest after death.—Chicago Chronicle.

HOW HYOMEI HELPS THE HEALTH

Kills the germs of grip, catarrh and colds. "Costs nothing if it fails," says C. A. Wright.

Now that Hyomei can be obtained in nearly every town and city in the country, it is possible to buy from druggists a health giving climate, to be carried in the purse or pocket. By breathing it a few minutes four times a day you can soon cure grip, coughs, colds and even the worst and most chronic cases of catarrh.

C. A. Wright has seen so many remarkable cures made by the Hyomei treatment, that he sells it with the positive agreement to return the money if it fails to cure.

A complete outfit costs but $1, and consists of the pocket inhaler, medicine dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks.

It effects a cure in the worst catarrhal troubles and if breathed at the commencement of a cold or the grip, will check it quickly and prevent sickness. Extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

When breathed through the inhaler, the germ-killing and health-giving Hyomei goes to the most remote cells of the throat and lungs, killing all the catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membrane and vitalizing the blood with ozone.

At this season of the year, every one should have a Hyomei outfit to prevent and cure catarrhal troubles, and ward off attacks of grip, pneumonia and similar germ diseases.

I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines, but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised, for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits."

A group of women were talking about the stupidity of men at all times and their enormous denseness when their wives were trying to give them a hint.

"You know one day we had company unexpectedly, and we hardly had enough to go around," said one woman. "I tried to catch my husband's eye to convey to him that he was serving the meat too generously. But he would not take the hint. When he had given out the last bit, there were two plates still unfilled. What do you suppose that shameless man did? He simply called all the plates back again and scooped enough off each one to fill the remaining two."

"I shall always take my husband aside beforehand and tell him a few things," said an engaged girl.

"Well, that won't work," said an experienced matron. "I did that one day, and when I asked my husband whether he would have pudding or pie for dessert he blurted out, 'Good gracious, Helen, I've forgotten which you told me to take.'"—Pittsburg Press.

Gloves and Kisses.

The claim of gloves by ladies as a reward when they have stolen a kiss from a sleeping man is alluded to by Gay (1688-1732):

For custom says, "Whoe'er this venture proves
For such a kiss demands a pair of gloves."

In chapter 5 of "The Fair Maid of Perth," by Sir Walter Scott, Catherine leaves her chamber on St. Valentine's morning and finding Henry Smith asleep gives him a kiss. The glover says to him:

"Come into the booth with me, my son, and I will furnish thee with a fitting theme. Thou knowest the maiden who ventures to kiss a sleeping man wins of him a pair of gloves."

A Lost Necklace.

Quantities of ornaments are lost each year at the drawing rooms or courts at Buckingham palace, and only a very small proportion is recovered.

A very strange story is still told about a diamond necklace which was found at one of the state balls some years ago. It happened that one of Queen Victoria's ladies in waiting picked up a diamond necklace from the floor. As she stood with it in her hand a lady came quickly forward and claimed it.

The finder was very firm, however, [illegible] to [illegible] in to the lord chamberlain's office, as this was the rule with regard to anything found in the palace. The lady protested in vain, but the oddest thing was that this necklace never was claimed and is probably still at the lord chamberlain's office.

The Reporter and the Doctor.

"I've met some newspaper men," said the doctor, "and I don't like their ways. They're always trying to pry into other people's business."

"Well," responded the reporter. "There's but one difference between newspaper men and doctors that I can see."

"And what's that?" asked the doctor.

"You fellows dissect bodies and we dissect brains. For my part I like the brain end of it."

Then the doctor sat down and thought for several minutes.

Dividing the Honors.

A North Carolina congressman relates an amusing story of an old justice of the peace in his county. It seems that two young attorneys were trying a case before him. After the arguments had followed the testimony of the witnesses and the case was closed the old fellow, awakening from deep reveries into which he had fallen, said, addressing one of the lawyers: "You know, Hank, I gave you the decision in the last two cases, so I will give this one to Tom. You can't expect to get them all."

The odor of the sea—the wild, salt tang "from wind swept spaces blown"—what freedom is in its breath! "Sea folk and therefore free folk" are they who breathe it. Not all the sweets of summer roses steeped in sunshine can lull the homesickness of sea folk long banished from sea smells, and when at last their strong, free gladness again salutes the sense it is as though a barrier falls, and the heart finds home. So with the pine smell to the mountaineer. "Damp, wood smoke, dripping undergrowth and rotting pine cones—that is the true smell of the hills, and if it once gets into the blood of a man he will at last, forgetting everything else, return to the hills to die."

Henry Ward Beecher was amused when he went into a Bowery restaurant on one occasion and heard the waiter give such orders to the cook as "Ham and —," "Sinkers and cow," etc. "Watch me feaze that waiter with an order which, I believe, he won't abbreviate," remarked Dr. Beecher at length as the waiter approached. Then he said, "Give us poached eggs on toast for two, with the yolks broken." But the waiter, who was equal to the emergency, walked to the end of the room and yelled: "Adam and Eve on a raft! Wreck 'em!" It is related that Dr. Beecher nearly fainted.

B. F. Hare, Supt. Miami Cycle & Mfg. Co. Middleton, O., suffered for 10 years with dyspepsia. He spent hundreds of dollars for medicine and with doctors without receiving any permanent benefit. He says, "One night while feeling exceptionally bad I was about to down my paper when I saw an item in the paper regarding the merits of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. After using two bottles I am stronger and better than I have been in years and I recommend Kodol Dyspepsia Cure to my friends and acquaintances suffering from stomach trouble." Sold by C. A. Wright.

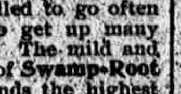
Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.



Home of Swamp-Root.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

Andalusian Specter.

Upon a mountain in Andalusia quaint spectral forms are frequently seen. Whenever there is a heavy mist and persons are ascending the mountain they appear in all their ghostly splendor and sometimes so suddenly as to strike dismay into the hearts of those who see them for the first time.

Of course it is all a trick played by the sun. When a mist partially shrouds the mountain, the sun is naturally obscured, and then he revenges himself by projecting the shadow of any person who is ascending the mountain until it assumes the form of a gigantic specter.

Early.

"You will come home early, won't you?" she said as he was starting for the club.

"Oh, yes; I'll be home early," he replied.

"But [illegible] course, [illegible]," she persisted, "you understand that I mean early tonight, not early tomorrow morning."—Chicago Post.

To Pop.

A Philadelphia contemporary has discovered a joke in a dictionary, no other than the learned and staid Century. It is one of those unconscious bits of humor.

Under the word "question" is the following:

"To pop the question—see pop."

A Little Help.

Teacher—Did you do this problem all by yourself?

Bright Boy—Yes'm.

Teacher—Every bit of it?

Bright Boy—Yes'm—all but the answer.

Wakeful?

There are three different manifestations of sleeplessness.

First, hardly to sleep a wink all night, second, to lie awake a long time before falling asleep; third, to fall asleep soon, waking up after several hours and then find it hard to sleep again.

They mean that somewhere in the nerve fibres, somewhere in the brain cells, somewhere in the blood vessels that carry blood to the brain, something is radically wrong, and must be righted, or the end may be worse than death.

They indicate diseases which may lead to Epilepsy, Fits, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervous Prostration, Paralysis, Insanity.

"My husband had been sick for weeks, could not sit up to have his bed made. With all the medical help we could get he continued to grow worse. He could neither sleep or eat. Our baby girl was sent away, and all callers barred, because he could not stand a bit of talking. I read of a case of nervous prostration cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We began giving it to him, and in a few days he was able to be dressed. From that time he steadily improved. Nervine saved his life."—MRS. A. G. HASKIN, Freeville, N. Y.

FRANKLIN.

Mrs. J. Ruesink is on the sick list.

E. A. Roney and mother of Blmo, have been visiting relatives here.

Mrs. Eva Smith has been in Macon for the past week caring for her sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Burtless spent Sunday with the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, of Jasper.

Roy Hampton, who has been attending Brown's Business University, came home to his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Erskine's, last Friday on account of sickness.

The East Cambridge and West Franklin Farmer's Club was held at the home of W. A. Beebe Saturday, Jan. 9. The officers for the ensuing year were elected and the usual good time enjoyed.

MRS. ANNA J. SKEESE

Was the eldest daughter of Jas. and Elvira Allen. She was born in Allen, Hillsdale county, Mich., April 2, 1873. When but a few weeks old her parents removed to Franklin, where they continued to reside up to the day of their death. Anna was married at Bryan, O., Jan. 1, 1894, to Elmer W. Skeese of Evansport, O. The following spring they returned to Franklin and located on one of the farms of Mr. Shull's, east of Tecumseh. Three children were born to them, Irene, Howard and Isabel, all of whom survive her.

Although she had made profession of her faith before her marriage she did not formally unite with the church until after the birth of her first child. Sometime in 1895 she joined the M. E. church at Tecumseh and when in 1899 they settled in Franklin, they attended the M. E. church at Tipton.

From early womanhood she had premonitions of an early death. Dec. 10, 1903, she passed from earth after a brief illness, of quick consumption.

Beside her children and husband, she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Ara VanTuyle, and a brother, Wilford Allen, her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Warren Litchfield, also two aunts, Mrs. Frank Darling of Tekonsha, and Mrs. Elma Matteson of Litchfield, and an aunt and uncle in Franklin, Miss Chastina and Henry Allen.

The funeral occurred Dec. 13 at the [illegible] Rev. M[illegible] officiating. Guy Belding of Tecumseh, had charge of the funeral arrangements and the interment was in Tipton. The casket [illegible] beautiful flowers.

Anna's was a quiet home loving nature. "Anna is so reliable" was the tribute years ago of one who knew her well. She possessed the rare courage to bear silently the sorrows that are incident to life. Though the little span of her life is ended her brave patient face will remain a sweet memory.

What's in a Name.

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve, E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for Piles. For blind, bleeding, itching and protruding Piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A Clear Course.

The man who is calm has his course in life clearly marked on his chart. His hand is ever on the helm. Storm, fog, night, tempest, danger, hidden reefs—he is ever prepared and ready for them. He is made calm and serene by the realization that in these crises of his voyage he needs a clear mind and a cool head; that he has naught to do but to do each day the best he can by the light he has; that he will never flinch or falter for a moment; that, though he may have to tack and leave his course for a time, he will never drift, he will get back into the true channel, he will keep ever headed toward his harbor. When he will reach it, how he will reach it, matters not to him. He rests in calmness, knowing he has done his best.—William G. Jordan.

LIFE PLANT

Renews Life.

The Very Best TONIC Ever Discovered.

The blood is a great source of health or disease in the human system. If the blood is pure, the individual is strong and healthy; if the blood is impure or diseased then there is sickness and disease in the whole system.

Impure blood causes such diseases as Eczema, and Scrofula. LIFE PLANT effects its wonderful cures by acting through the blood. It is impossible for that blood poison, uric acid, or any other blood impurity to exist in the presence of our harmless medicine. The phenomenal success of LIFE PLANT in the many forms of blood diseases, warrants us in stating that it is a positive cure for Eczema and Scrofula. Read what Mr. M. P. Hobbs says of LIFE PLANT:

Wilmot, O., Jan. 9, 1903.
The Life Plant Co., Canton, Ohio.

Gentlemen:
Two years ago I contracted a very aggravated case of Eczema. I tried many kinds of medicine called sure cures, but all failed. I was persuaded by a friend to give LIFE PLANT a trial, and by taking two bottles was cured. To get the real truth of this statement try LIFE PLANT and be convinced.
Yours truly,
M. P. HOBBS.

COLDEST ON RECORD

GREAT DEAL WHEAT MARKETED

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 14.—The crop report for December, just issued by Secretary of State Warner, shows that the temperature during December for the state was six degrees below normal; it was still colder in the southern counties, being seven degrees below normal. It was the coldest December since the record was begun in 1886. The precipitation was practically normal all over the state. There was no freezing and thawing and correspondents universally agree that no damage was done to wheat. The ground was fairly well covered with snow during the month and thus protected the crop in most counties.

The number of bushels of wheat reported marketed by farmers in December at the flouring mills is 250,406, and at the elevators 146,219, a total of 396,625 bushels. Of this amount 292,946 bushels were marketed in the southern four tiers of counties, 81,727 bushels in the central counties, and 20,952 bushels in the northern counties.

The average condition of live stock in the state is reported as follows, comparison being with stock in good, healthy and thrifty condition: Horses, cattle, sheep and swine, each 96 per [illegible]

Wheat, 80 cents; corn, 47 cents; oats, 35 cents; rye, 51 cents per bu.; hay, per ton, $8 35; fat cattle, $3 41 per cwt.; fat hogs, $4 19 per cwt.; dressed pork, $5 53 per cwt.; horses, per head, under one year old, $33 24; between one and two years old, $52 75; between two and three years old, $78 06; three years old and over, $108 29; milch cows, per head, $34 32; cattle other than milch cows, under one year old, $10 26; between one and two years old, $26 59; three years old and over, $34 21; sheep, under one year old, $2 82; one year old and over, $3 35; hogs, not fatted, $3 78 per cwt.

The prices given are for the state. The prices of farm crops are nearly the same as they were one year ago, except wheat, which is 11 cents per bushel higher. All grades of horses are higher than one year ago. On the other hand, cattle and hogs, both alive and dressed, are worth considerably less than in January, 1903.

The principal increases are on the properties of the Pere Marquette and Michigan Central, the former being raised $11,500,000 and the latter $10,500,000. The Wabash was boosted $1,700,000. The Rapid Railway system received a tremendous raise, from $7,500 to $86,000.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. CASE 113,

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER IV.

"I swear that she was not the cause."

"Then why did you cease suddenly your visits to the house of a young lady whom you confidently expected to marry? You had written to your father to demand her hand for you."

"I had reasons which I cannot reveal," answered Prosper in a trembling voice.

The judge breathed freely. At last he had discovered a vulnerable point in the prisoner's armor.

"Did Mlle. Madeleine dismiss you?"

Prosper was silent. He was visibly agitated.

"Speak," said M. Patrigent. "I warn you that this circumstance is one of the most important in your case."

"Whatever be the cost, I am compelled to keep silence."

"Beware of what you do. Justice will not be satisfied with scruples of conscience."

M. Patrigent waited for an answer. No answer came. Prosper was buried in thought.

"Monsieur," he finally said, "there is one detail I have forgotten to mention. It may be of importance in my defense."

"Explain."

"The messenger I sent to the bank was with me when I put the bills in the safe. At any rate, I left the office before he did."

"Very well. He shall be examined. Now you can return to your cell."

M. Patrigent thus abruptly dismissed Prosper because he wished to immediately act upon this last piece of information.

"Sigault," said he to his secretary as soon as Prosper had left the room, "is not this Antonin the man who was excused from testifying because he sent a doctor's certificate declaring him too ill to appear?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Where does he live?"

"He is not at his home. Fanferlot says he was so ill that he was taken to the hospital—the Dubois hospital."

"[illegible] well. I am going [illegible] examine him today—this very hour. Take writing materials and send for a carriage."

Would Antonin be able to answer? It was doubtful. The director of the hospital said that, although the man suffered horribly from a broken knee, his mind was perfectly clear.

"That being the case, monsieur," said the judge, "I wish to examine him and desire that no one be admitted while he makes his deposition."

"Oh, no one will disturb you, monsieur. His room contains four beds, but they are just now unoccupied."

"Very well. Come on."

When Antonin saw the judge enter, followed by a little lean man with the portfolio of an advocate, he at once knew that they had come to take his deposition.

"Ah," he said, "monsieur comes to see me about M. Bertomy's case?"

"Precisely."

In answer to the usual questions the messenger swore that he was named Antonin Poche, was forty years old, born at Cadaujac (Gironde), and was unmarried.

"Now," said the judge, "are you well enough to clearly answer any questions I may put?"

"Certainly, monsieur."

"Did you on the 27th of February go to the Bank of France for the 350,000 francs that were stolen?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"At what hour did you return?"

"Five o'clock."

"Do you remember what M. Bertomy did when you handed him the money? Now, do not be in a hurry; think before you answer."

"Let me see. First he counted the notes and made four packages of them, which he put in the safe. Then, it seems to me, he locked the safe and—yes, I am not mistaken—he went out."

He uttered these last words so quickly that, forgetting his knee, he half started up, but with a cry of pain.

"Are you sure of what you say?" asked the judge.

M. Patrigent's solemn tone seemed to frighten Antonin.

"Sure?" he replied, with marked hesitation. "I would bet my head on it. Still I am not sure!"

It was impossible for him to be more decided in his deposition. He had been frightened. He already imagined himself in difficulty, and for a trifle he would have retracted everything.

But the effect was already produced, and when they retired M. Patrigent said to Sigault:

"This is very important—very important!"

CHAPTER V.

THE Archangel hotel, Mme. Gipsy's asylum, was the most elegant building on the Quai St. Michel. A person who paid her fortnight's board in advance was treated with consideration at this hotel. Mme. Alexandre, who had been a pretty woman, was now stout, tightly laced, always overdressed and fond of wearing a number of flashy gold chains, falling in cascades over her fat bosom. She had bright eyes and white teeth, but, alas, a red nose. Of all her weaknesses—and heaven knows she had indulged in every variety—only one remained; she loved a good dinner, with plenty of wine. She loved her husband, and about the time M. Patrigent was leaving the hospital she began to be worried that her "little man" had not returned to dinner. She was about to sit down without him when the hotel boy cried out:

"Here is monsieur!"

"Why, how late you are, my little man!" she cried as she dropped her knife and fork and rushed forward to embrace him.

But he received her caresses with an air of abstraction.

"I'm tired," he said. "I have been the whole day playing billiards with Evariste, M. Fauvel's valet, and allowed him to win as often as he wished. I became acquainted with him yesterday, and now I am his best friend. If I wish to enter M. Fauvel's service as a messenger, I can rely upon M. Evariste's good word."

"What, you be an office messenger? You?"

"Of course I would. How else am I to get into M. Fauvel's house for the purpose of studying my characters?"

"Then the valet gave you no news?"

"Nothing that I could make use of, and yet I turned him inside out like a glove. This banker is a remarkable man. Evariste says he has not a single vice, not even a little defect by which his valet could gain 10 sous. He neither smokes, drinks nor plays—in fact, he is a saint. He is worth millions and lives as respectably and quietly as a grocer. He is devoted to his wife, adores his children, is very hospitable, but seldom goes into society."

"Then his wife is young?"

"She must be about fifty."

Mme. Alexandre reflected a moment.

"Did you inquire about the other members of the family?"

"Certainly. The younger son is an officer in the army. The elder son, Lucien, lives with his parents and is as proper as a young lady."

"And this niece of whom you have spoken?"

"Evariste could tell me nothing about her."

Mme. Alexandre shrugged her shoulders.

"If you have discovered nothing, it is because there is nothing to be discovered. Still do you know what I would do if I were in your place?"

"What?"

"I would consult M. Lecoq."

At the mention of this name Fanferlot jumped up as if he had been shot.

"That's pretty advice! Do you want me to lose my place? M. Lecoq does not suspect that I have anything to do with the case except to obey his orders."

"Who told you to let him know you were investigating it on your own account? You can consult him with an air of indifference, as if you were not at all interested, and after you have got his opinion you can take advantage of it."

The detective weighed his wife's words.

"Perhaps you are right," he said. "Yet M. Lecoq is so devilishly shrewd that he might see through it all."

"Shrewd!" echoed Mme. Alexandre. "Shrewd! All of you at the police office say that so often that you have [illegible]."

"Well, I will think the matter over. But in the meantime what does the little one say?"

The "little one" was Mme. Nina Gipsy.

In taking up her abode at the Archangel the poor girl thought she was following good advice, and, as Fanferlot had not shown himself, she was still under the impression that she had obeyed a friend of Prosper. When she received her summons from M. Patrigent, she admired the wonderful skill of the police in discovering her hiding place, for she had established herself at the hotel under a false or, rather, her true name, Palmyre Chocareille. Artfully questioned by her inquisitive landlady, she had without any mistrust confided her history to her. Thus Fanferlot was able to pose before the judge as a skillful detective when he pretended to have discovered all this information from a variety of sources.

"The little one is still up stairs," answered Mme. Alexandre. "She suspects nothing. But to keep her in her present ignorance becomes daily more difficult. I don't know what the judge told her, but she came home very angry. She wanted to go and make a fuss at M. Fauvel's. Then she wrote a letter, which she told Jean to post for her. But I kept it to show you."

"What!" interrupted Fanferlot. "You have a letter and did not tell me before? Perhaps it contains the clew to the mystery. Quick! Give it to me!"

Mme. Alexandre opened a little cupboard and took out a letter, which she handed to her husband.

"Here, take it," she said, "and be satisfied."

Considering that she used to be a chambermaid, Palmyre Chocareille, since become Mme. Gipsy, wrote a good letter. It was addressed in a free, flowing hand: "M. M. L. de Clameran, Forge-Master, Hotel du Louvre. To be handed to M. Raoul de Lagors. (Very important.)"

"Oh, ho!" said Fanferlot, accompanying his explanation with a little whistle, as was his habit when he thought he had made a grand discovery. "Oh, ho!"

"Do you intend to open it?" questioned Mme. Alexandre.

"Yes," said Fanferlot as he dexterously opened the envelope.

Mme. Alexandre leaned over the shoulder of her "little man," and they both read:

> M. Raoul—Prosper is in prison accused of a robbery which I know he never committed. Three days ago I wrote to you on this subject.

"What!" interrupted Fanferlot. "This silly girl wrote and I never saw the letter?"

"But, little man, she must have posted it herself the day she went to the Palais de Justice."

"Very likely," said Fanferlot, satisfied. He continued reading:

> I wrote to you three days ago and have no reply. Who will help Prosper if his best friends desert him? If you don't answer this letter, I shall consider myself released from a certain promise and without scruple will tell Prosper of the conversation I overheard between you and M. de Clameran. But I can count on you, can I not? I shall expect you at the Archangel hotel day after tomorrow between 12 and 4.
> NINA GIPSY.

The letter read, Fanferlot without a word proceeded to copy it.

"Well," said Mme. Alexandre, "what do you say?"

Fanferlot was delicately resealing the copied letter when the door of the hotel office was suddenly opened, and the boy whispered:

"Hist! Hist!"

Fanferlot disappeared with marvelous celerity into a dark closet. He had barely time to close the door before Mme. Gipsy entered.

Alas, the poor girl was sadly changed. She was pale, her cheeks were hollow and her eyes were red with weeping.

"Why, my child, you are not going out?"

"I am obliged to do so, madame, and I came to ask you to tell any one that may call during my absence to wait until I return."

"But where are you going at this hour, sick as you are?"

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—that acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"It has been a long time since we have been without Hood's Sarsaparilla. My father thinks he could not do without it. He has been troubled with rheumatism since he was a boy, and Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine he can take that will enable him to take his place in the field." MISS ADA DOTY, Sidney, Iowa.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and nd are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

Last evening when W. A. Smith who has been visiting in New Lisbon, Wis., for the past three weeks, came in on the 8:16 train, the conductor forgot to arouse him in time to get off at Tecumseh, so he carried him on to Clinton. Mr. Smith is an old man 85 years of age, but not liking the idea of remaining in Clinton over night, he started to walk to Tecumseh, arriving at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Sweet, about two o'clock this morning. This is quite remarkable for one so old.

Croup.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's cough remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. For sale by all druggists.

There are said to be 8,000,000,000,000 yards of coal beneath the earth's crust. In other words there are 7,000,000,000,000 tons of coal yet to be burned. This amount, it is figured, will keep the baseburners going for 3,000 years. These figures show what a cinch the coal dealer has.—Adrian Daily Times.

The service at the M. E. church last night was one of the best yet held. Rev. Sedweek of Tecumseh, preached an excellent sermon and a fine spirit pervaded the entire service. Rev. Sedweek will preach again tonight and there will be some special music. Everybody invited to attend.—Adrian Telegram.

Amusing incidents sometimes occur in everyday life. The ladies of the rummage sale have a number of second hand dress coats among which are a number of the conventional "claw hammers." A man stepped in the other day and wanted to get a coat to wear doing "chores," but the only one that would fit him was a dress coat. "Of course," said the lady saleman anxious to make a sale, "you don't care if it is a 'swallow tail.'" "No," said he, "I don't care if it's a robin's tail."

"Monte Cristo" Tonight.

The Hunt Stock Company supporting Miss Kittie Fitzgibbon, has to its credit the fact of having held the interested attention of good audiences for a solid week, something that not every company can do.

"Monte Cristo" new scenery especially adapted to the thrilling scenes of the play was introduced with splendid effect. The ocean and storm scene with rolling waves and the lightning's lurid flashes was strikingly real. Elegant new costumes of silk were worn, adapted to the time and place of the play.

Miss Kittie Fitzgibbon has developed remarkable powers of adaption to her various characters in all the plays. As "Nanette" in "The Woman from Martinique," she was strong, as also in her character of "Cigarette"—"Under Two Flags," a finely costumed piece, by the way.

RADIUM

At the home of A. D. Lawrence last evening

P. W. A. FITZSIMMONS

Gave an interesting talk on Radium. Viewed by means of a spinthariscope.

A goodly number of people interested in radium gathered at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lawrence last evening. After a finely executed piano solo by Miss Helen Anderson, Mr. Fitzsimmons kindly told what the scientists have discovered about radium. He said there was but little known to the scientific world and so little of the element in existence a lady's thimble would hold it all, great expense prohibited it being in use.

It is claimed that the correct use of it will prolong life as it will cure lupus, cancer and other diseases of the skin. It is also claimed that it will restore sight to the blind.

Each and every one gladly availed themselves of the opportunity to see the minute particle of the metal of which Mr. Fitzsimmons is the fortunate possessor, having in his posession the one twelve hundreth of a grain, which is so small that it could not be seen by the naked eye but is viewed with a microscope manufactured in London for the purpose and called a spin tharisoope.

Miss Mills then gave a piano solo and won the admiration of all by her keen interpretation of the great masters. Mrs. Bailey gave a recitation and responded twice to repeated encores. A song by Miss McKenna was finely rendered after which Miss Mingay recited in her usual charming manner and kindly responded to encore. Miss Helen Anderson varied the musical part of the program in a pleasing manner with a whistling solo.

Refreshments were served in the dining room and the guests departed hoping the King's Daughters would soon favor us with another instructive as well as entertaining evening.

George W. Jackson.

George W. Jackson was born in Macon, Mich., Sept. 29, 1840 and died Jan. 9, in the sixty fourth year of his age. His sudden death was a shock to his family and friends, though they had for some time noted signs of his failing health. The immediate cause of death was heart failure.

Mr. Jackson spent his early years in Macon. In 1861 he removed to Ridgeway were he remained until 1885. He then went to Hillsdale, remaining only a year and a half. He settled in Tecumseh in 1886, where he has since resided and carried on his business.

ARRESTED

Last evening Deputy Sheriff Brown arrested

CLARENCE BROOKS

Last evening Deputy Sheriff Brown arrested Clarence Brooks in Clinton, on the charge of assault with intent to do bodily harm, less than murder. Wednesday night Brooks attended a dance given at the home of Jack Dennis, two miles north of Clinton. He was intoxicated and about one o'clock Thursday started a rough house. After knocking down an old man nearly 70 years old, he attacked Henry Nixon and the two had a great battle. Brooks became so mad that he put his teeth into Nixon's face and bit out the whole cheek, and spat it out on the floor. Dr. Tuttle of Clinton, was called and took twenty stitches in the wound, but was unable to close a place the size of a dollar.

Brooks is an ex-convict, having been paroled by Gov. Pingree from a fifteen year sentence. Mr. Brown went to Clinton last night, and after arresting him started back to Tecumseh. When nearly home his driver started to go by a load of young people, who frightened the horses, and the result was that Mr. Brown, driver and prisoner were thrown into the snow. No damage was done however, and they succeeded in reaching Tecumseh without any more trouble.

"Burning of the Iroquois."

By C. A. Dibble, Tipton, Mich.

'Twas on December the thirtieth,
On a cold and blustery day;
The huge oak bough of the forest
By the powerful wind would sway,
When the young folks in the country
Were enjoying laughter and noise
That the lives of o'er six hundred
Perished in the great Iroquois.
'Tis sad, heart-rendering and painful,
When we stop to think of the cost,
Which is nothing when compared with
The many brave lives that were lost.
'Twas but little thought the mother,
As she kissed her children good-bye
She was saying goo[illegible]
And sending [illegible]e.
It's a scene long to remember,
The picture on the mind will last
When we think of the human souls
O'er come by the smoke and gas.
The glad New Years bells are sounding
Across mountain, plain and rest,
While the city of Chicago
Is silent, and o'er come with grief.
Just think the grief of a father,
Who along with its mother and sister
Were trapped in the horrible cage.
Or a wife passing through the morgue
In a frenzy and almost wild,
As she comes to a pile of charred flesh
And recognizes her child.
Or a husband sad and anxious
As he looks in vain for his wife
Who trying to save her dear child
Had given her innocent life.
Then to the minds of the people
Must come the great horrible thought
For what great aim and good purpose
Was this terrible holocaust wrought.
'Tis true we learn by experience
A lesson perhaps it will be
To start the year of 1904
From the closing of 1903.
Dear was the lesson to those with in,
And dear to many out side
Who were caught in the sea of grief
And carried away with the tide.
The old year closes with sadness
As she steps out into the new,
It makes the New Year that's coming
Look gloomy, clouded and blue.
No bells will welcome the New Year in
The city of Chicago tonight,
All that is heard is muffled drums
All caused by a calcium light.

Saved from terrible death.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

CARROLL ROBERTS

Has been declared a sane man by

JUDGE H. L. LARWILL

In the Probate Court in Adrian

Tuesday afternoon in the probate court, Judge H. L. Larwill issued an order reinstating Carroll Roberts as a man of sound mind. Roberts is the 68-year-old man who escaped from Kalamazoo asylum on the 18th of last September and walked to the home of relatives in La Porte, Ind., where he has since been living. He has spent thirteen years in Kalamazoo and Dearborn together, though he stated to the Free Press this afternoon that he is no more sane than he has always been. He was subjected to a rigid examination by the court in an effort to confuse him in regard to dates, but the testimony of Mr. Roberts could not be shaken.

Mr. Roberts is certainly as sound as any person could be at the present time and declares he is no different than he has always been. While in Kalamazoo his father and daughter both died, but he was not informed of it and knew nothing of their deaths until told by the relatives upon reaching LaPorte, Ind. When testifying Mr. Roberts stated that he knew of the attachment existing between the younger brother, Brant Roberts, and his father, but said he never had any quarrels with his brother over the matter of the estate for the reason that he did not expect his father would do anything for him. He had a nice little farm of his own when he was sent to Kalamazoo, but his son, Lavern, who was appointed guardian, managed to get away with most of that. Attorney Ellsworth E. Weir, with whom Mr. Roberts has been living in LaPorte, says that they do not intend to make trouble for anybody if they can help it, but they intend to secure Mr. Robert's share of his father's estate. The estate has been involved in the courts for some time, one case being in the supreme court and the other in the circuit.—Detroit Free Press.

HOW HYOMEI HELPS THE HEALTH

[illegible] of grip, catarrh and colds. "Costs nothing if it fails." says C. A. Wright.

Now that Hyomei can be obtained in nearly every town and city in the country, it is possible to buy from druggists a health giving climate, to be carried in the purse or pocket. By breathing it a few minutes four times a day you can soon cure grip, coughs, colds and even the worst and most chronic cases of catarrh.

C. A. Wright has seen so many remarkable cures made by the Hyomei treatment, that he sells it with the positive agreement to return the money if it fails to cure.

A complete outfit costs but $1, and consists of the pocket inhaler, medicine dropper and sufficient Hyomei to last several weeks.

It effects a cure in the worst catarrhal troubles and if breathed at the commencement of a cold or the grip, will check it quickly and prevent sickness. Extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

When breathed through the inhaler, the germ-killing and health-giving Hyomei goes to the most remote cells of the throat and lungs, killing all the catarrhal germs, soothing the irritated mucous membrane and vitalizing the blood with ozone.

At this season of the year, every one should have a Hyomei outfit to prevent and cure catarrhal troubles, and ward off attacks of grip, pneumonia and similar germ diseases.

ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR.

Home endorsement, the public expression of Tecumseh people, should be evidence beyond dispute for every Tecumseh reader. Surely the experience of friends and neighbors, cheerfully given by them, will carry more weight than the utterances of strangers residing in far-away places. Read the following:

Mr. S. Erskine, proprietor of the well known barber shop, says: "For ten years off and on I had a dull pain in my back, imperfect action of the kidneys, and often I could hardly stoop or get up again. I think it was caused by standing so much at my work. Be that as it may I was in bad shape. I used a great many medicines, but without receiving much benefit until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. I must confess that I was agreeably surprised, for after using one box I was much relieved. After the use of two boxes my back is stronger and better than it has been for a long time. Doan's Kidney Pills are the best medicine I have ever used and I have such faith in them I believe I will be conferring a kindness on those suffering from kidney trouble in making known their merits."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

GRIT IN THE BEARINGS

How Rheumatism Affects the Human Mechanism.

Grit in the bearings—every engineer knows how important it is to guard against this trouble—to get rid of it, if it comes; so too every one who has to do with machinery of any kind.

The human body is a more marvelous piece of mechanism than any made by hand. Nature does a deal to keep the body in good repair—in good running order. But people make mistakes—some through carelessness, some through ignorance. Nature sometimes needs help.

Uric acid causes Rheumatism—deposited in the muscles and joints, it acts like grit in the bearings—hinders their action, makes pain and trouble. Every sufferer knows how much.

Athlophoros dissolves the Uric acid—aids the body to get rid of it—helps to the restoration of health and strength. It does this with certainty—proven by the experience of many years.

Exchange comfort for pain. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 for a bottle to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. It will show you how to rid your bearings of the grit.

Frank Green is getting a great reputation as a man, who can withstand temptation. On Wednesday he found a pocketbook in the Comstock House, which looked fat and well filled. He passed it over to the clerk, who restored it to the traveling insurance man who had lost it. The clerk told a lady that it contained $1,000, and the lady thinking the story true, told a few friends, and before night the talk of the city was how Frank Green had found $1,000 and had returned it to the owner. Thus doth gossip make or break a man's reputation.—Hudson Post.

It is disgusting to hear people speak scornfully of girls who have to work for a living. No sensible man is dazzled by the glitter of a jeweled hand, a gold bracelet or a watch, all of which may, perhaps, have been bought on time. All this has not so much facination as a pleasant disposition, a happy, intelligent face, a well-cooked meal and a clean, neat home. A rosy-cheeked face in the kitchen is worth a dozen operatic singers in the parlor, pawing a piano and screaming, "A Flower from My Angel Mother's Grave," when very likely the poor old mother is hanging out clothes in the back yard. It is all right to know how to appear as a cultivated, refined and entertaining lady, but to know how to be a good housekeeper, even if the work only has to be superintended, is far better than superficial airs.—Blissfield Advance.

DID NOT INSPECT THE BUILDING

Chicago, Jan. 16.—The coroner's inquest over the victims of the Iroquois theater fire Friday was given over to witnesses from the fire department. Chief Musham and several of his highest ranking assistants were the witnesses.

Chief Musham declared that in his opinion it was the duty of the building commissioner to report to him if the fire protection in the theater was inadequate. No report had ever been made to him and he had taken no action in the matter.

It had never been the custom of the fire department to inspect theaters or public buildings for fire protection unless a report had been made from the office of the building commissioner. Building Commissioner Williams previously had testified that it was not the business of his office to report on fire protection, but that it was a matter entirely belonging to the fire department.

Chief Musham was greatly moved and his voice broke as he answered questions, implying that many lives might have been saved if he had inspected the theater to see if it were properly protected against fire.

John Campion, first assistant fire marshal of Chicago, was on the stand in the afternoon and testified that two weeks before the opening of the Iroquois theater he stepped into the building to examine things. He was not on duty at the time and went in of his own accord. He cautioned Fireman Sellers of the Iroquois theater and Sellers replied to him that the company was going to put in all the appliances necessary.

DEFENSE SCORED POINT.

No Evidence to Show Conspiracy In Postoffice Cases.

Washington, Jan. [illegible]—In the trial Friday of August [illegible] Machen, the Groff brothers and Dr. and Mrs. Lorens, charged with conspiracy to defraud the government, the defense scored an important point with respect to the character of evidence to be introduced at this time by the government. The defense insisted that the government had not brought forth any documentary evidence showing the existence of a conspiracy to defraud the government and that which was being offered naturally should follow the evidence of conspiracy so as to specifically connect the defendants with the various transactions which had been referred to. The court sustained the point.

At one point in the trial Dr. Douglas, for the defense, called on Justice Pritchard to reprimand First Assistant Postmaster-General Wynne for volunteering the statement that a former employe of the postoffice department recently had been sentenced in Baltimore to a term of two years in the penitentiary. The suggestion was not complied with, but the justice instructed the jury that their minds must not be prejudiced by the statement of Mr. Wynne.

Perry S. Heath, former first assistant postmaster-general, who was subpenaed from his home in Salt Lake City to state what he knew about the administration of his office, was on the stand during the day.

Wife Died of Grief.

Durand, Mich., Jan. 18.—One of the saddest deaths ever known here occurred last night. Saturday the funeral of James Richardson, who was killed Thursday at the coal docks, was held. The shock of his sudden death so wrought upon his wife, who was an invalid, that she rapidly grew worse and died in spite of all that could be done for her.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Constable Williams of Palmyra made a raid on the slot machines of Morenci. He visited three saloons, securing a machine at each place. He loaded them into his sleigh and drove to Adrian.

Eddie Lieshburg, 6 years old, of Bay City, had an involuntary ride to Breckenridge, Gratiot county, on the railroad. The boy mounted a Pere Marquette train in order to take a ride, and once on was unable to get off.

J. P. Madison, a noted "Ike Walton" of Wixom, caught a 15-pound pike from the Huron river. The fish was nearly as long as a man and was taken to Detroit for exhibition by Mr. Madison's brother-in-law, William A. Hall.

A Niles gang of Big Four section men were summoned to Fairland, five miles north, Saturday afternoon to dig out a passenger train and a freight which were stalled and literally buried in a deep cut during the big snow storm.

Charles McCarty, a former well-known resident of Saginaw, was found dead in the Columbian hotel at Spokane, Wash. He had gone there from Sand Point, Idaho, four weeks ago. He was engaged in lumbering and had many friends in Saginaw.

Ross Jury, aged 25, is in jail at Flint, with the prospect of a prison sentence staring him in the face. He was taken into custody on the charge of stealing $65 from John J. McCarthy, a Flint township farmer, with whom he had made the rounds of the saloons during in afternoon.

RECONCILED TO WAR

Japan Patriotically United and Means to Stop Russian Aggression.

EXPECT SYMPATHY OF WORLD

Many Offers of War Contributions—Look to England and United States to Preserve Balance of Power In Case of National Disaster.

Tokio, Jan. 18.—Japan does not anticipate Russia's rejoinder for at least one week. In the meantime the nation is prepared and grimly reconciled to war. Political and other distinctions have disappeared and the country is patriotically united. The government is receiving many offers of contributions in the event of war, amounting to many millions of yen.

The Japanese people would welcome an honorable peace, but are resolved to fight before receding from their position in oriental affairs. They fear the aggression of Russia and believe if it is not stopped now it will never be stopped. They are confident that their demands are fair and moderate and that their diplomacy, which has been patient, has gone to a reasonable limit. They expect the world's sympathy in the struggle and have a splendid confidence in their army and navy.

In the event of reverses or a national disaster it is thought that England and the United States would intervene to preserve a balance of power in eastern Asia. There is no fear of an invasion of Japan, a country which is probably the most strongly defended in the world.

The activity of the United States in the opening of the ports of Mukden and Antung is keenly watched, and in some quarters it is hoped, that this may aid in solving the problem of insuring peace.

The Associated Press correspondent is [illegible] informed that Japan has received a Russian communication, saying that Russia will respect the rights and privileges already acquired by the powers in Manchuria under existing treaties with China excepting the establishment of foreign settlements and in so far as these rights and privileges are not prejudial to Russia's future relations with Manchuria. These reservations are regarded as nullifying the value of the assurance.

GUARDS REINFORCED.

About French and American Legations at Seoul.

Seoul, Jan. 18.—Thirty-nine marines from the French cruiser Pascal have arrived here from Chemulpo to protect the French legation.

Washington, Jan. 18.—The navy department has received advices confirmatory of the Associated Press dispatches telling of the reinforcement of the American guard at the United States legation at Seoul. Two officers and sixty-four men were sent there from the U. S. S. Vicksburg, now at Chemulpo. They carried a machine gun with them. There are now a hundred or more men from the Vicksburg at Seoul guarding the legation. The dispatches received at the navy department show the native press to be somewhat inflammatory in its utterances against foreigners.

Bryan's "Dollar Dinner."

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—Five hundred tickets have been issued for the "dollar dinner" to be given tonight in honor of W. J. Bryan. The speakers comprise many of the leading Democrats of the state. The subject of Mr. Bryan's address has not been announced. Mr. Bryan's present stay in Lincoln is to be short. Tuesday he will leave for New York city.

Will That Is Forty Years Old.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Jan. 18.—Having been drawn up and signed nearly forty years ago, the will of Andrew R. Bretzel, said to be the oldest will ever filed for probate in Kalamazoo county, was admitted to probate by Judge White Saturday afternoon. The will was made Feb. 22, 1869, in this city by Attorney J. D. Burns and witnessed by Mr. Burns and his brother Robert. No change has ever been made in the will since then, nor a codicil added.

Weds a Millionaire.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 18.—The marriage of Miss Daisy Derby of this city to S. Cobb Coleman, a millionaire club man of Chicago, which took place Saturday at the residence of the bride's parents in this city, was a very quiet and unostentatious affair. About fifty guests were present, including Mr. and Mrs. Joseph J. Coleman, the father and mother of the groom.

Prisoner Went Insane.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 18.—George W. Parker, the alleged murderer of James Moore and who is said to have lost his reason, was moved from the county jail to Emergency hospital, where he was placed in the ward for insane patients. Deputies Dickson and Strang went with him and a constant guard will be kept at his bedside.

Shy Nearly $4,000.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 18.—Officers of the Aetna Insurance Co. have admitted that Frederick L. Tyler, the cashier, who disappeared from his home recently, was short in his accounts $3,947. His arrest will probably follow if he can be found.

Death Claims Two Victims.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 18.—Death has laid claim to two of the victims of Friday's grade crossing wreck at the corner of Gratiot avenue and Dequindre street, Miss Ethel E. Gould, of 258 Mitchell avenue, who passed away in St. Mary's hospital, and Frederick Opificius of 379 Mack avenue, who succumbed at Harper hospital. Of the remaining nine or ten people in a serious condition, only one or two are thought to be in a dangerous state, and the attending physicians have good hope that there will be no further fatalities.

ONE BILL EACH WEEK

Is Record House Desires to Establish With Appropriations.

PANAMA QUESTION ON DOCKET

Greater Share of Another Week In Senate May Be Devoted to It—Hepburn Pure Food Bill to Be Called Up.

Washington, Jan. 18.—It is the intention of the senate to begin the week by again taking up the resolutions having in view an inquiry into the conduct of the postoffice department, and it is the general understanding that they will be referred to the committee on postoffices after comparatively brief debate. Senator Hale, who has general charge of the resolutions, will make a brief statement concerning them and probably will be followed by Senator Gorman. It is expected that Senator Spooner will add to his previous remarks on this subject, but his statement may be postponed until later in the session.

It is the hope of the Republican senators that the postoffice matter may be temporarily disposed of befor the close of today's session, and in this event discussion of the Panama canal subject will be continued Tuesday and probably during the remainder of the week.

An appropriation bill a week will be the record attempted by the house until the supply measures are out of the way. The urgent deficiency measure will come from committee about the middle of the week and will be disposed of without delay. The army bill also will be ready for action by the house before the end of the week.

The house has set apart today for the consideration of matters relating to the District of Columbia and Friday for the passage of private pension bills. It is not unlikely that the Hepburn pure food bill will be called up Tuesday.

OPPOSES THE CANAL.

Senator Bailey Attacks Administration For Its Actions.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 18.—In a signed statement wired the Post last night, United States Senator J. W. Bailey says that he will "retire from public life before dishonoring my state and party" by voting for the ratification of the Panama treaty. In his statement Senator Bailey asserts that the president's personal influence was used to secure favorable action toward the Panama route as opposed to the Nicaraguan; that when the Colombian senate refused to ratify the treaty submitted by the United States it was the president's duty to take the alternative, "but in absolute and reckless disregard of the imperative command of the law which he had himself approved, the president refused to negotiate with Nicaragua and Costa Rica."

"I can understand," he says, "how many people, in their anxiety for a canal, might condone such a course and excuse the spoliation (of Colombia) on the ground that it was demanded by the progress and civilization of the world. This is precisely the same argument with which kings and conquerors have always justified their wars of plunder and aggression."

Big Blaze In Wheeling.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 18.—In one of the most disastrous fires ever experienced in this city, an entire block in the heart of the city's business district was last night, within the space of one hour, reduced to ruins, entailing a loss of nearly $250,000. The fire originated in the boiler rooms of the Wheeling Daily News and spread rapidly, entirely consuming the newspaper plant.

Father of British Navy.

London, Jan. 18.—The Hon. Sir Henry Keppel, admiral of the fleet, is dead. Admiral of the Fleet Sir Henry Keppel was the "father" of the British navy. He was born in 1809 and retired from active service in 1879, but only formally retired in 1899, after seventy-eight years' of service, in the course of which he won distinction in China in 1841-2, and in the Baltic and at Sebastopol in the Crimean war. His son was in command of the Nile flotilla in the last expedition to Khartoum. The admiral was a great favorite of the king and queen, and was a well-known yachting figure at Cowes.

Taft Leaves Honolulu.

Honolulu, Jan. 18.—Former Governor Taft left here today on the steamer Korea for San Francisco. He expects to reach that city on Saturday night. His present intention is to take an army tug from the Korea to the Oakland mole, so as to catch the morning train for Washington, where he will assume his new duties as secretary of war.

STRUCK CROWDED CAR

Train Dashed Into Street Car and Thirty-six People Hurt

ON A DETROIT GRADE CROSSING

Some of Victims Will Die—Gate of Crossing Was Not Down—Conductor Signalled Motorman to Cross After Inspecting Track.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 16.—Thirty-six people injured, some of them probably fatally, is the result of a collision between a Detroit United Railway street car and a Grand Trunk passenger train at the Gratiot avenue crossing early last evening.

The responsibility for the accident has not been fully decided, but the fact that many of the sixty-four passengers of the car were not killed is undoubtedly due to the good fortune that the train was running at a low rate of speed.

At 6:20 p. m. last night in-bound Grand Trunk passenger train No. 9, drawn by engine No. 1074, in charge of Conductor L. Moir, with Engineer Henry T. Schneider at the throttle, crashed into D. U. R. car No. 1060, bound east, at the intersection of the Grand Trunk tracks at Gratiot avenue. On board the car were sixty-four passengers, as the register showed.

At this point there are three tracks On the center track was the in-bound passenger train. At the time of the accident it was due at the Gratiot avenue station. The street car was also due at this point at almost the same moment. All those seen were positive in their statement that the west gate was raised. The street car came to a stop, the conductor jumped out of the front door and ran out ahead. One glance told him that he would have to hustle the car or be struck. He frantically waved his arm and told the motorman to come on. The motorman turned on the power, but before he had crossed the danger point the engine had crashed into the street car just ahead of the rear trucks, plunging half way through the vehicle.

Fully fifty feet the car with its shrieking and frightened mass of humanity was carried, almost to the very steps of the little depot.

The sixty-four passengers were tumbled into one struggling, wounded mass. A hundred willing hands began to pull them out. As fast as the wounded were removed they were taken to nearby stores, and the more seriously injured were at once transferred to the hospitals.

An immense crowd gathered at once, as the news of the accident spread throughout the city. At least 5,000 people pressed and surged about the scene, requiring the efforts of 100 policemen to keep them back, that the work of rescue might go on unhindered.

Old Gateman Cried.

The most pathetic figure of all was the old gateman of the Grand Trunk, A. L. Butler, 131 Chestnut street, who stood, lantern in hand, with big tears streaming down his cheeks.

He said: "I knew the train was coming. I yelled at the conductor, but he didn't seem to hear me. I turned the crank to lower the western gate, but the car had stopped right under it and the gate would not close. I then quickly lowered the eastern gate, so no cars could come from that direction. I waved my lantern and yelled, but the car came on."

Engineer Schneider maintains that the gates were up. Motorman Haug of the electric car maintains he was acting under orders from the conductor. Conductor Cowan could not be found.

The most seriously injured are:

F. R. Rudd, aged 53; lacerated eye and cheek; contused left leg and hip; will recover.

John Beck, aged 30; badly bruised; later was removed to his home.

Henry Opificius, sixth and seventh ribs broken, internally injured, but will recover.

Make Housekeeping a Profession.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 16.—A school for domestic training, under the auspices of the Young Women's Christian association, will be opened in this city Jan. 21. The school will be modeled after the celebrated training school in Boston, and its aim will be to elevate housework to the dignity of a profession.

Brakeman Seriously Hurt.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 16.—Fletcher Brown, a Michigan Central brakeman whose home is here, was seriously injured near Grayling early Friday morning. He was on top of the last freight car in his train and fell between that car and the way car, the latter running over one foot, besides injuring him internally. He may die.

Socialist State Convention.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 16.—The state convention of the Socialist party will be held in this city Feb. 26. At the first session the convention will consider the constitution, propaganda, and choose headquarters for the party as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Beware of ointments for catarrh that contains mercury

A very close call.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright. Price 50 cents.

Dislocated her shoulder.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's pain balm advertised for sprains and soreness and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. Brigham Young was merely the man who had the opportunity.

The many friends of G. H. Hausan, Engineer L. E. & W. R. R., at present living in Lima, O., will be pleased to know of his recovery from threatened kidney disease. He writes: "I was cured by using Foley's Kidney Cure, which I recommend to all especially trainmen, who are usually similarly afflicted." For sale by all druggists.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER V.

Mme. Gipsy hesitated a moment.

"Oh," she said, "you are so good to me that I am tempted to confide in you. Read this note, which a messenger just now brought to me."

"What!" cried Mme. Alexandre, perfectly aghast. "A messenger come here and go up to your room?"

"Is there anything surprising in that?"

"Oh, no."

And in a tone loud enough to be heard in the closet she read the note:

A friend of Prosper, who can neither receive you nor present himself at your house, needs to speak to you. Be in the stage office opposite the St. Jacques tower tonight at 9 precisely, and the writer will approach and tell you what he has to say to you. I have appointed this public place for the rendezvous so as to relieve you of all fear.

"And you are going to this rendezvous?" cried Mme. Alexandre.

"Certainly."

"But it is imprudent, foolish. It is a snare to trap you."

"It makes no difference," interrupted Gipsy. "I am so unfortunate already that I have nothing more to dread. Any change would be a relief."

And, without waiting to hear any more, she set out. She was not in the street before Fanferlot bounced out of the closet.

"A thousand thunders!" he cried. "Are people to walk over the Archangel as if it were a public street? Was ever such impudence heard of?" he continued. "A messenger comes into my house and goes up stairs without being seen by anybody! And the idea of you, a sensible woman, being idiotic enough to dissuade that little viper from keeping the appointment!"

"But, my dear"—

"Did you not suppose that I would follow her and discover what she is attempting to conceal? Come, make haste and help me, so that she won't recognize me."

In a few minutes Fanferlot was completely disguised by a thick beard, a wig and one of those long linen blouses worn by men who go about seeking work and at the same time hoping they may not find it.

"Have you your handcuffs?" asked the solicitous Mme. Alexandre when he was ready.

"Yes, yes. Make haste and post that letter to M. de Clameran and keep good watch."

Mme. Gipsy had ten minutes' start of him, but he ran up the street he knew she must have taken and overtook her near the Change bridge. On Chatelet place she strolled up and down several times, read the theater bills and finally took a seat on a bench and at a quarter of 9 entered the omnibus office and sat down. A moment after Fanferlot entered; but, as he feared that Mme. Gipsy might recognize him in spite of his heavy beard, he took a seat at the opposite end of the room, where it was dark.

As the Hotel de Ville clock struck 9 a man entered, walked directly up to Gipsy, bowed and took a seat beside her. He was a medium sized man, rather stout, with a crimson face and fiery red whiskers. His dress was that of a well to do merchant. There was nothing in his appearance to excite attention. Fanferlot watched him eagerly.

"My friend," he said to himself, "in future I shall recognize you no matter where we meet, and this very evening I will follow you and find out who you are."

Despite his intent listening he could not hear a word spoken by the stranger or Gipsy. All he could do was to judge by their actions and countenances what was the subject of their conversation. When the stout man bowed and spoke to her, the girl looked so surprised that it was evident she had never seen him before. When he sat down by her and spoke to her, she jumped up with a frightened look, as if seeking to escape. A single look caused her to resume her seat. Then as the stout man went on talking Gipsy displayed great apprehension. She positively refused to do something; then suddenly she seemed to consent. At one moment she appeared ready to weep and the next her pretty face was illumined by a bright smile. Finally she shook hands with him, as if she was confirming a promise.

"What can all that mean?" said Fanferlot to himself as he sat in his dark corner, biting his nails. "What an idiot I am to have placed myself so far off!"

He was thinking how he could manage to approach nearer without arousing their suspicions when the fat man got up, offered his arm to Mme. Gipsy, who accepted it without hesitation, and together they walked toward the door. They were so preoccupied with one another that Fanferlot thought he could follow them without risk. Reaching the door, he saw the stout man and Gipsy cross the pavement, approach a hackney coach, sent for from the omnibus office, and enter it.

"Very good," muttered Fanferlot. "I've got them now. There is no use of hurrying any more."

When the coach started, he followed at a brisk trot. The cab went up the Boulevard Sebastopol. It went pretty fast. But it was not for nothing that Fanferlot had won the name of Squirrel. With his elbows glued to his sides, he ran on. By the time he had reached the Boulevard St. Denis he began to get breathless and stiff from a pain in his side, then the cab abruptly turned into the Faubourg St. Martin. But Fanferlot, who at eight years of age had been familiar with every street in Paris, was not to be baffled. He was a man of resources. He seized the springs of the coach, raised himself up by the strength of his wrists and hung on behind, with his legs resting on the axletree of the rear wheels. He was certainly not comfortable, but, then, he no longer ran the risk of being distanced.

"Now," he said behind his false beard, "drive on."

The man whipped up his horses and drove rapidly along the hilly street of the Faubourg St. Martin. Finally at the old "barrier" the cab stopped in front of a winestore, and the driver jumped down from his seat and went in. The detective also left his uncomfortable post and, crouching in a doorway, waited for Gipsy and the stout man to get out, ready to follow them. Five minutes passed and they had not alighted.

"What can they be doing all this time?" grumbled the detective.

Stealthily approaching the cab, he peeped in.

Oh, cruel deception—it was empty!

"Tricked!" he said. "Fooled! Ah, but I'll make them pay for this!"

In a moment his quick mind had run over the gamut of possibilities, probable and improbable.

"Evidently," he muttered, "this man and Gipsy entered one door and got out of the other. If so, it was because they feared being followed. If they feared being followed, they have uneasy consciences; therefore"—

He suddenly interrupted his soliloquy as the idea struck him that he had better attempt to find out something from the driver. Unfortunately the driver was in a very surly mood and not only refused to answer, but shook his whip in so threatening a manner that Fanferlot deemed it prudent to beat a retreat.

"Perhaps," he muttered, "he and the driver are one and the same!"

But what could he do now at this late hour? He could not imagine. He walked dejectedly back to the Quai St. Michel, and it was half past 11 when he reached his own door.

"Has the little one returned?" he inquired of Mme. Alexandre the instant she opened the door for him.

"No, but here are two large bundles which have come for her."

Fanferlot hastily opened the bundles. They contained three calico dresses, some coarse shoes and some linen caps.

The detective could not repress a cry. "Well," said he, "now she is going to disguise herself. Upon my word, I am getting puzzled!"

When Fanferlot was sulkily walking down the Faubourg St. Martin, he had fully made up his mind that he would not tell his wife of his discomfiture, but once at home, confronted [illegible] new fact of a nature to negative all his conjectures, his vanity disappeared. He confessed everything—his hopes so nearly realized, his strange mischance and his suspicions. They talked the matter over and finally decided that they would not go to bed before the return of Mme. Gipsy, from whom Mme. Alexandre was determined to obtain an explanation of what had happened. But would she return? At 1 o'clock the worthy couple were about giving up all hope of her reappearance when they heard the bell ring. At the sound of the bell Fanferlot slipped into the closet, and Mme. Alexandre remained in the office to receive Gipsy.

"Here you are, my dear child!" she cried. "Ah, I have been so uneasy about you!"

"Thanks for your kind interest, madame. Has anything come for me?"

Poor Gipsy's appearance had strikingly changed. She was very sad, but not, as before, dejected. To her melancholy of the last few days had succeeded a firm and generous resolution, which was betrayed in her sparkling eyes.

"Yes, two bundles came for you. Here they are. I suppose you saw M. Bertomy's friend?"

"Yes, madame, and his advice has so changed my plans that, I regret to say, I must leave you tomorrow."

"Tomorrow! Then something must have happened."

"Oh, nothing that would interest you, madame."

After lighting her candle at the gas burner Mme. Gipsy said "Good night" in a very knowing way.

"What do you think of that, Mme. Alexandre?" asked Fanferlot, emerging from his closet.

"It is incredible! This girl writes to M. de Clameran to met her here and then does not wait for him."

"Evidently she mistrusts us. She knows who I am."

"This friend of the cashier must have told her."

"Who knows? I shall end by believing that I am among a gang of thieves. They think I am on their track and are trying to escape me. I should not be at all surprised if this girl has the money herself and intends to run off with it tomorrow."

"That is not my opinion. But listen to me. You had better take my advice and consult M. Lecoq."

Fanferlot paused to think.

"Very well, I will see him, just for your satisfaction; because I know that if I have discovered nothing neither has he. But if he undertakes to be domineering I will make him know his place."

Nevertheless the detective passed an uneasy night, and at 6 o'clock the next morning he was up—it was necessary to rise very early if he wished to catch M. Lecoq at home—and, having refreshed himself by a cup of coffee, he directed his steps toward the dwelling of the celebrated detective.

CHAPTER VI.

BUT by the time Fanferlot reached Montmartre street, where M. Lecoq lived, his courage had vanished. He pulled his hat over his eyes and hung his head, as if looking for relief among the paving stones. He slowly ascended the steps, pausing several times, at last reaching the third floor, and stood before a door decorated with the arms of the famous detective—a cock, the symbol of vigilance—and his heart failed him so that he had scarcely the courage to ring the bell. Janouille, M. Lecoq's old servant, opened the door.

"Ah," she said, "you come in time for once in your life. Your patron awaits you."

Upon this announcement Fanferlot was seized with a violent desire to beat a retreat. By what chance could Lecoq want anything of him? While he thus hesitated Janouille seized him by the arm and pulled him in, saying:

"Do you want to take root there? Come along. Your patron is waiting for you."

In the middle of a large room curiously furnished, half library and half greenroom, was seated at a desk the same person with gold spectacles who had said to Prosper at the police office, "Courage." This was M. Lecoq in his official character.

Upon Fanferlot's entrance as he advanced respectfully, bowing, M. Lecoq laid down his pen and said, looking sharply at him:

"Ah, here you are, my man. Well, it seems you haven't made much progress in the Bertomy case."

"Why," murmured Fanferlot, "you know"—

"I know that you have mixed everything until you can't see your way out, so that you are ready to give up."

"But it was not I"—

M. Lecoq arose and walked up and down the room. Suddenly he confronted Fanferlot.

"What would you think, Master Squirrel," he said ironically, "of a man who abuses the confidence of those who employ him, who reveals just enough to lead the prosecution on the wrong scent, who sacrifices to his own foolish vanity the cause of justice and the liberty of an unfortunate man?"

Fanferlot recoiled a step.

"I should say," he stammered—"I should say"—

"You think, Mr. Squirrel, that this man ought to be punished and dismissed from his employment, and you are right. The less a profession is honored, the more honorable should those be who belong to it. Nevertheless, you have been false to yours. Ah, Mr. Squirrel, we are ambitious, and we try to make the police force serve us. We let justice go her way and we go ours."

"But I swear"—

"Silence! Do you pretend to say that you did your duty in what you told the judge of instruction? While others were informing against the cashier you undertook to inform against the banker. You spied upon him. You became intimate with his valet."

Was M. Lecoq really angry? Fanferlot, who knew him well, was in doubt. He did not know what to think of this devil of a man.

"If you were only skillful," he continued. "But, no; you wish to be a master, and you are not fit to be a journeyman."

"You are right," said Fanferlot piteously, seeing that it was useless to deny anything. "But how get on with an affair like this, where there was not even a trace or sign to start from?"

M. Lecoq shrugged his shoulders.

"Poor fellow! Why, don't you know that on the very day you were sent for with the commissary to verify the robbery you held—I do not say certainly, but very probably held—in your great stupid hands the means of knowing whether the key of the cashier or the banker had been used when the robbery was committed?"

"What do you mean?"

"You want to know? I will tell you. Do you remember the scratch you discovered on the safe door? You were so struck by it that you exclaimed at [illegible]. You carefully examined it and were convinced that it was a fresh scratch. You thought, and rightly, too, that this scratch was made at the time of the robbery. Now, with what was it made? Evidently with a key. That being the case, you should have demanded the keys both of the banker and the cashier. One of them would have had some particles of the hard green paint sticking to it."

"Imbecile!"

"You have spoken correctly," said M. Lecoq. "Imbecile! This proof is before your eyes, and you do not see it! This scratch is the only clew. If I find the guilty party, it will be by means of this scratch, and I am determined that I will find him."

At a distance Fanferlot was very brave, but in M. Lecoq's presence he yielded to the influence which this extraordinary man exercised upon all who approached him. This exact information, these minute details of all his secret movements and even thoughts, upset him. How had M. Lecoq obtained them?

"Have you been long looking up this case?" he asked.

"Probably. But I am not infallible and may have overlooked some important evidence. Take a seat and tell me all you know."

One could not deceive M. Lecoq, so Fanferlot told the exact truth, a rare thing for him to do. However, as he reached the end of his statement a feeling of mortified vanity prevented his telling how he had been fooled by Gipsy and the stout man.

"It seems to me, Master Squirrel, that you have forgotten something. How far did you follow the empty coach?"

"Oh," he stammered, "you know about that? How did you"—

But a sudden idea entered his brain. He stopped short, bounded off his chair and cried:

"Oh, I know! You were the large man with red whiskers."

Fanferlot's surprise gave so singular an expression to his face that M. Lecoq could not restrain a smile.

"Then it was you," continued the bewildered detective. "You are the large gentleman at whom I stared so as to impress his appearance upon my mind, and I never recognized you! What an actor you would make if you would go on the stage! But I was disguised, too—very well disguised."

"Very poorly disguised. It is only just to you that I should tell you so. Do you think that a heavy beard and a blouse are unrecognizable? The eye, the eye! The art lies in being able to change the eye. That is the secret."

"But," said Fanferlot, following up his idea, "you have made the little girl confess, which Mme. Alexandre could not do? You know why she leaves the Archangel, why she does not wait for M. de Clameran and why she bought calico dresses?"

"She is following my advice."

"In that case," said the detective dejectedly, "there is nothing left for me to do but to acknowledge myself an ass."

"No, Squirrel," said M. Lecoq kindly, "you are not an ass. You merely did wrong in undertaking a task beyond your capacity. Have you progressed one step since you started in this affair? No. That shows that, although you are incomparable as a lieutenant, you do not possess the qualities of a general. I am going to present you with an aphorism. Remember it and let it be your guide in the future—'One may shine in the second rank who would be totally eclipsed in the first.'"

Never had Fanferlot seen his patron so talkative and good natured. Finding his deceit discovered, he had expected to be overwhelmed with a storm, whereas he had escaped with a little shower that had cooled his brain. Lecoq's anger disappeared like one of those heavy clouds which threaten in the horizon for a moment and then are suddenly swept away by a gust of wind.

But the husband of Mme. Alexandre felt uneasy. He was afraid that something might be concealed beneath this affability.

"Do you know who the thief is?" he asked.

"I know no more than you do, and you seem to have made up your mind, whereas I am still undecided. You declare that the cashier is innocent and the banker guilty. I don't know whether you are right or wrong. I started after you and have only reached my preliminaries. I am certain of but one thing, and that is that a scratch was on the safe door. That scratch is my starting point."

As he spoke M. Lecoq took from his desk and unrolled an immense sheet of drawing paper. On this paper was photographed the door of M. Fauvel's safe. Every detail was given minutely. One could see the five movable buttons with the engraved letters and the narrow, projecting brass lock. The scratch was indicated with admirable exactness.

"I see."

"Naturally you thought that this scratch was made by the person who took the money. Let us see if you were right. I have here a little iron box, painted green like M. Fauvel's safe. Take a key and try to scratch it."

Without seeing through his chief's motive, the detective did as he was bid, scratching vigorously with the key.

"The deuce!" he said after several attempts. "This paint is awfully hard to move."

"Very hard, my friend, and yet that on the safe is still harder. So, you see, the scratch you discovered could not have been made by the trembling hand of a thief letting the key slip."

"I never should have thought of that. It certainly required great force to make so deep a scratch."

"Yes, but how was it done? I have been racking my brain for three days, and only yesterday I came to a conclusion. Let us examine together and see if our conjectures present enough chances of probability to establish a starting point."

M. Lecoq abandoned the photograph and, walking to the door communicating with his bedroom, took the key from the lock.

"Come here, Fanferlot, and stand by my side. There, very well. Suppose that I want to open this door and you don't want me to open it. When you see me about to put the key in the lock, what would be your first impulse?"

"To put my hands on your arm and draw it toward me quickly, so as to prevent your introducing the key."

"Precisely so. Now let us try it. Proceed."

Fanferlot obeyed, and the key held by M. Lecoq, pulled aside from the lock, slipped along the door, making an exact reproduction of the scratch in the photograph.

"Do you begin to understand now?" asked M. Lecoq.

"Understand! Why, a child could understand it now. Ah, what a man you are! I see the scene as if I had been present. Two persons were at the safe. One wished to take the money; the other wished to prevent its being taken. That is certain."

Accustomed to triumphs of this sort, M. Lecoq was much amused at Fanferlot's enthusiasm.

"There you go off half cocked again," he said good humoredly. "You regard as sure proof a circumstance which may be accidental and at the most only probable."

"No, a man like you could not be mistaken. There is no doubt about it."

"That being the case, what deductions would you draw from our discovery?"

"How so?"

"Because, at perfect liberty to open the safe whenever he wished to do so, he would not have brought a witness when he intended to commit the theft."

"Well reasoned. But on this supposition the banker would also be innocent. Think."

Fanferlot reflected, and all of his animation vanished.

"It is so," he said in a despairing tone. "What can be done now?"

"Find the third rogue, or, rather, the real rogue—the one who opened the safe and stole the notes and who is still at large, while others are suspected."

"Impossible! M. Fauvel and his cashier only had keys, and they always kept them on their persons."

"Yes, but the key alone was not sufficient to open the safe. The word also was necessary."

M. Lecoq shrugged his shoulders impatiently.

"What was the word?" he asked.

"Gipsy."

"Which is the name of the cashier's grisette. The day you find a man sufficiently intimate with Prosper to be aware of all the circumstances connected with this name, and at the same time on a footing with the Fauvel family which would give him the privilege of entering M. Fauvel's chamber, then you will discover the real thief; then the problem will be solved."

Egotistical, like all great artists, M. Lecoq had never had a pupil and never wished to have one. He hated assistants, wishing to share neither the pleasure of success nor the pain of defeat. Thus Fanferlot, who knew his patron's character, was surprised to hear him giving advice who heretofore had only given orders.

"Chief," he ventured to say, "you seem to take a great personal interest in this affair—you have so deeply studied it."

M. Lecoq started nervously and replied, frowning:

"Don't be too curious, Master Squirrel. Be careful that you do not go too far. Do you understand?"

Fanferlot began to apologize.

"That will do," interrupted M. Lecoq. "If I choose to lend you a helping hand, it is because it suits me to do so. It pleases me to be the head while you are the limbs. Unassisted, with your preconceived ideas, you would never have found the culprit. If we two don't find him, my name is not Lecoq."

"We shall certainly succeed since you are interested in the case."

"Yes, I am interested in it, and during the last four days I have discovered many important facts. But I have reasons for not appearing in this affair. No matter what happens, I forbid your mentioning my name. If we succeed, all the success must be attributed to you. And, above all, don't try to find out too much. Be satisfied"

These conditions seemed quite to suit Fanferlot.

"I will be discreet," he said.

"I shall rely upon you. Now, to begin, you must carry this photograph to the judge of instruction. I know M. Patrigent is much perplexed about the case. Explain to him as if it came from you alone what I have just shown you. Repeat what I have demonstrated, and I am convinced that this evidence will determine him to release the cashier. Prosper must be at liberty before I can commence my operations."

"Of course, chief. But must I let him know that I suspect any one besides the banker or cashier?"

"Certainly. Justice must not be kept in ignorance of your intention of following up this affair. M. Patrigent will tell you to watch Prosper. You will reply that you will not lose sight of him. I myself will answer for his being in good hands."

"And if he asks me about Gipsy?"

M. Lecoq hesitated a moment.

"Tell him," he said, "that you persuaded her, in the interest of Prosper, to live in a house where she can watch some one whom you suspect."

Fanferlot rolled up the photograph and was joyously picking up his hat to go when M. Lecoq checked him with a gesture.

"I have not finished. Do you know how to drive a carriage and manage horses?"

"Why can you ask this of a man who used to be a rider in the Bouthor circus?"

"Very well. As soon as the judge dismisses you return home immediately, make yourself a wig and the complete dress of a valet, and, having dressed yourself, take this letter to the agent on Delorme street."

"But"—

"There must be no but, sir. The agent will send you to M. de Clameran, who is looking for a valet, his man having left him yesterday."

"Excuse me if I venture to suggest that you are making a mistake. This Clameran does not come into the matter. He is not the cashier's friend."

"Do what I tell you and don't disturb your mind about the rest. Clameran is not a friend of Prosper, I know, but he is the friend and protector of Raoul de Lagors. Why so? Whence the intimacy of these two men of such different ages? I must find it out. I must also find out who this forge master is who lives in Paris and never goes to attend to his furnaces; a high liver, who takes it into his head to live at the Hotel du Louvre in the midst of a tumultuous, ever changing crowd, where it is hard to watch him. Through you I will have an eye upon him. He has a carriage. You are to drive it, and you will soon be able to give me an account of his manner of life and of the sort of people with whom he associates."

"You shall be obeyed."

"One word more. M. de Clameran is irritable and, still more, suspicious. You will be presented to him under the name of Joseph Dubois. He will demand your certificate of good character. Here are three which state that you have lived with the Marquis de Stairmeuse and the Count de Commarin and that you have just left the Baron de Wortschen, who has gone to Germany. Be careful of your dress and manners. Watch the marquis' movements. Above all, don't overdo your part. It might arouse suspicion."

"Don't worry as to that. Where shall I report to you?"

ROUND ABOUT US.

Henry Crego, aged 16 years, called on Sheriff Shepherd Thursday night, and asked for a night's lodging. He was accommodated. He told Mr. Shepherd that his parents resided on a farm one mile out of Jackson and that last fall he left Jackson with a show and traveled with it until a few weeks ago, when he became homesick in Alabama and started for Michigan. He is a bright lad and when he left Mr. Shepherd's residence he started for Jackson.—Adrian Telegram.

Last evening Will and Jake Miller, hailing from Blissfield, indulged too freely in tangle-foot. Their fighting courage was aroused and they proceeded to pummel each other. The affair took place near the Lake Shore depot. Word was 'phoned to Marshal Hine, who went over for them. The marshal called upon Lew Crandell, who happened to be there, to assist him. Crandell cheerfully complied and the combatants were lodged in the cooler. They will be brought before Mayor Warren today on the above charge.—Sylvania Sun.

It may be interesting to know that A. B. Wisner is a widow who resides in Franklin township, and who has reared three sons to manhood, whose father died when they were children, and has been a farmer all these years, and at the present time, with the aid of two of these sons, conducts successfully a large farm.—Adrian Times.

A good story is on one of our city teachers, who dismissed school one day because the room was too cold for comfort. She was judging by the thermometer, which had failed to register more than sixty degrees. When school was dismissed and an investigation made the temperature was found to be about seventy-five degrees. The thermometer was out of whack or had gone on a strike. It certainly was not reliable in case of fire and has been put on the condemned list. It is needless to say that the teacher has been plenty warm ever since.—Hillsdale Standard.

"Go an' git me a pot of glue, Mrs. McGovern," said the undertaker, "so that I may keep this wig where it belongs." Mrs. McGovern set out after the sticking material, and after a time she returned. "Here is the glue for ye," she said with a sigh. "Mrs. McGovern you kin take back the mucilage," said the undertaker, "the difficulty is fixed. I used a tack."—Reese Review.

Friday as Clifford Draper, who lives about two miles north of town, was starting home with a load of ice, Geo Edwards, who has charge of Wilson & Son's ice business here, noticed that he had "thirteen" cakes on and advised him to put on another, telling him he would never get home safely with the load even if he got off the ice. Mr. Draper, who was apparently of a less superstitious turn, declined to put the 14th cake of ice on and started to drive off the river, when almost immediately the load overturned and the team ran about a mile and were met by a man with a horse and buggy. The man jumped from his vehicle to stop the runaway team and his horse ran away. When Mr. Draper returned with the team for his load, Mr. Edwards said, "Will you have 14 cakes of ice?" he quietly replied in the affirmative and reached home in safety.—Milan Leader.

IT'S JUST THE THING

Every person should see to it that their blood is in order each Spring. Nature must purify the blood. That is the only way it can be purified. In order that nature may do its part in cleansing the blood from the Winter's accumulation of impurities the

so that they may carry off the impurities; there is no remedy that will do this quicker and better than

and the reason this remedy is so much more successful than all others is because it strengthens the kidneys and liver and puts these organs in shape to perform their natural functions.

IT STRENGTHENS THE STOMACH

so that the food may be properly digested and the body is consequently nourished and all the organs strengthened, this then means a strong body and health.

PROOF

J. Koerner, Agent Grand Union Tea Company at Niles, Mich., writes: I use Kinyon's Blood and Kidney Remedy in my family every year. I find it the greatest blood purifier and tonic. It regulates the kidneys and liver and purifies the blood, and with this simple remedy I always keep my family well

JAPAN'S BIG COAL ORDER.

An order for 40,000 tons of smokeless coal for the Japanese government, to be delivered at the seaboard within 30 days, has been accepted by Jewett, Bigelow & Brooks of this city. The coal will be sent from their mines to Norfolk, Va., for shipment.

"We will notify the railroads and they will furnish us with plenty of cars," said H. M. Jewett, "knowing that it is an exceptional order, and an emergency. We will have an extra force of men at our mines in West Virginia, and will get the coal out on time, letting all our other seaboard traffic wait. When the coal is on board the ships we get a draft on London for the amount of the invoice. We have no direct dealings with Japan at all."—Detroit Journal.

The above is the record of quite a coal order. Jewett, Bigelow & Brooks own several coal mines in West Virginia, in fact this is now recognized as the strongest coal firm in Michigan. J. W. Bigelow of this firm went to school and was a boy in Tecumseh. His father is the Rev. A. J. Bigelow of Adrian.

When you want envelopes with your business card neatly printed on the corner, just remember that doing this class of work is one of the ways the local printer has of making a living for himself and family and of getting together a little spare change to spend with the home merchants. The contractor who prints envelopes for the government will get along very nicely if he doesn't do any business with the envelope users of this section of the country, and then, too, all of the favors that are thrown in the way of the local printer in the matter of printing envelopes or anything else along that line are always thoroughly appreciated, and the money goes back to the merchant again in the natural course of trade.—Hudson Gazette.

Concerning
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

2 Tim. 4:2. 1 Cor. 9:16

THESE WERE MORE NOBLE THAN THOSE OF THESSALONICA IN THAT THEY RECEIVED THE WORD WITH ALL READINESS AND SEARCHED THE SCRIPTURES DAILY, WHETHER THOSE THINGS WERE SO. ACTS 17:11

To understand the Gospel one must understand the Kingdom of God—of which the Gospel is the Good News. To understand the Kingdom of God one must understand the various institutions, which the King Himself has appointed therein, and by which He administers the blessings of the Kingdom. The leading institutions of the Kingdom of God we found last day to be: BAPTISM, which is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom; LAYING-ON-OF-HANDS, by which the Gift of the Holy Ghost is made over to each member of the Kingdom when he is come of age to undertake the full service of citizenship; HOLY COMMUNION, which is the focal act of worship in the Kingdom (at which the citizens of the Kingdom are not only received into the King's Presence to Worship but are also admitted to sit down at the King's Table to eat Bread with Him, viz., His own Body and Blood. Cf. Luke 14:16-24; 22:17-20; John 6; 51-58); THE MINISTRY, the officers appointed by the King Himself to administer these things in His name. And these institutions of the Spiritual Kingdom of God, we saw were foreshadowed (Heb. 10:1) by Circumcision, the conferring of the Law, the Passover and the Ministry of the earthly Kingdom of God—the latter having only the shadow of good things to come; the former having the good things themselves.

As has just been said, to understand the Kingdom of God we must understand these various institutions of the Kingdom of God; I proceed therefore to discuss the subject of BAPTISM. At this time I shall confine myself to one point only, viz., that Baptism is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God--than which there is none other Door under heaven given among men whereby we may enter into tha[illegible]

The truth of this statement will readily appear from the point of view we have now attained, viz., that of the Kingdom. Bearing in mind that our blessed Lord came to set up the Kingdom of God, and that during His whole ministry He was preaching and preparing for the Kingdom of God, we are in a position to understand His word (St. Matt. 28: 18-20). "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and on earth. Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations baptising them into the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." (Revised Version)

There is no mistaking the character of those words. If ever a King proclaimed his kingdom about to begin, if ever a King shall proclaim his kingdom about to begin—in heaven or on earth—those are the words of a King proclaiming His Kingdom. It is the Royal Proclamation of the Kingdom of God—and Baptism is therein proclaimed to be the means of admission, the Door of Entrance thereto.

That Baptism is here appointed to be the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God is apparent from the following considerations:

2. It is Baptism which admits or transfers "into the name of the Father and of the Son and the Holy Ghost"—"BAPTIZING them INTO etc."

3. Evidently the Kingdom of God is here spoken of under the figure of a school—"The School of Christ." So we may understand as if it read, "Go ye therefore and enrol all the nations as disciples in my School by baptizing them etc." (Observe that one enters a school in order to be taught. Thus the BAPTIZING admits to the School—i. e. Kingdom—apart from the TEACHING which follows after. One is not admitted as a disciple by teaching. He is admitted as a disciple first and taught afterwards.)

Our blessed Lord having appointed Baptism to be the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God, and having also commanded all mankind to be baptized, it follows that Baptism is the only Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God. (If there were any other Door there would be no one to use it because all are commanded to be admitted into the Kingdom by the Door of Baptism.)

We can now understand such statements as Mark 16:16—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." He must be baptized because there is none other Door under Heaven given among men whereby we must enter into the Kingdom of God—which is the Way of Salvation. (Cf. John 3:5)

Saved from terrible death.

In the senate the closing days of the week have been occupied with a long, and at times vehement, debate on the Panama treaty, Senators Spooner, Carmack, Newlands, Depew, Tillman and others engaging in the controversy. Each side claims that the other is partisan and both deny the charge. The democrats maintain that intervention by the President before the revolution was an act of war against Colombia; that he is now provoking war for political purposes; that he entered by military force and uninvited into the territorial jurisdiction of Colombia; that he sent instructions to naval officers at Colon and Panama to prevent the landing of Colombian troops on her own soil; that he encouraged the revolutionists in their acts of secession; that the revolution was a sham and the new republic holds together only by the outside support given by the President; that Panama has no organized government and the people have never voted upon a constitution; that the constitution of the United States has been set aside and international law disregarded; that the President disobeyed the plain requirements of the Spooner act; and that when he found he could not negotiate a treaty with Colombia it was his duty to turn to Nicaragua.

In reply the republicans assert the President had nothing to do with the revolution; that the administration will try to avoid war and does not contemplate it; that he promptly sent forces to the isthmus to guard the transit and protect American interests; that he has been diligent in the best interests of the American people; that he is abundantly supported by international law and has obeyed the constitution; that Congress marked out the Panama route as the one of its choice on the ground that it is the only place where a sea-level canal can be built; that it was left to the President to say what was a "reasonable" time in which to conclude a treaty with Colombia; that it was purely a matter of judgment and state policy on his part when he should recognize the new republic; that all these facts are matters of history and the incident is closed.

The unexpected strength for Mr. Hearst, as a presidential candidate, which became apparent in Washington at the meeting of the National Democratic committee, is given as the rea[illegible] St. Louis was chosen for the convention in place of Chicago. But Mr. Hearst is alert and will at once establish a daily paper in the exhibition city.

An unexpected and vigorous attack upon the present civil service system was made in the House on the 13th inst, when a vote was obtained to strike out the appropriation for the payment of the salaries of the Civil Service Commissioners. Representative Hepburn of Iowa led the attack and was seconded by Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio. Mr. Hepburn would make the heads of departments sole judges of fitness for appointment, and give them the power of dismissal. As matters now stand the civil service law provides no permanency of tenure. On the 14th inst. the House reconsidered its vote and the appropriation stands.

There is still much excitement in the departments among the clerks because they are required to work seven hours out of twentyfour. Pension Commissioner Ware issued the following order which covers the whole ground: "Let us faithfully carry out the 4:30 order of the department. The tax-payer on the outside is working from 8 to 16 hours a day."

Among the subjects presented to Congress for consideration are the following: A reorganization of the volunteer naval forces; an investigation of the ship subsidy plan; a new service pension bill which proposes to give all honorably discharged soldiers who served 90 days and have reached 62 years of age the sum of $12 per month; a scheme of promotion in the army by selection as recommended in the President's message; and a bill for the admission of the territories as states.

It has been decided in Congress that too many private carriages are supported in Washington out of government appropriations. Representative Landis said that if they were lined up on Pennsylvania avenue they would extend from the Capitol to the White House. The head of one of the departments sent in an estimate for seven coachmen. The House adopted an amendment providing that only the president, the heads of executive departments, and the secretary to the President should have carriages at the public expense.

The resolutions making for the peace of the world which were adopted by the National Arbitration Congress have been presented to the President, who approved of them and agreed to do all in his power to promote the object they have in view. A committee also presented them to Congress where they met with a most favorable reception, and in the House some forty members at once organized a peace league in favor of international arbitration.

The President gave his second state dinner on the 14th ins., in honor of the foreign ambassadors and ministers. Covers were laid for 78 guests and the table was ornamented with orchids and white hyacinths. Twenty nine foreign countries were represented; a number of Senators were present.

The Russian New Years day occurred on the 13th inst., and was celebrated at the Russian embassy in Washington by a fancy dress ball and a supper. Miss Alice Roosevelt appeared as a dame of the olden time, in a gown of blue brocade and high powdered pompadour. The same afternoon the wife of the Austrian ambassador gave a small musicale Senator Lodge gave a luncheon at the Capitol as a compliment to Mr. Harry White, first secretary to the U. S. embassy in London. The other guests included Senators Platte of Conn., Fairbanks, Foraker, Beveridge, Allison, Hale, Spooner, and Kean. Mrs. McCallum, adopted daughter of the late Senator Sherman, has given a tea in the elegant Sherman residence.

ROUND ABOUT US.

An exchange says that every paper in the state should publish the fact that burnt corn is a cure for hog cholera and adds: It was first discovered by a distillery in Peoria, Ill. It was thrown to the hogs and eaten by them. Before that time a number had been dying each day with cholera, but the disease immediately disappeared. It is so simple a remedy that it can be easily tried.—Hudson Gazette.

A Hudson family retired the other evening with a firm intention of arising early in the morning. When the lady of the house awoke she slipped on her kimona and put the coffee on the stove without waking the rest of the family. It was still dark when they all gathered around the breakfast table and the meal was about half over when someone looked at the clock and found that it was only 11 p. m. and that they had been to bed but about two hours. The curl papers and pajamas were again brought into play and the family retired for the second time that night, the small boy rejoicing in the fact that he had at last gotten a meal ahead of the rest of the world.—Ex.

PROTECTS THE SYSTEM AGAINST CATARRH

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A few breaths of Hyomei through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit will check a cold or the grip at the start, and prevent serious and lasting illness.

In all catarrhal troubles and diseases of the air passages, Hyomei has a positive action not possessed by any other medicine or treatment. It is pleasant and convenient to use; simply put 20 drops of Hyomei in the inhaler and breathe it a few minutes, four times a day. In this way, every particle of air that enters the lungs is charged with a healing balsam that kills all catarrhal germs, soothes and allays the irritated mucous membrane, vitalizes the blood with ozone, and makes a permanent and complete cure.

Hyomei outfit costs only $1, and contains an inhaler, medicine dropper and bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a lifetime and when more Hyomei is needed, extra bottles can be obtained for 50c.

C. A. Wright gives us personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit he sells to refund the money if it does not cure.

Beautiful Thoughts

A mother's yearning for children is inseparable from a love of the beautiful, and it behooves every woman to bring the sweetest and best influence to bear on the subject of her maternity.

To relieve pain and make easy that period when life is born again, is popularly used. It is a liniment easily administered and for external use only.

Mother's Friend

Pregnant women should try this remedy, it being undeniably a friend to her during nature's term of suspense and anticipation.

Mother's Friend, if used throughout gestation, will soften the breasts, thereby preventing cracked and sore nipples. All muscles straining with the burden will relax, become supple and elastic from its continued application.

All fibres in the abdominal region will respond readily to the expanding cover containing the embryo if Mother's Friend is applied externally during pregnancy. Of all reliable druggists $1.00 per bottle. Write for free book on "Motherhood."

IT IS SERIOUS.

The constant aching of a bad back,
The weariness, the tired feeling,
The pains and aches of kidney ills
Are serious—if neglected.

Mr. F. A. Ferguson, tinsmith, residing in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I had symptoms of kidney trouble. The kidney secretions were very irregular and at times too frequent and highly colored. Having seen so many cases of severe kidney trouble I thought it wise to do something at once, so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store and took them. I began to improve from the very start and continued to do so. I emphatically declare Doan's Kidney Pills to be up to the representations made for them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box. Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Young Desperado Escaped.

Jackson, Mich., Jan. 16.—Charles Snyder, the 16-year-old desperado who has terrorized the farmers for miles around by his wild west tactics, and who was recently convicted of highway robbery and burglary and sentenced to Ionia reformatory for from seven to ten years, escaped from the county jail during the night. He succeeded in removing a top bar from his cell, and climbing out, the rest was easy, as none of the doors between him and the basement and the street were locked. He was regarded by the authorities as a degenerate and a very dangerous character.

Trains Blocked by Storm.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 18.—The snowstorm, together with the high winds, played havoc with the railroad schedules in this section, the snow drifting to such an extent as to make the tracks impassable. All trains were from five to six hours late and on the Port Austin division of the Pere Marquette there has been no train since Saturday morning.

Is Migration an Instinct?

Cats and dogs travel almost incredible distances to their homes over a route never traversed but once, and that once often with eyes blinded. If nature has planted in them an instinct so nearly resembling the governing cause of migration among birds, why may we not look to instinct as the cause of the annual flight? They fly direct from one perch to another without hesitation or delay, and often the young birds precede the old ones. Their habit has been the cause of many beautiful poems, and poet and moralist alike have found an inspiration in their yearly journeys, and, in fact, even to the most prosaic imagination there is something in their mysterious goings and comings which speaks to the soul.

We are unmistakably taught by them that there is a power higher and stronger than any we have known as a part of this earth, a power which is not latent and unused, or, when discovered, used and controlled by man, as the power of electricity and steam, but a power in active operation controlling and compelling obedience.

A Practical View.

"As a new woman," he said, "I suppose you will object to the wedding ring as a symbol of man's tyranny?"

"Of course I shall," she replied. "Under no circumstances would I consent to wear such a thing. It is not essential to a marriage, and it stands for all that is objectionable in the marriage relation."

"And on the same theory," he continued, "I suppose you will refuse to wear an engagement ring also?"

"Well—no," she answered slowly and thoughtfully. "That's a very different matter."

"But theoretically it"—

"There is no use arguing," she interrupted. "I don't care what it is theoretically. Practically it is very often a diamond, while the wedding ring is only plain gold, and that makes all the difference in the world."

Young Eagles.

An eagle lives from eighty to 160 years. The young birds are driven forth by their savage parents to provide for themselves as soon as they are able to fly. No training is given them by the old bird. That is left to their wild instincts, which hunger and necessity develop. There is no "going back to the old home" for the young eagles. The mother bird tears up every vestige of the nest, and if they emit plaintiff shrieks the old birds dart at them and push them off the crags or rocks and thereby make them take to their wings. It takes three years for a young eagle to gain its complete plumage and strength.—Independent.

Never Tease a Horse.

Teasing a horse is something that should not be tolerated. A horse cannot understand a joke like a man, and the teasing will make him vicious. Teasing a colt or a calf affords children and thoughtless men amusement for the time being, but these usually develop into vicious animals. I once had a calf when I was a young man, and I let him bunt me around the lot, and I thought it was fun. Later he was "ruler of the roost," and he "found an early grave"—that is, he became so grave that he had to pay the penalty by going over the block.—St. Louis Republic.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. SALSBURY LIED.

Twice Cornered While on the Witness Stand.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 16.—The cross-examination of Salsbury was continued in the Ellen trial Friday. Attorney Walker devoted himself to attacking the reliability of the witness' memory. Salsbury repeatedly failed to recall the details of meetings and conversations.

Salsbury swore in the lower court that he talked with Ellen before a trip made by municipal officials to Milwaukee. Now he states that the conversation did not occur until after that trip. In his confession, too, Salsubry said he paid the alderman after council meeting one night. Now he says that he might have paid him before that time, or afterwards.

The statement made by Salsbury in the federal court to Judge Wanty was read by Mr. Walker.

"Did you lie to Judge Wanty?" he asked Salsbury.

"Yes, I did lie to Judge Wanty. We had a meeting of several of us interested in the water deal, and it was evident that some of us had to go to prison. I agreed to accept the burden in order to protect the others. The statement was not true, and I knew it."

Sore on Common Council.

Owosso, Mich., Jan. 16.—The city is sore at the action of the common council in not granting the Ionia & Owosso Electric Co. a franchise through this city. The engineering work has been completed as far as St. Johns and it was planned to have a gang begin work here Monday, but there will be nothing doing here now for a year, say the promoters. Instead the preliminary work will be started next week on the Jackson & Lansing road.

Many New Deputies.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 16.—The game warden has announced the names of the state and county game wardens for the ensuing year. The list includes the names of many new appointees, due to the fact that State Game Warden Chapman has replaced every warden among his appointees of last year who showed a disposition to render excessive bills and inefficient service.

Man Burned to Death.

Manistee, Mich., Jan. 16.—Fire early in the morning destroyed the clothing store of George Davis, the saloon of Joseph Venn, the cigar factory of Henry Roy and buildings owned by Herman Buske, causing a loss of $20,000; insurance about $10,000. Camila Davalk, a Belgian cook, was burned to death while sleeping in rooms over the saloon. He had no known relatives.

Fined For Slapping Woman's Face.

West Branch, Mich., Jan. 16.—Mrs. William Husted met Mrs. John Stankey in Iron's grocery store and proceeded to slap Mrs. Stankey's face, at the same time accusing her of flirtations with her "hubby." Mrs. Husted was brought before Justice Babcock on the charge of assault, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $5.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. I used ten bottles, which entirely cured me, as I have not had an attack for five years."—MRS. JOHN DRESBACK, Leipsic, O.

ELLEN FOUND GUILTY

First Conviction In Grand Rapids Water Scandal.

HE ACCEPTED BRIBE OF $350

Offered Him by Salsbury—Penalty Not More Than Ten Nor Less Than One Year—Prisoner Remanded For Sentence.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 21.—"Guilty as charged, with recommendations to the court for mercy," is the verdict rendered by the superior court jury at 4:55 Wednesday afternoon in the case against Alderman Jacob P. Ellen of the First ward, charged with having accepted a bribe of $350 from ex-City Attorney Lant K. Salsbury in the infamous water deal.

The respondent was remanded by the court to the custody of the sheriff until Saturday morning for sentence, and spent the night in the county jail.

The penalty under the statutes is a prison sentence of not more than ten nor less than one year or a fine of not more than $5,000 and jail sentence of not less than one year.

The next case is that of Alderman James O. McCool of the First ward, charged with accepting a bribe of $350 from Lant K. Salsbury. The case is set for trial today.

Detroit Next Year.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 21.—The various grand bodies of the masonic fraternity will undoubtedly go to Detroit next year. The grand chapter Tuesday voted to do so, and the others will likely take the same action. Recorder Conover was re-elected after a spirited contest with Lou B. Winsor for the position. The stepping stone to higher honors, master of the first veil, was secured by J. H. Thompson of Evart on the second ballot. Thompson is a member of the state board of education. All the other officers of the grand chapter were advanced.

Millers Elect Officers.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 21.—The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the Michigan Millers' association began here Wednesday with a good attendance. One of the main features of the day's session was the adoption of a resolution favoring increased power for the interstate commerce commission and another favoring state inspection and grading of grain, hay and other products of the sort. The following officers were elected for the [illegible] year: President, H. F. Colby, Dowagiac; vice-president, C. J. DeRoo, Holland; treasurer, J. P. Thomas, Lansing; executive committee, H. R. Loranger, Flint; C. B. Chatfield, Bay City; R. C. Flint, Middleville.

Gets Judgment of $8,500.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 21.—Frances L. McIlvane, widow of William H. McIlvane, yesterday obtained, through her attorney, Allen H. Fraser, a judgment by consent against the Detroit United railway and the Michigan Central railroad for $8,500. The plaintiff's husband died as a result of injuries sustained in an accident May 10, 1901, which was similar to the grade crossing smashup at Gratiot avenue and Dequindre street last week.

Paw Paw Druggist Soaked.

Paw Paw, Mich., Jan. 21.—In the circuit court Wednesday afternoon Charles E. Hessey of South Haven, a druggist, was given seventy days in jail or $355 fine for violating the local option law. J. L. Congdon, another indicted South Haven druggist, who was convicted, has appealed to the supreme court and given $1,000 bail for his appearance on the first day of the next term.

River Out of Its Banks.

St. Joseph, Mich., Jan. 21.—Fears are felt for the safety of the highway bridge between this city and Benton Harbor on account of the high water and ice. The melting of eighteen inches of snow, with a heavy downpour of rain during the past fifteen hours, has caused the river to rise beyond its banks.

Peace at Buchanan.

Buchanan, Mich., Jan. 21.—Rev. H. L. Veach, the recent pastor of the Christian church at this place, has accepted a charge at Metz, Ind., and the church will be reopened next Sunday for the first time in four months. The bad feeling has not all subsided yet, but comparative peace reigns for the time being, at least.

Indian Claims Lands.

Monroe, Mich., Jan. 21.—Thomas Topash, a full-blooded Indian, has arrived here from Kansas to push the claim of the heirs of Chief Moran, who, he claims, was granted a patent by the government in 1839 to certain lands in Dundee township. The heirs are now residents of Kansas, and the value of the lands involved is $30,000.

Earthquake in Panama.

Panama, Jan. 21.—A slight earthquake shock, of short duration, was felt throughout the republic of Panama at about half-past 9 Wednesday morning. No damage has been reported.

Ice Gorge Endangers Lives.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. 21.—Lives of 3,000 people are endangered and property to the value of $300,000 is threatened as a result of an immense ice gorge which is forming in the Wabash river above this city.

Wonderful nerve.

Is displayed by many a man enduring pains of accidental cuts, wounds, bruises, burns, scalds, sore feet or stiff joints. But there's no need for it. Bucklen's Arnica Salve will kill the pain and cure the trouble. It's the best salve on earth for piles, too. 25c at C. A. Wright's druggist.

STEAM PIPE EXPLODED

ROOF FELL IN ON THEM

Early Reports Are Meager—Structure Caught Fire and Water Pipe Burst, Adding Horror to Scene—Rescue Work Going On.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan. 20.—An immense steam pipe directly over the engine in the boiler room of No. 2 mill of the Cambria Steel Co. exploded about 1:30 this morning, bringing down the whole section of roof running from the puddling mill to the finishing shed of the mill. The woodwork at once took fire from the furnaces and at this time is burning fiercely. It is known that at least two or three men are under the debris, and it is not believed that these can be rescued in time to save their lives.

About fifteen men have been taken out and have been either sent to the hospital or are lying on improvised cots in offices nearby. It is impossible at present to learn the extent of their injuries, but it is known that several are in a critical condition. Added to the fire and explosion disaster a large water pipe burst and is flooding the ground about the scene of the accident. One man, caught in the debris, is in plain sight, but cannot be rescued owing to the intensity of the heat. It is probable that not one of the men penned in can escape death either by drowning or fire.

Johnstown, Pa., Jan 21.—2:40 a. m.—At this time the number of dead is estimated at from twelve to fourteen men. The injured will number twenty-five or more, many of whom are terribly scalded and cannot live. Two bodies have been recovered. The injured [illegible] hurried rapidly as possible to hospitals.

HEIR TO A THRONE.

Brooklyn Man Urged to Accept Servian Crown.

New York, Jan. 21.—Louis Napoleon Bonaparte Cocianich, in spite of his martial name, a peaceable liquor dealer in Brooklyn, is being urged to accept the Servian crown by friends of the assassinated King Alexander. Mr. Cocianich admitted that no man had a better right to be king of Servia than he, but that he had no intention of accepting this rather dangerous office.

"I am a direct descendant of the grand Shupani of Servia, and of late I have received many requests to supplant the present King Peter, but I have answered them all that, being an American citizen, I felt like a king right here, and that without the risks which attach to a crown in a Balkan state.

"The first I heard of what was going on was a letter from a relative, who told me that there was considerable unrest, and that those opposed to the present king were anxious to start a revolt, and, recognizing my right by inheritance to the throne was undisputed, they wanted my consent to carry on the revolt and make me king.

"After this I received letters hinting at the same thing from other people, and finally a few weeks ago a man representing himself as the agent of the people who wanted to start a revolt, called on me. He brought with him a letter, which, after some guarded talk, he asked me to read and then destroy in his presence.

"I read the letter. About all it contained was an introduction of the agent to me, and a request to talk over the situation with him and do as he asked. In sailor's slang, I did not like 'the cut of his jib,' and as I had no desire of being king I flatly told him that Red Hook was good enough for me, and that I would have nothing to do with the revolt."

Sues Alexander Dowie.

San Francisco, Jan. 21.—Hugh Craig, insurance agent and ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce, appealed to the courts Wednesday to recover $962 from John Alexander Dowie. Mr. Craig in his petition claims that twelve years ago the ruler of Zion borrowed $2,772 from him. All of it was returned except the amount sued for, and that, it is alleged, Dowie refused to pay.

Lamp Exploded.

Pittsburg, Jan. 21.—The explosion of a lamp in the Hope Mission building, Second avenue, Wednesday caused the death of James Bodigo, 6 years old, the fatal burning of his mother, Mrs. Mary Bodigo, and the serious burning of his three-year-old sister. The boy was burned to a crisp, and Mrs. Bodigo was burned all over the body and can hardly live through the day.

STUDENT A HERO.

Rescued Young Woman From a Burning House.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 21.—Oren S. Botsford, a freshman engineer, whose home is in Clarenceville, Mich., is the hero of the day in student circles, as he no doubt saved the life of a pretty co-ed, and also her home, from destruction. He was passing down South Division street and, noticing a bright light in a second-story window of one of the residences, saw that the curtain was ablaze. He rushed up the stairs and burst into the room, tore down the blazing curtain and threw it out of the window. He then looked around the room and discovered the occupant, Miss Minnie E. Berry, a sophomore lit. from Oxford, Mich., lying on the floor in a dead faint. He carried her into the open air, where she soon revived.

There was no one else in the house at the time of the fire, and she would undoubtedly have been burned to death but for the timely arrival of her rescuer. The curtain caught fire from an alcohol lamp.

BY A RISING VOTE

House Passes Hepburn Pure Food Bill.

STANDARD FOODS AND DRUGS

Determined by the Measure—Bureau of Chemistry to Be Given the Work—Penalties Provided For Misbranding and Adulterated Goods.

Washington, Jan. 21.—The house passed the Hepburn pure food bill Wednesday on a rising vote, 201 to 68, its opponents being unable to secure a roll call on the bill. Several attempts were made to amend the bill, but no material changes were made.

The bill fixes the standards of foods and drugs as to their purity, strength and character and defines what shall be considered adulterations or misbranding of foods and drugs. It also prohibits interstate commerce importation and exportation of such misbranded or adulterated articles.

It is proposed to enlarge the scope of the bureau of chemistry to include the bureau of foods and impose upon it the duty of performing all chemical work for the other executive departments. This bureau will be charged with the duty of inspecting food and drug products which belong to interstate or foreign commerce. The secretary of agriculture is given authority to employ such chemists, inspectors, clerks and laborers as may be necessary for the enforcement of the act.

One section of the bill provides penalties for the introduction of adulterated or misbranded foods or drugs and another section requires the secretary of agriculture to prescribe rules and regulations to govern the director of the bureau of chemistry and foods in examinations of articles required to be inspected under the law. Violations of the law shall be reported by the secretary of agriculture to the proper district attorney of the United States, who is to direct the cause proceedings to be prosecuted without delay.

Memorial Where Iroquois Burned.

Chicago, Jan. 21.—Arthur E. Hull, leader of the Iroquois Memorial association, announces that he will offer the site of the Iroquois theater for the erection of a memorial to the victims of the fire. Mr. Hull refuses to say who authorizes him to make the offer, but he declares it is one of the foremost surgeons of the city. The heirs to the estate of which the site is a part have agreed to convey it, with all leaseholds, to the association, Mr. Hull says. He declares further that a committee will soon call upon Mayor Harrison to lay before him the association's protest against turning over the theater building to its owners. Eight more churches and several additional halls were closed Wednesday by order of the city building department.

Street Car Ran Away.

Pittsburg, Jan. 21.—Of the thirty passengers aboard a trolley car which ran away in Rankin last night, five were seriously hurt and ten others badly bruised and shocked. The car was on the Swissvale and Braddock division of the Pittsburg R. P. Co., and while descending the steep grade on Hawkins avenue got beyond control by reason of icy tracks. After running about thirty yards it jumped the curve at Second avenue and plunged over a twenty-foot embankment, turned completely over and lodged in a snow bank.

Carnegie's Liberal Offer.

New York, Jan. 21.—At the annual meeting of the American Society of Civil Engineers here Wednesday, attended by nearly a thousand members of the profession from various parts of the United States, it was decided to submit to a letter ballot of the members of the society the question of accepting, on behalf of the society, the offer of Andrew Carnegie to give $1,000,000 toward a union building in New York for this and other engineering associations.

Smithson's Remains Arrive.

New York, Jan. 21.—The body of John Smithson, the founder of the Smithsonian institute at Washington, who died in Genoa in 1829, arrived last night on the steamer Princess Irene. The body was accompanied by Professor Alexander Graham Bell of the Smithsonian institute, and Mrs. Bell, who went to Italy for this purpose. The body will be taken to Washington on the United States dispatch boat Dolphin.

Seeks U. S. Protectorate.

St. Thomas, D. W. I., Jan. 21.—It is reported here that the Dominican minister of foreign affairs, accompanied by a delegate, has left San Domingo for Washington to attempt to make arrangements with the United States to establish a protectorate over the republic of Santo Domingo. Vigorous bombardment of the capital continues by the forces of General Jiminez.

To Make Speed Records.

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Plans to equal, and possibly beat, the speed record of 120 miles an hour, made at Prossen, Germany, some time ago, were made Wednesday at a conference between officials and experts representing the New York Central railroad and the General Electric Co. The tests are to be made on the tracks between this city and Hoffmans. If present plans hold, the Central thus will be enabled to run trains through New York city and on its suburban lines at an unparalleled rate of speed.

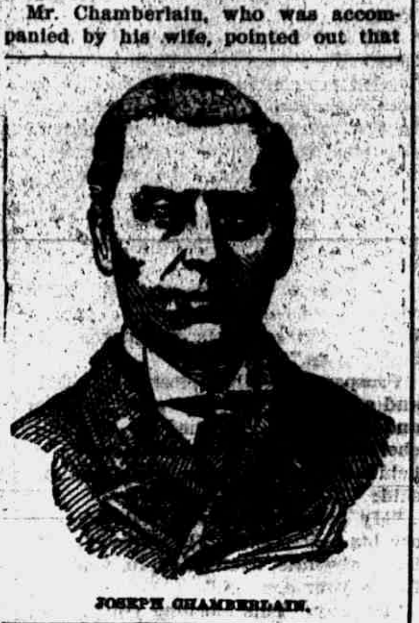
It is exceptional to find a family where there are no domestic ruptures occasionally, but these can be lessoned by having Dr. King's New Life Pills round. Much trouble they save by their great work in stomach and liver troubles. They not only relieve you but cure. 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

BRITAIN DECLINING.

Chamberlain Tells London Protection Must Be Adopted.

London, Jan. 20.—Guild hall was packed to suffocation Tuesday to hear Joseph Chamberlain speak on his tariff proposals.

Mr. Chamberlain, who was accompanied by his wife, pointed out that while London was now the clearing house of the world, he doubted if that position could be maintained if the ancient fiscal superstition was to be upheld. Before it was too late a lesson should be learned from the fate of Venice, Holland and the Hanseatic states, whose greatness had vanished because they had no productive and creative energy behind them.



JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

The position of Great Britain was deteriorating, and though he anticipated no immediate catastrophe, the situation called loudly for some remedy.

It Tickled the Pope.

Rome, Jan. 20.—The rumor of the death of the pope, which was circulated in Madrid, having come to the ears of the pontiff, his holiness exclaimed to a friend: "What, already? Leo was left in peace for five years after his election, while with me these rumors have begun at only the end of a few months. It may be a good thing to look at this from a superstitious standpoint, but I am quite the other way and think it may even prolong my life."

King Peter Would Abdicate.

Vienna, Jan. 20.—King Peter of Servia, according to a report from Cettinje, Montenegro, published by the Neues Weiner Journal, is prepared to voluntarily renounce the throne and allow the powers to nominate his successor. The prince of Montenegro is said to have received a mandate from Russia to clear up the precarious situation in Servia and King Peter is alleged to have recognized the untenability of his position and to be willing to abdicate.

A Cabinet Dinner.

Washington, Jan. 20.—A cabinet dinner, given by Postmaster-General and Mrs. Payne last night, was perhaps the largest function of that character ever given in Washington, as in addition to the president and Mrs. Roosevelt there were about forty additional guests. Supervisors After New State Tax Legislation.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 20.—Supervisors representing thirty different counties assembled in this city in convention Tuesday, with George C. Winslow of Kalamazoo in the chair. An informal discussion of the question of paying for the care of the victims of contagious diseases and the compensation of county officers was held during the afternoon. Both were referred to special committees. On the latter question the delegates were unanimous in the impression that the stipendiary system should be superseded by the salary system.

By invitation the tax commission will meet the supervisors today for the purpose of discussing amendments to the existing tax laws and methods. The supervisors favor the changing of the legislation so as to give the commission an appellate jurisdiction instead of the power it now enjoys.

Big Blaze in Port Huron.

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 20.—Fire which broke out in the basement of J. W. Goulding & Co.'s jewelry, notions and wholesale millinery store shortly after 8 o'clock Tuesday morning caused losses which will aggregate $60,000. The fire was discovered by an employe, who gave the alarm. The firemen were soon on the scene, but the zero weather, backed by a high southwest wind, hampered them in their efforts and made the situation dangerous for a time. The flames spread rapidly, and it was but a short time before Goulding's place was doomed. The fire then spread to the stores of Kresge & Wilson, Ballentine Dry Goods Co., D. A. Fraser and L. Higer & Son, doing great damage.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. CASE 113,

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER VI.

"I will call on you every day. Until I change your orders don't step foot in this house. You might be followed. If anything important should happen, send a note to your wife, and she will inform me. Go and be prudent."

The door closed on Fanferlot as M. Lecoq passed into his bedroom.

In the twinkling of an eye he had divested himself of chief of the secret service. He took off his stiff cravat and gold spectacles and removed the close wig from his thick black hair. The official Lecoq had disappeared, leaving in his place the Lecoq whom nobody knew—a handsome man with a clear eye and resolute bearing. But he remained only for an instant. Seated before a dressing table, covered with more cosmetics, paints, perfumes, false hair and other unmentionable shams than the toilet tables of a modern belle, he began to undo the work of nature and make himself a new face. He worked slowly, handling his brushes with great care. But in an hour he had accomplished one of his daily masterpieces. When he had finished, he was no longer Lecoq. He was the large man with red whiskers whom Fanferlot failed to recognize.

"Well," he said, casting a last look in the mirror, "I have forgotten nothing. I have left nothing to chance. All my plans are fixed, and I shall make progress, provided the Squirrel does not waste time."

But Fanferlot was too happy to waste a minute. He did not run, he flew, toward the Palais de Justice. At last he was able to convince some one of his wonderful shrewdness. As to acknowledging that he was about to obtain a triumph with the ideas of another man, he never thought of it. It is generally in perfect good faith that the jackdaw struts in the peacock's feathers. His hopes were realized. If the judge was not absolutely convinced, he admired the ingenuity of the whole proceeding.

"This decides me," he said, dismissing Fanferlot. "I will file a favorable report today, and it is highly probable that the accused will be released tomorrow."

He began at once to write out one of those terrible decisions of "Not proved" which restores liberty, but not honor, to the accused man; which says that he is not guilty, but does not say he is innocent:

> Whereas there do not exist sufficient charges against the accused, Prosper Bertomy, in pursuance of article 128 of the Criminal Code we hereby declare that we find no grounds for prosecution against the aforesaid prisoner at this present time, and we order that he shall be released from the prison where he is confined and set at liberty by the jailer, etc.

When it was finished, "Well," he said to the clerk, "here is another of those crimes which justice cannot clear up—another file to be stowed away among the archives of the record office."

And his own hand wrote on the cover of the bundle of papers relating to Prosper's case the number of the package, "Case 113."

CHAPTER VII.

PROSPER BERTOMY had been languishing in his private cell for nine days when one Thursday morning the jailer came to inform him that his case had not been proved. He was conducted before the officer who had searched him when he arrived, and the contents of his pocket—his watch, penknife and several little pieces of jewelry—were restored to him. Then he was told to sign a large sheet of paper, which he did. He was then led across a dark passage and a door opened and shut behind him with a bang. He found himself on the quai. He was alone. He was free.

Free! Justice had confessed her inability to convict him of the crime of which he was accused. Free! He could walk about, he could breathe the pure air, but every door would be closed against him. A decision of "Not proved" had left him covered with suspicion. At the moment of his restoration to liberty Prosper so cruelly suffered from the horror of his situation that he could not repress a cry of rage and despair.

"I am innocent!" he cried out. "I am innocent!"

Two strangers who were passing stopped to look at him. They took him for a lunatic.

"No," he said, "no! I have not even the right to kill myself. No, I will not die until I have vindicated my innocence!"

On entering Chaptal street he stood before his own door, but hesitated to enter it. He suffered from the timidity which an honest man always feels when he knows he is viewed with suspicion. He dreaded to remain in the street. He entered. At seeing him the porter uttered an exclamation of glad surprise.

"Ah, you here, monsieur? I told every one you would come out as white as snow, and when I read in the papers that you were arrested for robbery, I said: 'My third floor lodger a thief? Never!'"

The congratulations of this man, maladroit but sincere, impressed Prosper painfully, and he cut them short by abruptly asking:

"And where are my servants?"

"Gone, monsieur. Your father paid and discharged them."

"I suppose you have my keys?"

"No, monsieur. When your father left this morning at 8 o'clock, he told me that a friend of his would take charge of your rooms until you should return. Of course you know who he is—a stout gentleman with red whiskers."

Prosper was astonished. What could be the meaning of one of his father's friends being in his rooms? He did not, however, betray his surprise.

"Yes, I know who he is," he said.

He ran up the stairs and knocked at his door. It was opened by his father's friend. He had been accurately described by the porter. A fat man with a red face, sensual lips, brilliant eyes and of rather coarse manners stood bowing. Prosper had never seen him before.

"Delighted to make your acquaintance, monsieur," he said.

He seemed to be perfectly at home. On the table lay a book which he had taken from the bookcase, and he appeared ready to do the honors of the house.

"I must confess, monsieur"— began Prosper.

"That you are surprised to find me here? So I suppose. Your father intended introducing me to you, but he was compelled to return this morning to Beaucaire, and I must add that he departed thoroughly convinced, as I myself am, that you never took a cent from M. Fauvel."

At this unexpected good news Prosper could not restrain an exclamation of joy.

"Here is a letter from your father which I was charged to give you. I hope it will serve as an introduction between us."

Prosper took the letter, opened it, and as he read his eyes grew brighter and the color returned to his pale cheeks. When he had finished, he held out his hand to the large man and said:

"My father, monsieur, tells me you are his best friend. He advises me to have absolute confidence in you and follow your counsel."

"Exactly. This morning your father said to me: 'Verduret'—that is my name—'Verduret, my son is in great trouble. He must be helped out.' I replied, 'I am ready,' and here I am. Now the ice is broken, is it not? Then let us go to work. What do you intend to do?"

"What do I intend to do?" he said angrily. "I wish to seek the villain who has ruined me!"

"Naturally. But have you any means of attaining that end?"

"None. Yet I shall succeed, because when a man devotes his whole life to an object he is certain to achieve it."

"Well said, M. Prosper, and, to be frank, I fully expected that this would be your purpose. I have therefore already begun to think and act for you. I have a plan. In the first place, you will sell this furniture, quit this house and disappear."

"Disappear!" cried Prosper indignantly. "Disappear! Why, monsieur? Do you not see that such a step would be a confession of guilt—would authorise the world to say that I am hiding so as to enjoy undisturbed the stolen fortune?"

"Well, what then?" said the man with the red whiskers coldly. "Did you not say just now that the sacrifice of your life is made? The skillful swimmer thrown into the river by malefactors is careful not to rise to the surface immediately. On the contrary, he dives and remains below as long as his breath holds out. He comes up again at a great distance and lands out of sight. Then, when he is supposed to be dead, lost forever to the sight of man, he rises up and has his vengeance. You have an enemy? Some petty imprudence will betray him. But while he sees you on the watch he will be on his guard."

It was with a sort of amazed submission that Prosper listened to this man who, though a friend of his father, was an utter stranger to himself.

He submitted to the ascendency of a nature more energetic than his own. In his helpless condition he was grateful to find a friend.

"I will follow your advice, monsieur," he said.

"I was sure you would. Let us decide upon the course you shall pursue. And remember that the proceeds of the sale will be needed. Have you any ready money? No, but you must have some. Knowing that you would need it at once, I brought here a furniture dealer, and he will give 12,000 francs for everything except the pictures."

The cashier could not refrain from shrugging his shoulders, which M. Verduret observed.

"Yes," said he, "it is hard, I will admit, but it is necessary. Listen. You are the invalid, and I am the doctor charged to cure you. If I cut to the quick, you will have to endure it. It is the only way to save you."

"Cut away, then, monsieur," answered Prosper, submitting.

"Well, we will hurry, for time passes. You have a friend, M. de Lagors?"

"Raoul? Yes, monsieur, an intimate friend."

"Now tell me, who is this fellow?"

The term "fellow" seemed to wound Prosper.

"M. de Lagors, monsieur," he said, piqued, "is M. Fauvel's nephew. He is a rich young man, handsome, intelligent, cultured and the best friend I have."

"Hum!" said M. Verduret. "I shall be delighted to make the acquaintance of one adorned by so many good qualities. I must let you know that I wrote him a note in your name asking him to come here, and he sent word that he would be here directly."

"What!" cried the astonished Prosper. "Do you suppose"—

"Oh, I suppose nothing. Only I must see this young man. Also I have arranged and will submit to you a little plan of conversation"—

A ring at the bell interrupted M. Verduret.

"The dickens! Adieu to my plan! Here he is! Where can I hide so as to hear and see?"

"There in my bedroom. Leave the door open and the curtain down."

A second ring was heard.

"I must go," said Prosper.

"Now, remember, Prosper," said M. Verduret in a warning tone, "not one word to this man about your plans or about me. Pretend to be discouraged, helpless, hesitating."

And he disappeared behind the curtain as Prosper ran to open the door.

Prosper's portrait of M. de Lagors had not been exaggerated. So handsome a face and manly a figure could belong only to a noble character. Although Raoul said that he was twenty-four he appeared to be not more than twenty. He had a superb figure, well knit and supple; a beautiful white brow, shaded by soft chestnut curly hair, and soft blue eyes which beamed with frankness.

His first impulse was to throw himself into Prosper's arms. "My poor, dear friend!" he said, taking Prosper's hands. "My poor Prosper!"

But beneath these affectionate demonstrations there was a certain constraint, which, if it escaped the cashier, was noticed by M. Verduret.

"Your letter, my dear Prosper," said Raoul after being seated, "made me ill, I was so frightened by it. I asked myself if you could have lost your mind. Then I left everything to come to you."

Prosper did not seem to hear him. He was preoccupied about the letter he had not written. What were its contents? Who was this man whose assistance he had accepted?

"You must not feel discouraged," continued M. de Lagors. "At your age you may commence life anew. Your friends are still left to you. Rely upon me. I am rich. Half of my fortune is at your disposal."

"Thanks, Raoul," he said, with emotion; thank you! But unfortunately all the money in the world would be of no use now."

"Why so? What are you going to do? Do you propose to remain in Paris?"

"I know not, Raoul. I have made no plans yet. My mind is confused."

"I will tell you what to do," replied Raoul quickly. "You must start afresh. Until this mysterious robbery is explained it will never do for you to remain in Paris."

"And if it is never explained?"

"Only the more reason for your remaining in oblivion. I have been talking about you to Clameran. You are unjust to him, for he is your friend. 'If I were in Prosper's place,' he said, 'I would turn everything into money and embark for America. There I would make a fortune and return to crush with my millions those who have suspected me.'"

This advice offended Prosper's pride, but he said nothing. He was thinking of what the stranger had said to him.

"Well?" said Raoul.

"I will think it over. I will see. I would like to know what M. Fauvel says."

"My uncle? I suppose you know that I have declined the offer he made me to enter his banking house and we have almost quarreled. I have not set foot in his house for over a month, but I hear of him occasionally."

"Through whom?"

"Through your friend, young Cavaillon. My uncle, they say, is more distressed by this affair than you are. He is scarcely ever at the bank and wanders about as if in a terrible dream."

"And Mme. Fauvel and"—Prosper hesitated—"and Mlle. Madeleine?"

"Oh," said Raoul lightly, "my aunt is as devout as ever. She has a mass said for the benefit of the sinner. As to my pretty, icy cousin, she cannot bring herself down to common matters, because she is entirely absorbed in preparing for the fancy ball to be given day after tomorrow by MM. Jandidier. She has discovered, so one of her friends told me, a wonderful dressmaker, a stranger who has suddenly appeared from no one knows where, who is making a costume of Catherine de' Medici's maid of honor, and it is to be a marvel."

Excessive suffering brings with it a sort of insensibility. Prosper had reached that state of impassibility from which he never expected to be aroused when this last blow made him cry out with pain:

"Madeleine! Oh, Madeleine!"

M. de Lagors, pretending not to have heard him, arose.

"I must leave you now, my dear Prosper," he said. "Saturday I will see these ladies at the ball and will bring you news of them. Keep up your courage and remember that, whatever happens, you can count on me."

Raoul shook Prosper's hand and left the house. Prosper remained immovable, overcome by disappointment.

He was aroused from his gloomy reverie by the red whiskered man, who came from his concealment.

"So these are your friends."

"Yes," said Prosper, with bitterness. "You heard him offer me half of his fortune?"

M. Verduret shrugged his shoulders with an air of compassion.

"That was very stingy on his part," he said. "Why did he not offer the whole? Offers cost nothing. But I have no doubt that this pretty boy would cheerfully give 10,000 francs to put the ocean between you and him."

"He, monsieur? Why so?"

"Who knows? Perhaps for the same reason that he had not set foot for a month in his uncle's house."

"But that is the truth, monsieur. I am sure of it."

"Naturally," said M. Verduret, with a provoking smile. "But," he continued seriously, "we have devoted enough time to this fair youth. Now be good enough to change your dress, and we will go and call on M. Fauvel."

This proposal seemed revolting to Prosper.

"Never!" he exclaimed, with excitement. "No, never will I voluntarily set eyes on that wretch!"

This resistance did not surprise M. Verduret.

"I can understand your feelings toward him," said he, "but at the same time I hope you will change your mind. For the same reason that I wished to see M. de Lagors do I wish to see M. Fauvel. It is necessary, you understand. Are you so very weak that you cannot restrain yourself for five minutes? I shall introduce myself as one of your relatives, and you need not speak a word."

"If it is absolutely necessary," said Prosper, "if you wish"—

"It is necessary. Come on. Hurry and fix yourself up a little. It is getting late, and I am hungry. We will breakfast on our way there."

Prosper had hardly passed into his bedroom when the bell rang again. M. Verduret opened the door. It was the porter, who handed him a thick letter.

"This letter," said he, "was left this morning for M. Bertomy. I was so flustered when he came that I forgot to hand it to him. It is a very odd looking letter, is it not, monsieur?"

It was indeed a singular epistle. The address was not written, but formed of printed letters, carefully cut from a book and pasted on the envelope.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. Concerning

VII

We have seen that Baptism is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God—than which there is none other door under Heaven given among men whereby we must enter in. Let us next inquire what is the special blessing of Baptism—the Spiritual grace, which is bestowed upon every one who is baptized.

Evidently, the special significance of any Door or Entrance-way depends entirely upon the condition or relation into which it admits us. For instance the Door to the King's palace serves an altogether different purpose from the Door to the King's prison. Now Baptism, being the Door of Entrance to the Kingdom of God, admits us into the relationship of "Subject to the King." Accordingly, if we would understand the real significance of Baptism we must determine the relationship which exists between the subject and his King in the Kingdom of God.

We have the King's own statement of that relationship in John 15:5—"I am the vine, ye are the branches." (We must understand our blessed Lord to mean, of course, that He is the Root or Stem of the Vine). By Baptism, therefore, we are united to Christ as a branch is grafted into a vine. (Rom. 6:3; Gal. 3:27.)

The Apostle St. Paul uses a similar figure to explain the Union with Christ which is consummated in Baptism, viz., that of the human body. In 1 Cor. 12:13 he writes: "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." (That is, the Body of Christ. Cf. Eph. 1:22, 23). That is to say, Union with Christ is consummated by the Holy Spirit in Baptism. (The Kingdom of God is a Spiritual Kingdom as we have already seen—because of the presence and operation of the Holy Spirit therein. Accordingly, when one is admitted into the Kingdom of God by Baptism, he is admitted into the presence and operation of the Holy Spirit. The operation of the Holy Spirit at Baptism consists of forming the Union with Christ. Thus St. Paul could say "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body;" for though the minister performs the outward sign, it is the Holy Spirit Who performs the thing signified — Who "baptizes into Christ." Rom. 6:3: Gal. 3:26).

Now let us go a step further and ask, What follows from this Union with Christ which is consummated in Baptism? When a branch is grafted into a vine it partakes of the life of the vine. It is grafted into the vine for that very purpose. So those who are grafted into the True Vine by being "baptized into Christ" partake of the life of Christ. They are baptized into Him for that very purpose. Thus the result of Union with Christ is the receiving of a New Life, viz., the Life of Christ. We are born again" of the Second Adam by the operation of the Holy Spirit in Baptism—born again "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." This is that "Adoption of Sons" which constitute those who have been baptized the very Children of God. (Rom. 8:15, 16, 17; Gal. 4:4, 5, 6. Cf. the Lord's Prayer—the Prayer of the Kingdom.)

Thus the special blessing of Baptism, the Spiritual grace which is bestowed upon every one who is baptized, is Union with Christ—which implies the New Birth i. e., the being "Born Again" "Regenerated" by the Spirit of God.

We can still better understand now why our blessed Lord should say, "He that is baptized shall be saved." He must be baptized, because only by being baptized can he become a "member of Christ the child of God and an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven"—which as we have seen is what is involved in entering into the Kingdom of God.

We can also see very clearly that when our blessed Lord said to Nicodemus (John 3:3) "Verily, verily I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God," He was referring to the New Birth of Baptism (as He explained immediately afterward when asked how the New Birth can be received—"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man to be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingom of God").

For Baptism is the "Washing of Regeneration" (Tit. 3:5. Cf. 1 Pet. 3:21—observe what is said to "save" us in each case).

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and egularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

IT'S JUST THE THING

Every person should see to it that their blood is in order each Spring. Nature must purify the blood. That is the only way it can be purified. In order that nature may do its part in cleansing the blood from the Winter's accumulation of impurities the

KIDNEYS AND LIVER MUST BE ACTIVE

so that they may carry off the impurities; there is no remedy that will do this quicker and better than

and the reason this remedy is so much more successful than all others is because it strengthens the kidneys and liver and puts these organs in shape to perform their natural functions.

IT STRENGTHENS THE STOMACH

so that the food may be properly digested and the body is consequently nourished and all the organs strengthened, this then means a strong body and health.

PROOF

J. Koerner, Agent Grand Union Tea Company at Niles, Mich., writes: I use Kinyon's Blood and Kidney Remedy in my family every year. I find it the greatest blood purifier and tonic. It regulates the kidneys and liver and purifies the blood, and with this simple remedy I always keep my family well

READ THE STORY OF MICHIGAN IN PEARSON'S MAGAZINE FOR FEBRUARY

DAVID S. BARRY has told the history of Michigan concisely, accurately and dramatically. No State has a story more romantic.

DO YOU KNOW that PEARSON'S entertains more than 1,250,000 people every month?

President Roosevelt, at Concord, N. H., August 26th, 1902, said: "About all we have a right to expect from Government is that it will see that the cards are not stacked." He was referring to the great industrial combinations.

With a view to showing the methods pursued in the organization and manipulation of many of the giant industrial consolidations. PEARSON'S will publish a series of articles by Henry George, Jr., the Amalgamation, Inflation, and Manipulation of Copper being the theme of the first two articles. The Asphalt Catastrophe is to be the third.

Presenting an authentic, brilliant and thrilling history of frontier tragedies, including Custer's successful attack upon Black Kettle, Custer's Fatal Defeat at the Little Big Horn, Forsyth's Famous Fight on the Arickaree, the story of Powell's desperate defence of Piney Island, the Massacre of Fetterman's Command, Crook's Campaign, Wheaton's Campaign in the Lava Beds of Oregon.

Tom Nast, Cartoonist.

Gen. U. S. Grant said he considered Tom Nast the greatest single figure that had come out of the Civil War. Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine has prepared for PEARSON'S a series of articles from scrap books and memoranda given to him by Tom Nast shortly before his death. This most important set of papers, which includes the Overthrow of the Tweed Ring, the Civil War Period, the Horrors of Slavery, the Reconstruction Period, the Greeley Presidential Campaign, and many other articles presenting vivid pictures of the times when history was warm in the making, will shortly appear.

Following is the schedule thus far planned: The Ruse of the Dowager Empress; the Abdication of Francis Joseph; the Death of Queen Draga; King Edward's Tour; The Black Pope; The Secret History of Panama.

The Lord and the Church Walks.

It is supposed that the churches have to do with the souls of the members, but perhaps in winter it would be well to think of the soles of the feet as well as those of the heart. All winter the walks in front of the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist churches have scarcely been cleaned. Now the Lord puts the snow on the walks so why would it not be well to cause the janitors to clean it off.

COUNCIL

And it will be disposed of maybe at the next Regular Meeting.

Three years ago there was talk of an Electric road going through Tecumseh, at that time from AnnArbor to Adrian through Saline. An ordinance was passed by the village but not with the right-of-way on Chicago street.

Now the time has arrived when the village is asked to give the right-of-way to another company and this time the road proposes to go east and west. Now there are many things to think of before giving any railway a 30 year franchise and run their track on the main street of Tecumseh.

It is no secret with the men, who are securing the right of way that they propose to run freight of all kinds at all times through the streets of Tecumseh.

It is a question with the HERALD if such a thing should be allowed on a track that operates on Chicago street in Tecumseh. At the present time Chicago street in Tecumseh is the most beautiful street in Lenawee Co. and come to put on the sides of the street two more lines of electric poles necessary for the railroad, will it not with the freight traffic spoil Chicago street. If it were necessary it would be different, but it is not and taking all things into consideration there is a much better way for the road to go through, both for the road and Tecumseh.

First the Globe Mill hill is very narrow the road could go north at the foot of the hill, thence come up Logan street to the Steam Mill, thence south on Maumee street to the D. T. & M. railroad, thence west parallel with the railroad to the west line of the Cairns farm taking the right of way off the back end of the Stacy and Cairnes farms thence north to the Chicago road. From Abner Wilson's home to the Price place on Chicago street, the creek is close to the road and should the railroad run on Chicago road this would be a frightful place for teams to pass with the railroad running up one side of this narrow place. Cummings street is already given up to railroads and there would be no harm done to any property there.

If the Adrian, Saline road had been built at all it would have come as quickly on the route proposed as on Chicago street and this road will build as quickly on these streets as on Chicago street.

The HERALD is in favor of an electric road if it can be built so as not to spoil the town and whatever is for the benefit of the village is for the benefit of the road.

These men who are proposing this road are working for themselves and well they should and whatever concessions are made to the village must be demanded NOW OR NEVER.

The village council will certainly remember this and if the road is built it is not for a day but FOR ALL TIME, the same as we have built our homes and have worked all our lives.

Saved from terrible death.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Auction.

The undersigned will sell at public auction on the premises, situated four miles west and three-fourths of a mile south of Tecumseh, on the old Joe Slater farm, on Wednesday, Jan. 27 at 12 o'clock sharp, the following property:

The spirit of winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

BANQUET

At the Presbyterian Church.

MRS. ANNA BRAMBLE'S

Eightieth Birthday Party and other Social Affairs.

The members of the "red" division of the Presbyterian Sunday school, who lost in the contest for new members, entertained the winning side in the church parlors on Tuesday evening from 7 to 10:30 o'clock. The parlors were tastefully decorated in red, white and blue bunting and curtains. About 8 o'clock a short program was rendered. The first number on the program was a vocal solo by Mrs. J. J. Orr, which was well received. Finley DeSpelder then read the following original story of the defeat of the "reds" written after the style of the biblical chronicles.

And it came to pass in the days of Teddy, where peace and prosperity were in the land and William was high priest in the temple, that a mighty division arose among the Tecumsehites and the people were divided.

And the hearts of the one part of the people were stony and courageous, and they were not afraid or dismayed, for their disposition was bright, and they called the name of this people the Reds.

But the others were not so, and the name of this people was called the Blues.

Howbeit certain of the high priests and scribes and takers of money withdrew themselves from the people, for they feared the people and loved their office.

And the people took unto themselves leaders, and the leader of the Blues was Alice of the house of Cutting, and the leader of the Reds was May, a Lowryite.

And the disension of the people waxed strong and hot, and the Blues bestirred themselves greatly.

And labored mightily, and other people were intreated of them, and heard their supplication, and joined themselves unto them and the Blues prospered.

And in their prosperity the Blues waxed strong and courageous, and their hearts waxed glad and their disposition waxed bright and they became like unto the Reds.

And the Reds did not stiffen their necks against them, but they opened their hearts and took them back unto themselves.

And they made them a feast and they ate and drank and were merry.

And the division of the people was set at naught, and there was great joy in the land of the Tecumsehites.

Miss Mary Mills then gave an instrumental solo which elicited well deserved applause. Miss Mingay gave a dialect reading and responded to an encore. Little Josephine Orr closed the program with a pretty vocal solo. Then followed a number of charades by members of the "red" side, one of them being a representative of single blessedness—and its Leap year too. After the program the guests were requested to pass into the dining room, where refreshments were served from a daintily decorated table.

Eighty mile stones at the end of eighty years to become an octageniarian! Rarely is opportunity given to extend so pleasing and graceful a courtesy as that so cleverly planned Wednesday, the 20th of Jan., by the long time friends of Mrs. Anna Wixom—Bramble of this village, the occasion being her 80th birthday.

Its near approach was quietly whispered to a few neighbors and church friends, whereupon 'twas decided to celebrate the event by a quiet little home reception. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the day and the dangerous condition of getting about, a goodly number, including the son and three grandchildren, assembled at her home to congratulate her on the four score years already past and to hope that many more mile stones might yet be added to her long and useful journey of life.

Mrs. Bramble, as Anna Wixom, was married in 1847 to Jehiel Bramble in Cayuga, N. Y., and three years later determined to "go west and grow up with the country" and located in Macon township this county, fifty-five years ago when the surroundings and advantages were primitive compared to those of today.

After two years' residence in Macon they sold their 80 acre farm and bought one of 100 acres four miles west of Tecumseh, where they lived 35 years in the enjoyment of agreeable associates and desirable church privileges. The old home has always been retained and is now occupied by the only surviving child, her son, Clement. This son and three beautiful daughters were born to them, but the daughters, one by one, crossed the Great Divide while yet in the beauty of young womanhood.

About 20 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Bramble moved into town to rest from hard labor and be near the Baptist church, of which they have always been devoted members.

Mrs. Bramble was invited to dine with a friend, ostensibly as a birthday recognition. About three o'clock a carriage was sent for her and on arriving home she found a happy and a complete surprise, where old and familiar faces smiled a welcome, where hand shaking and happy returns went round and round and a joyous afternoon was spent. Delightful refreshments were served, spiced by interesting incidents of early life in Michigan.

Though 80 years have swept past her Mrs. Bramble is remarkable for undiminished clearness of mind and memory, all her faculties being now the equal of many, far younger. Her eye is bright with intelligence, and not a gray hair has yet appeared among the dark locks.

Her life has been full of good deeds and cheery and bright as a girl, she attracks the young as well as the old, by her genial way, and manner. Thus she waits for the loved master, who will some day beckon her away, to join her husband, who journeyed on before her one year ago.

The friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Lynne Butrick gave them a little surprise Thursday evening as a sort of farewell before their removal from the neighborhood.

About four o'clock a little procession of ladies with tea kettles, coffee pots, trays of sandwiches and cake baskets, rapped for admission at the back door, and very soon a long table was laid for sixteen people in the dining room and a bountiful banquet served. The self invited guests remained until a late hour playing finch and having a jolly neighborhood visit.

Mr. and Mrs. Butrick will occupy Charles Slaytons' house while Mr. and Mrs. Slayton are absent in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Reynolds entertained a party of friends at a three course dinner yesterday. Covers were laid for twelve. Those who enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Reynold's hospitality were Mr. and Mrs. John F. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Webster Love, Mr. and Mrs. John Burtless, Mrs. Clarinda Pawson, Mrs. Eusebia Burtless of Tipton, Mrs. Lora Stevens and two children of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Cairnes and daughter Lora, of Tecumseh.

Tuesday afternoon, the girls of the seventh grade room very quietly planned a little surprise for their teacher, Miss Hess. At the close of the afternoon session, they stayed ostensibly to have their examples explained, and as they had planned, Miss Hess left the room for a few moments they took advantage of it, and spread her desk with apples, peanuts, popcorn and candy. They spent a merry hour, in the school room.

Miss Libbie Chase who teaches in the Brick Yard School District entertained her pupils, at her home, Tuesday evening. They spent a delightful evening playing games, and also rendered a short program. Refreshments were served, which closed an extremely pleasant evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Deery pleasantly entertained a party of young people from Clinton at their home on Ottawa street, Wednesday evening. The evening was spent in playing progressive pedro, afterwhich refreshments were served.

A party of young people from Adrian formed a sleighride party to the home of Miss Elsie Zimmerman Tuesday night, where they spent an enjoyable evening playing progressive pedro. A nice supper wos served.

PROTECTS THE SYSTEM AGAINST CATARRH

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." A few breaths of Hyomei through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit will check a cold or the grip at the start, and prevent serious and lasting illness.

In all catarrhal troubles and diseases of the air passages, Hyomei has a positive action not possessed by any other medicine or treatment. It is pleasant and convenient to use; simply put 20 drops of Hyomei in the inhaler and breathe it a few minutes, four times a day. In this way, every particle of air that enters the lungs is charged with a healing balsam that kills all catarrhal germs, soothes and allays the irritated mucous membrane, vitalizes the blood with ozone, and makes a permanent and complete cure.

Hyomei outfit costs only $1, and contains an inhaler, medicine dropper and bottle of Hyomei. The inhaler lasts a lifetime and when more Hyomei is needed, extra bottles can be obtained for 50c.

C. A. Wright gives us personal guarantee with every Hyomei outfit he sells to refund the money if it does not cure.

The weariness, the tired feeling,
The pains and aches of kidney ills
Are serious—if neglected.
Dangerous urinary troubles follow.

Mr. F. A. Ferguson, tinsmith, residing in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I had symptoms of kidney trouble. The kidney secretions were very irregular and at times too frequent and highly colored. Having seen so many cases of severe kidney trouble I thought it wise to do something at once, so I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store and took them. I began to improve from the very start and continued to do so. I emphatically declare Doan's Kidney Pills to be up to the representations made for them."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

CITY NOW IN ASHES

Fire Completely Destroys Norwegian Town of Malesung.

THOUSANDS HOMELESS PEOPLE

Panic Prevented Inhabitants Saving Anything—Ships in Port Sunk to Prevent Being Consumed—Aid Extended—Royal Family Give Succor.

Malesung, Norway, Jan. 25.—Fire swept over this town Saturday, destroying every building in it with the exception of the hospital. The 11,000 inhabitants of Malesund were compelled to camp in the open, as only a few damaged and uninhabited houses were left standing. The children of the town had to be housed temporarily in the church at Borgund.

The panic among the people was so great after the outbreak of the flames that all attempts at leadership or discipline became out of the question, but no excesses were committed. The people first endeavored to save some of their property, but they soon found they had quite enough to do to save their own lives. The destruction of the town was complete within a couple of hours from the time the fire started.

Over twenty steam fishing boats and many sailing smacks were sunk in the harbor in order to save them from the flames, but three steamers and many smacks were burned. It is believed now that only three persons lost their lives.

Succor has arrived from Molde, Bergen and other places and provisions are being distributed. Relief committees have been formed and have invited public subscriptions. The king and queen of Sweden and Norway have contributed $1,500 to a relief fund and all the other members of the royal [illegible] have also subscribed.

A majority of the inhabitants of the town lost everything they possessed, and only in a very few cases were the damages covered by insurance. Thousands of persons had to spend twenty-four hours in the open fields, where they were without food and exposed to a bitterly cold wind and a rainstorm.

WOMAN OF NERVE.

Slugged Escaping Prisoners With Unloaded Revolver.

Norristown, Pa., Jan. 25.—Warden Abraham Gotwals and Samuel Beckwith of the Montgomery county jail were murderously assaulted last night by two prisoners, who made a desperate attempt to escape but failed. Beckwith was so badly battered that he had to be taken to the Charity hospital.

The prisoners who made the assault are Fred Bond and George Cornwallis. They were awaiting trial on the charge of larceny. Last night Cornwallis called Beckwith to the cell, saying he believed that Bond, who occupied the same cell, was seriously ill. Beckwith summoned Warden Gotwals who, not suspecting anything, entered the cell. The instant he stepped inside Cornwallis closed the door, and both prisoners seized iron bars and pounded the warden until he became unconscious. Then the two prisoners left the cell and assaulted Beckwith, who had made a desperate attempt to help his chief. Cornwallis then took Beckwith's keys and revolver and the two men started for the main entrance.

The noise of the assault aroused others in the jail. Mrs. Gotwals ran into the corridor with a revolver and met the prisoners on the way to the gate. She pointed her weapon at them and ordered them to return to their cells. This with the screams of Mrs. Gotwals' six-year-old daughter frightened the men and they returned. Mrs. Gotwals' revolver, by the way, was not loaded.

PANAMA DISCUSSION.

Will Be All Important Business in Senate This Week.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The senate has no program for the present week beyond a continuation of the debate of the Panama question. A number of addresses are still to be made on both sides of the controversy, and it is quite certain that the debate will continue for many days.

The house will devote practically the entire week to consideration of the army and urgent deficiency appropriation bills. The former is now before the house, and Chairman Hemenway of the committee on appropriations has given notice that the latter measure will be called up immediately on the disposition of the former.

Caught Blowing Up a Safe.

Lexington, Ky., Jan. 25.—Samuel Baughman, colored, was detected blowing the safe in the ticket office of the Louisville & Nashville railway Sunday. He had demolished desks and scattered tickets and papers over the floor and was placing blasting powder in the safe when detected by J. W. West, ticket agent. Baughman jumped through a window, West firing at him. The police caught Baughman. The machinist who opened the safe said the entire building and other buildings would have been demolished had the fuse been lighted.

Lineman Electrocuted.

TRAFFIC IS HARD HIT

TRAINS AND CARS SNOWBOUND

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 25.—The heavy snowstorm of the past few days, together with the ice, has resulted in the complete tying up of the Detroit, Ypsilanti, Ann Arbor & Jackson electric service on both sides of this city. Two cars are stuck in the drifts between here and Ypsilanti and five between here and Jackson. Those between here and Ypsilanti were deserted by their passengers, some of whom returned to this city and the remainder of whom went on to Ypsilanti in bob-sleighs furnished by nearby farmers. The cars that left here for Jackson were filled with passengers, but their condition is not known beyond the fact that the cars are stuck and unable to move either way.

The main trouble is that, owing to the continued fall of snow and the constant sweeping of it from the track the road is left at the bottom of a deep ravine with snow banked high on both sides. The slightest wind blows this hollow full of snow, and when the snowplow comes along it is lifted clear above the tracks by the frozen banks and all efforts to clear a passage are useless.

Only Went Two Miles.

The car which left Ypsilanti at 7:15 o'clock Sunday morning arrived here at 12:15 and immediately started upon the return trip with sixteen passengers on board, including Superintendent Merrill of the road. The car, like all others, was preceded by a snowplow, [illegible] night, when its supply of coal had given out, it had reached the Stone schoolhouse, two miles east of here, and was abandoned by the passengers.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Jan. 25.—Benton Harbor was in the grip of the worst snowstorm last night known in many years. Farmers a few miles from the city report much damage. Thousands of bushels of corn are yet in the fields in this county and cannot be gathered on account of the deep snow which has covered the ground for sixty days, and farmers are compelled to buy feed for their stock.

Mariette, Mich., Jan. 25.—Three trains and a snowplow are snowbound here. About thirty passengers are being cared for by local hotels. The snowplow is stuck in a bank east of the yards. This division of the Pere Marquette is completely tied up by the worst storm in years.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 25.—The worst blizzard of the season prevailed here Saturday night and Sunday, with a heavy fall of snow and zero temperature. Trains due Saturday night did not arrive until Sunday. The interurban cars were put completely out of business and the city street car lines are crippled.

Ovid Badly Scorched.

Ovid, Mich., Jan. 23.—Fire, which started about 6 o'clock last night in the basement of T. H. Henderson's dry goods store, a two-story building, completely destroyed it with the contents, together with the grocery store of W. H. Hathaway, and also damaged the clothing stock of D. E. Cowan. The loss altogether is about $40,000. The stores of Henderson and Hathaway were the largest in the town. The fire is thought to have started from a furnace.

Died of Criminal Operation.

Saginaw, Mich., Jan. 23.—Lizzie Goetz, a 17-year-old girl, died last night at St. Mary's hospital, the victim of a criminal operation. She was taken to the hospital some days ago, but the trouble was not ascertained until too late. The police have arrested Dr. Mosand of Lapeer avenue, charged with the offense, but the man in the case has not been found. The inquest is called for today.

Almost Killed by Snowball.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 23.—Charles Letts, an eight-year-old boy, was struck on the head by a frozen snowball and almost killed. He was found wandering about the streets in a semi-conscious condition and taken home, but did not fully recover his reason until hours after. A stocking cap protected his head and doubtless saved him from being killed.

Lost Arm Crawling Under Train.

Durand, Mich., Jan. 23.—John G. Jones, employed by the Grand Trunk railway here, nearly lost his life in a very careless manner. He was crawling under a freight when the train began to move. He slipped on the ice and was caught under the wheels. His right arm was cut off close to the shoulder.

New Rural Routes.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Rural free delivery established to commence March 1 in Michigan: Athens, Calhoun county, additional service route 1, length of route 21¼ miles, area covered 18 square miles, population served 486, number of houses on route 108.

Stole From Fellow Students.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 23.—James L. Handy, a junior law student at the university, whose home is in Philadelphia, pleaded guilty to simple larceny and was fined $100 and $13 costs. He stole property to the value of $33 from the rooms of students and was arrested on a charge of grand larceny.

Arrested on Old Warrant.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 23.—William Linderman, a Chicago butcher, waived examination on a charge of seduction preferred by Miss Augusta Redies Friday afternoon and was bound over to the circuit court under $500 bail. The warrant was issued four years ago.

JAPAN HAS RIGHT TO

Land Troops in Korea, Admitted by Russians.

TROUBLE IN LITTLE KINGDOM

St. Petersburg, Jan. 25.—Reports of an alarming nature of the situation there continue to pour out of the far east. These include the statements that the Japanese are landing an army at Masampho, Korea, and that 3,000 Russian troops are crossing the Yalu river. The reported dispatch of a Chinese army of soldiers trained by European officers beyond the great wall to preserve order in Manchuria cannot be confirmed here, and the reports of the Japanese at Masampho and the Russians at the Yalu are discredited at the foreign office here and by M. Kurino, the Japanese minister to Russia.

While the Russian government understands the situation in Korea to be disturbed and possibly threatening, it has no information of a situation grave enough to warrant the landing of a large Japanese force there. Russia freely admits Japan's right, under existing conventions, to land in Korea a reasonable number of soldiers to preserve order; but the landing of an army at this stage of the negotiations could not be viewed with equanimity. M. Kurino is in no way anxious because of the delay in Russia's response to the latest Japanese note, and says that Japan is not pressing for an immediate reply. "Russia will be given all the time she needs," the minister is quoted as saying.

Washington, Jan. 25.—The state department has received official information of an attack Sunday by a mob of native Koreans on an electric car in Korea, the line being owned by Americans, because of the fact that it had killed a Korean. The news came in the following cablegram, received under Sunday's date, from Minister Allen at Seoul:

"This morning on the electric railway, which is the property of American citizens, a Korean was accidentally and unavoidably killed. Thereupon a mob of natives attacked and partially destroyed the car. The operators of the car would have been injured had it not been for the presence of mind and action of our guard, and serious riot would have occurred."

Although there have been previous reports of disturbances in Korea, this is the first mob attack made thus far on property of Americans. The railroad is owned and operated by Americans, H. R. Bostwick of San Francisco and H. Collbran being its principal officers. It runs through the heart of Seoul, the Korean capital.

The guard which made the rescue came from the American legation. It consists of 100 marines, who were sent there some time ago to be on hand for the protection of Americans and their property. Reinforcement of this guard has been urged and could be made in a week's time by details of marines from the Philippines, but nothing has been decided on this point. Conditions in Korea are recognized to be critical, and the state department is keeping in close touch with the situation.

No fresh instructions have been sent as yet as a result of the mob's attack.

BELIEVE IT A HOAX.

Cap, Coat and Hatchet Give Evidence of Murder of Jacob Haas.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 23.—Under different circumstances the discovery of a big brown fur coat, a cap with a spot of blood on it and two or three cuts, and an ugly hatchet in an alley would cause the police to assume that someone had been murdered. Such paraphernalia, belonging to one Jacob Haas of Ann Arbor, is now in possession of the police, it having been found in the rear of 73 Ledyard street early yesterday morning. The man has mysteriously disappeared, but the police do not believe he was murdered. They incline to the theory that he is voluntarily missing for reasons best known to himself—and possibly his creditors.

Captain McDonnell and his men think that no crime had been committed, but rather that the clothes and weapon had been left there as a ruse. Papers bearing Haas' name were found in the pockets of the coat.

A dispatch from Orion states that Haas was seen there Friday.

BIG PLANT BURNED.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Jan. 23.—Fire last night destroyed the plants of the Hall & Munson Co. at Bay Mills, twelve miles west of here, valued at $300,000. The wood-working plant, sawmill and box factory are in ruins, and the fire is still burning. The origin of the flames cannot be learned.

A fire company went from here to the scene on a special train. The plant is insured, but the amount cannot be learned. The fire throws 300 men out of work. The town will probably be left desolate, as the company is not in a financial condition to rebuild, and timber is getting scarce.

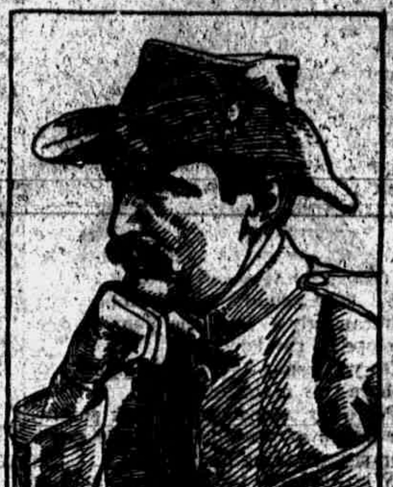
COLONEL LYNCH FREE.

Lipton Obtains Liberty For Condemned Irish Soldier.

London, Jan. 25.—The Daily Telegraph this morning says it understands that Colonel Arthur Lynch, who commanded the Irish brigade against the British forces during the war in South Africa and who was afterwards convicted of treason and sentenced to imprisonment for life, was liberated Saturday morning "on license." Lynch has not received the royal pardon.



COLONEL ARTHUR LYNCH.

The Associated Press learns that the liberation of Colonel Lynch is the outcome of an interesting series of events. When Michael Davitt was last in the United States he saw President Roosevelt, who mentioned Colonel Lynch to him, saying he had once entertained him at Albany. The president expressed great interest in the case and regretted he could not suggest clemency without laying himself open to a palpable snub. On his return to England Mr. Davitt mentioned his conversation with President Roosevelt to Sir Thomas Lipton and to Mrs. Lynch, who has suffered bitterly since her husband's arrest. He also made a pathetic appeal to Sir Thomas, who then personally interceded with King Edward on behalf of the condemned fellow-Irishman. Without hesitation [illegible] prompt[illegible] the home secretary of his wishes in the matter and the prisoner was released.

OBEYED DIVINE BEHEST.

Dunkirk, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Miss Hannah Hall, 30 years of age, was murdered Sunday at her home in Van Buren by her brother, Isaac Hall, who gave himself up to the police. Hall, who is 33 years old, declares that he obeyed a divine behest when he killed his sister.

He attacked her while she was asleep, first shooting her. Then dragging the wounded woman through the house, he cut her throat and finally placed her neck across a choping block and completely severed the head from the body.

Hall and his sister lived alone, both parents being dead. Until this time Hall was considered a model farmer, and his sister was a great favorite. Hall was religiously inclined and there is no doubt that he suddenly became insane.

Got a Severe Scorching.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 25.—Fire Sunday destroyed six blocks of frame business houses at Sour Lake and got into the Cannon tract in the Oil fields, doing considerable damage. The loss is placed at $200,000 on first estimates. The fire was placed under control with the assistance of aid summoned from Beaumont.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 25.—Martin E. Crill, who was paroled by Governor Bliss about six months ago, was arrested for intoxication. Steps will probably be taken to have him returned to prison, where he was serving a fifteen-year sentence for conveying tools to prisoners in the county jail.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER VII.

"Oh, ho!" cried M. Verduret. "What is this?" Then, turning toward the porter, he said, "Wait till I return."

He went into the next room and closed the door. There he found Prosper, who had heard the bell ring and was anxious to know what was going on.

"Here is a letter for you," said M. Verduret.

Prosper at once tore open the envelope.

Some bank notes dropped out. He counted them. There were ten.

Prosper's face turned purple.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"We will read the letter and find out," replied M. Verduret.

The letter, like the address, was composed of printed words cut out and pasted on the paper.

It was short, but explicit:

> My Dear Prosper—A friend who knows the horror of your situation sends this succor. There is one heart, be assured, that shares your sufferings. Go away. Leave France. You are young. The future is before you. Go, and may this money help you.

As M. Verduret read the note Prosper's rage increased. He was angry and perplexed, for he could not explain the rapidly succeeding events which were so calculated to mystify his already confused brain.

"Everybody wishes me to go away!" he cried. "Then there must be a conspiracy against me."

M. Verduret smiled with satisfaction.

"At last you begin to open your eyes. You begin to understand. Yes, there are people who hate you because of the evil they have done you. There are people to whom your presence in Paris is a perpetual menace and who will not feel safe till they are rid of you."

"But who are these people, monsieur? Tell me who presumes to send this money?"

"If I knew, my dear Prosper," said Verduret sadly, "my task would be at an end, for then I would know who committed this robbery of which you are accused. But I have finally procured evidence which will sooner or later become convincing proof. I have [illegible] deductions more or less probable. I now possess knowledge which proves that I was mistaken. I walked in darkness; now I have a light to guide me. Now we must take advantage of this evidence, gained by the imprudence of our enemies. We will begin with the porter."

He opened the door and called out:

"I say, my good man, please come here!"

"Who gave you this letter?" said M. Verduret.

"A messenger, who said he was paid for bringing it."

"Do you know him?"

"I know him well."

"Go and bring him here."

After the porter had gone M. Verduret drew from his pocket his diary and compared a page of it with the notes which he had spread over the table.

"These notes were not sent by the thief," he said.

"Do you think so, monsieur?"

"I am sure of it—that is, unless the thief is endowed with extraordinary penetration and forethought. One thing is certain—these notes are not part of the 350,000 francs which was stolen from the safe."

"Yet," said Prosper, who could not explain this certainty on the part of his protector—"yet"—

"There is no yet about it. I have the numbers of all the stolen notes."

"What! When even I did not have them?"

"But the bank had, fortunately. When we undertake an affair, we must anticipate everything and forget nothing. It is no excuse for a man to say, 'I did not think of it' when he commits some oversight. I thought of the bank."

If in the beginning Prosper had felt some repugnance about confiding in his father's friend, the feeling had now disappeared.

He understood that alone, scarcely master of himself, governed only by the inspirations of his inexperience, never would he have the patient penetration of this singular man.

"Then, as this package did not come from the thief, it is plain that it can only come from the other person who was near the safe at the time of the robbery, but could not prevent it, and now feels remorse. The probability of two persons assisting at the robbery, a probability suggested by the scratch, is now changed into undeniable certainty. Therefore I was right."

Prosper, listening attentively, tried hard to comprehend this monologue, which he dared not interrupt.

"Let us seek," went on the big man, "this second person whose conscience pricks him and yet who dares not reveal anything."

He read the letter over several times, scanning the sentences and weighing the words.

"Evidently this letter was composed by a woman. Never would one man doing another man a service and sending him money use the word 'succor.' A man would have said loan, money or some other equivalent, but succor—never. No one but a woman ignorant of masculine susceptibilities would have naturally made use of this word to express the idea it represents. As to the sentence 'There is one heart,' and so on, it could only have been written by a woman. Now let us see if we can discover whence the printed words were taken to compose these sentences."

He approached the window and began to study the pasted words with all the scrupulous attention which an antiquarian would devote to an old, half effaced manuscript.

"Small type," he said, "very slender and clear, well printed. The paper is thin and glossy. These words have not been cut from a newspaper or a periodical. I have seen type like this. I recognize it at once. Didot often uses it. So does Mme. de Tours."

He stopped with his mouth open and eyes fixed, making a strong appeal to his memory.

Suddenly he struck his forehead.

"Now I have it!" he cried. "Now I have it! Why did I not see it at once? These words have all been cut from a prayer book. We will look at least, and then we shall be certain."

He moistened one of the words pasted on the paper with his tongue, and when it was sufficiently softened he detached it with a pin. On the other side was printed a Latin word—Deus.

"Ah, ha!" he said, with a little laugh of satisfaction. "I knew it. Father Taberet, if he were here, would be pleased to see this. But what has become of the mutilated prayer book? Can it have been burned? No, because a heavy bound book is not easily burned. It is thrown in some corner."

M. Verduret was interrupted by the porter, who returned with the messenger from Pigalle street.

"Ah, here you are," said the big man encouragingly. Then he showed the envelope of the letter.

"Do you remember bringing this letter here this morning?"

"Perfectly, monsieur. I took particular notice of the address. We don't often see anything like it."

"Who told you to bring it, a man or a woman?"

"Neither, monsieur; it was a porter."

This reply made the porter laugh very much, but M. Verduret did not even smile.

"A porter? Well, do you know this colleague of yours?"

"I never even saw him before."

"How does he look?"

"Neither tall nor short. He wore a green vest and had on his medal."

"Your description is so vague that it would suit every porter in the city. But did your colleague tell you who sent the letter?"

"No, monsieur. Putting 10 sous in my hand, he said, 'Here, carry this to 39 Chaptal street. A coachman on the boulevard handed it to me.' Ten sous! I am sure he made more than I."

This answer seemed to disconcert M. Verduret. So many precautions taken in sending the letter disturbed him and disarranged his plans.

"Do you think you would recognize the porter again?"

"Yes, monsieur, if I saw him."

"How much do you gain a day as a [illegible]

"I don't exactly know, but I have a good stand. I suppose I make from 8 to 10 francs a day."

"Very well, I will give you 10 francs a day if you will go about and look for the porter who brought this letter. Every evening at 8 o'clock come to the Archangel, on the Quai St. Michel, give me a report of your search and receive your pay. Ask for M. Verduret. If you find our man, I will give you 50 francs. Will you do it?"

"I think I will, monsieur."

"Then don't lose a minute. Go on."

Although ignorant of M. Verduret's plans, Prosper began to comprehend the sense of his investigations. His fate depended upon their success, and yet he almost forgot this in his admiration of this singular man.

"Monsieur," said Prosper when the porter had left the room, "do you still think you see in this affair the hand of a woman?"

"More than ever, and a pious woman, too, and a woman who has two prayer books, since she could mutilate one to write to you."

"And you hope to find the cut book?"

"A great deal of hope, thanks to the opportunity I have of making an immediate search, which I will set about at once."

Saying this, he sat down and rapidly scratched off a few lines on a slip of paper, which he folded up and put in his vest pocket.

"Are you ready to go to M. Fauvel's? Yes? Come on, then. We have certainly earned our breakfast today."

CHAPTER VIII.

When Raoul de Lagors spoke of M. Fauvel's extraordinary dejection, he had not exaggerated. Since the fatal day when, upon his denunciation, his cashier had been arrested the banker had been a prey to the most gloomy melancholy and absolutely refused to take any interest in business affairs. He who had always been so domestic did not mingle with his family except at meals, when he would swallow a few mouthfuls and hastily leave the room. Shut up in his study, he would see no one.

The day of Prosper's release, about 3 o'clock, M. Fauvel was, as usual, seated in his study, with his elbows resting on the table and his face buried in his hands, when his office boy rushed in with a frightened look.

"Monsieur, the former cashier, M. Bertomy, is here with a friend. He says he must see you on business."

The banker started.

"Prosper!" he cried in a voice choked by anger. "How does he dare"—

Then remembering that he ought to control himself before his servant, he waited a few moments and said in a tone of forced calmness:

"Ask them to walk in."

If M. Verduret had counted upon witnessing a strange and affecting sight, he was not disappointed. Nothing could be more terrible than the attitude of these two men as they stood confronting each other. The banker's face was almost purple with suppressed anger, as if about to be struck by apoplexy. Prosper was pale and motionless. They stood glaring at each other. M. Verduret curiously watched them with the indifference and coolness of a philosopher who in the most violent outbursts of human passion merely sees subjects for study. Finally, the silence becoming more and more threatening, he decided to break it by speaking to the banker.

"I suppose, monsieur, you know that my young friend has just been released from prison."

"Yes," replied M. Fauvel, making an effort to control himself—"yes, for want of sufficient proof."

"Precisely, monsieur, and this want of proof, as stated in the decision of 'not proved,' ruins his prospects and compels him to leave here at once for America."

At this information M. Fauvel's features relaxed as if relieved.

"Ah, he is going away," he said.

There was no mistaking the resentful, almost insulting intonation of the words "going away."

"It appears to me," continued M. Verduret, "that Prosper's determination is a wise one. I merely wished him before leaving Paris to come and pay his respects to his former chief."

The banker smiled bitterly.

"M. Bertomy," he replied, "might have spared us both this painful meeting. I have nothing to say to him, and of course he can have nothing to say to me."

This was a formal dismissal, and M. Verduret, understanding it thus, bowed to M. Fauvel, accompanied by Prosper, who had not spoken a word.

"I hope you are satisfied, monsieur," he said in a gloomy tone. "You exacted this painful step, and I could only acquiesce. Have I gained anything by adding this humiliation to the others?"

"I have," replied M. Verduret. "I could find no way of gaining access to M. Fauvel save through you, and now I have found out what I wanted to know. I am convinced that M. Fauvel had nothing to do with the robbery."

"Certainly, but not to this extent. And this is not all. I wished to find out if M. Fauvel would be accessible to certain suspicions. Now I can say 'Yes.'"

Prosper and his companion had stopped to talk more at their ease near the corner of Lafitte street, in the middle of a large space which had lately been cleared by pulling down an old house. M. Verduret seemed to be anxious and was constantly looking around as if he expected some one. He soon uttered an exclamation of satisfaction. At the other end of the vacant space he saw Cavaillon, who was running bareheaded and so excited that he did not even stop to shake hands with Prosper, but said to M. Verduret:

"They have gone, monsieur."

"How long since?"

"About a quarter of an hour ago."

"The deuce they did! Then we have not a minute to lose."

He handed Cavaillon the note he had written some hours before at Prosper's house.

"Here, send him this and then return at once to your desk. You might be missed. It was very imprudent in you to come out without your hat."

Little Cavaillon ran off as quickly as he had come. Prosper was stupefied.

"What!" said he. "You know Cavaillon?"

"So it seems," answered M. Verduret, with a smile. "But we have no time to talk. Make haste."

M. Verduret suddenly stopped before a door bearing the number 81. He led the way up the steps and stopped on the second floor before a door over which was a large sign—"Dressmaker." A handsome bellrope hung on the wall, but M. Verduret did not touch it. He tapped with the ends of his fingers in a peculiar way, and the door instantly opened as if some one had been watching for his signal on the other [illegible] woman of about [illegible] She quietly ushered M. Verduret and Prosper into a neat dining room with several doors opening into it.

"Well?" he said by a look.

She bowed affirmatively.

"Yes."

"In there?" asked M. Verduret in a low tone, pointing to one of the doors.

"No," said the woman in the same tone; "over there in the little parlor."

M. Verduret opened the door pointed out and pushed Prosper into the little parlor, whispering as he did so:

"Go in and keep steady."

But this injunction was useless. The instant he cast his eyes around the room into which he had been pushed without any warning Prosper exclaimed:

"Madeleine!"

It was indeed M. Fauvel's niece, looking more beautiful that ever. Standing in the middle of the room near a table covered with silks and satins, she was arranging a skirt of red velvet embroidered in gold—the dress she was to wear as maid of honor to Catherine de' Medici. At sight of Prosper the blood rushed to her face, and her beautiful eyes half closed, as if she were about to faint. She supported herself by the table to keep from falling. Her weakness lasted but a moment, and the soft expression of her eyes changed to one of haughty resentment. In an offended tone she said:

"What has induced you to be watching my movements? Who gave you permission to follow me, to enter this house?"

Prosper would have given worlds to explain what had just happened, but he was powerless and could only remain silent.

"You promised me upon your honor," continued Madeleine, "that you would never again seek my presence. Is this the way you keep your word?"

"I did promise, but"—

He stopped.

"Oh, speak!"

"So many things have happened since that terrible day that I think I am excusable in forgetting for one hour an oath torn from me in a moment of blind weakness. It is to chance—at least to another will than my own—that I am indebted for the happiness of once more finding myself near you. Alas, the instant I saw you my heart bounded with joy. I did not think—no, I could not think—that you would prove more pitiless than strangers have been; that you would cast me off when I am so miserable and heartbroken."

Had not Prosper been so agitated he could have read in the eyes of Madeleine—those beautiful eyes which had so long been the arbiters of his destiny—the signs of a great inward struggle.

It was, however, in a firm voice that she replied:

"You know me well enough, Prosper, to be sure that no blow can strike you without reaching me at the same time. You suffer, I suffer with you."

"You drove me away," said Prosper, "and to obey you I told every one that I had left you voluntarily. You told me that an invincible obstacle had arisen between us, and I believed you, fool that I was! The obstacle was your own heart."

As white and motionless as a statue, Madeleine stood with bowed head before the storm of passionate reproach.

"I told you to forget me."

"Forget!" exclaimed Prosper excitedly. "Forget! How can I forget? Is it in my power to stop by an effort of will the circulation of my blood? Ah, you have never loved! To forget, as to stop the beatings of the heart, there is but one means—death!"

"Good heavens, this suffering is beyond endurance! Prosper, if you only knew"—

"I know but one thing, Madeleine, and that is that you no longer love me and that I love you!"

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A Transposition.

Margaret—No, you cannot stay, love. Your mother says it is absolutely necessary for you to come home.

Elizabeth—Oh, dear! I sometimes think that mother is the inventor of necessity instead of necessity being the mother of invention.—Kansas City Journal.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." Mrs. K. T. Snyder, Troy, Ohio.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills will rid you of it, radically and permanently, as they have rid thousands.

LITERARY NOTES.

In the February number The Century makes a new experiment in color printing, giving two examples of copies by the late J. Wells Champney of famous pastels of the French school—one Madame Le Brun's portrait of herself and daughter, the other Nattier's portrait of the Princess Louise. Mr. Walter Shirlaw the artist, writes a note in appreciation of Mr. Champney's work, which is recognized among artists as particularly faithful in the conveyance of the color of the old pastels. Two other color pictures are by Maxfield Parrish of "Roman Villas" in the group of articles by Edith Wharton now running in The Century. One of the subjects is the famous Villa Medici, with the dome of St. Peter's in the distance.

"One wishes for a new find of Thackeray letters every year, to run for the whole twelve-month, and make a fortune for the lucky magazine," declares the New York Times Saturday Review critic apropos of the Thackeray letters now appearing in the Century. These are the letters, jealously guarded from publication for years, which were written to different members of the family of Mr. George Baxter of New York City, following the great novelist's visit to this country in the early fifties. Mr. and Mrs. Baxter and their children were glad to welcome the gifted Englishman to their home at the corner of Second Avenue and Eighteenth Street, and the acquaintance grew into a warm and lasting friendship. Of this friendship these letters are the fruit, now given to the reading world with the permission of Miss Lucy W. Baxter; of Mrs. Ritchie the great writer's accomplished daughter; and of Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., the London publishers of Thackeray's works.

The February issue of the Metropolitan Magazine contains what is unquestionably the best short story by Anthony Hope ever published. This story is entitled, "Mrs. Thistleton's Princess." It has all the charm of a new "Zenda" story, and in profusely illustrated by Cushman Parker. Even without this exceptional feature, the February issue is unusual in the quality and character of its contents. George Ade has again appeared in the field of literature, and and the first of this series of new Ade articles to appear in the Metropolitan is Mr. Ade's appreciation of New York. E. H. Sothern, the actor, is another of the noted contributors to this issue. The remarkable "Confessions of a Wall Street Private Secretary," by Jane Wade, is continued as is also Maurice Hawlett's "Love Story of Mary, Queen of Scots." Four automobile contributions, one, "The Future of the Automobile," by an undisputed authority, Arthur N. Jarvis, of the New York Sun, and two short stories and a poem dealing with the horseless vehicle, make this issue an attractive automobile number. The cover is a beautiful automobile subject in striking colors, by Blendon R. Campbell. In all there are 160 pages of reading, and 93 illustrations. The Metropolitan is really a 35 cent magazine though the price is only 15 cents a copy.

The Designer for February is a complete success from both the artistic and literary point of view. The cover is strikingly stylish, yet altogether in keeping with a fashion magazine, and unusual care has been devoted to the illustrations, of which there are several occupying each a full page. "The Annals of a Love," by Charles Mellvaine, and "A Day of Miracles," by Mary E. Fitzgerald, are short stories of interest, and "Some Royal Young People," by J. L. Harbour, will appear to little folks and their parents as well. The fashion pages present modes which are at once refined and practical, and in addition to numerous models for adults the millinery department tells explicitly how to make a shirred hat for a child. "Points on Dressmaking" gives directions for the construction of storm clothes.

Just in time for the holiday season, McClure, Phillips & Company are bringing out John La Farge's book "Great Masters." The pre-eminence of its author and its excellence as a piece of bookmaking render it undoubtedly the most distinguished art work of the season. It contains biographical and critical essays on Michel Angelo, Raphael, Rembrandt, Velasquez, Durer in which with special sympathy Mr. La Farge has presented the human quality in the men and their work. It is printed on specially made paper, bound in cream cloth and illustrated with sixty-seven fine full-page engravings that cover the field of classic art completely.

The Complete Novel in the February Lippincott is "My Cousin Patricia," by Alma Martin Estabrook, a new novelist who ought long ago to have been known. Her tale is a mature and delightful one about two engagements of the same heroine. One was thwarted because his sister congratulated her a few hours too soon; the other was only an implied betrothal, but it was sacred to Patricia, and through her sense of duty she finally got the man she ought to have had.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and egularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

READ
THE STORY OF MICHIGAN IN PEARSON'S MAGAZINE FOR FEBRUARY

DAVID S. BARRY has told the history of Michigan concisely, accurately and dramatically. No State has a story more romantic.

DO YOU KNOW that PEARSON'S entertains more than 1,250,000 people every month?

Features like the following explain its popularity:

President Roosevelt, at Concord, N. H., August 26th, 1902, said: "About all we have a right to expect from Government is that it will see that the cards are not stacked." He was referring to the great industrial combinations.

With a view to showing the methods pursued in the organization and manipulation of many of the giant industrial consolidations PEARSON'S will publish a series of articles by Henry George, Jr., the Amalgamation, Inflation, and Manipulation of Copper being the theme of the first two articles. The Asphalt Catastrophe is to be the third.

Presenting an authentic, brilliant and thrilling history of frontier tragedies, including Custer's successful attack upon Black Kettle, Custer's final Defeat at the Little Big Horn, Forsyth's Famous Fight on the Arickaree, the story of Powell's desperate defence of Piney Island, the Massacre of Fetterman's Command, Crook's Campaign, Wheaton's Campaign, In the Lava Beds of Oregon.

Tom Nast, Cartoonist.

Gen. U. S. Grant said he considered Tom Nast the greatest single figure that had come out of the Civil War. Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine has prepared for PEARSON'S a series of articles from scrap books and memoranda given to him by Tom Nast shortly before his death. This most important set of papers, which includes the Overthrow of the Tweed Ring, the Civil War Period, the Horrors of Slavery, the Reconstruction Period, the Greeley Presidential Campaign, and many other articles presenting vivid pictures of the times when history was warm in the making, will shortly appear.

Following is the schedule thus far planned: The Ruse of the Dowager Empress; the Abdication of Francis Joseph; the Death of Queen Draga; King Edward's Tour; The Black Pope; The Secret History of Panama.

The Lima, O., Times-Democrat says: The Detroit Southern is in a bad plight, owing to the loss of a bridge over Cranberry Creek, two and a half miles north of Columbus Grove, and it is reported that the long trestle north of Lima is giving the officials some apprehension. Trains on the road are being handled by the C. H. & D. from Columbus Grove to Ottawa.

Yesterday while Rude Mead's team with a sleigh loaded with Heesen's cookers, stood in front of Adamson's store, they started for their barn at a lively gait. In turning a corner near the opera house the load "slewed" and the kettles and cookers were "down" for good.—As there was a farmers' institute at the opera house this was quite an advertisement for Heesen Bros. & Co., though not a free one as some of the kettles were broken.

The peculiar cough which indicates croup, is usually well known to the mothers of croupy children. No time should be lost in the treatment of it and for this purpose no medicine has received more universal approval than Chamberlain's cough remedy. Do not waste valuable time in experimenting with untried remedies, no matter how highly they may be recommended but give this medicine as directed and all symptoms of croup will quickly disappear. Detroit Tribune: In the preliminary bout with merry Old Alcohol, the local optionists of Lenawee staggered him with the first blow. By request of Rev. Fred W. Corbett, secretary of the prohibition state central committee, the board of supervisors last week, granted an adjournment to Feb. 29 to enable the presentation of petitions in favor of the movement. The vote stood 16 to 9. If the required number of names is secured this spring the campaign in Lenawee will be warm enough to draw the frost and make the frogs toot early in the season.

Although nearly 74 years of age, to be called a liar goes much against the Irish grain of Frank Erskine, of Franklin township. Consequently when Frank Perry, aged about 40, called him the name, with a few adjectives added for spice, the old man whacked him over the head with a cane. When arraigned in justice court this morning, the old gray haired man, in making his plea to charge of assault and battery, said, "Sure I hit him with a cane and I am only sorry I didn't hit him harder. Has a man got to wait until he is hit before he can hit back? I don't think so. There couldn't any of the boys box my ears when I was a boy and I am not going to let any more of them now than I can help." He drew a check on the bank for the small fine and costs assessed by the court.—Detroit Free Press.

TECUMSEH BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

There exists a growing sentiment amongst the business men of Tecumseh, that a Business Men's Association would be extremely beneficial to the commercial life of our village.

In every community there should be an organization of this nature; an organization competent to discuss the issues which have a bearing upon the business interests of the town, and competent to decide upon and put in practice the methods which will attain the best results for the municipality.

The old adage,—"What is everybody's business is nobody's business," is as applicable in this instance as in any other. Where there is no distinct commercial head, representing ALL of the commercial interests of the village, outsiders who may have propositions affecting the entire commercial community, have no PARTICULAR person or persons with whom to treat, such a situation frequently resulting in detriment to the entire town.

A Business Men's Association provides just such a head. Any new project may may be brought before this body, it may be discussed pro and con, rejected if not advantageous to the business interests and encouraged if it will make our town better or bigger.

It is the tendency of manufacturing institutions to leave the larger cities because of recurring labor troubles, and to establish themselves in smaller places. By an organized effort Tecumseh could secure her share of these factories; but there will be no organized effort unless it is inspired by the very persons whose chief interests are in the commercial life of the town; the persons who would naturally compose the local Business Men's Association.

For instance, who amongst us will take up and reply to the following advertisement which appeared in yesterday's paper, viz.,

> FACTORY LOCATION WANTED: Men of experience will establish first-class condensed milk factory in live town; require milk supply, plenty pure water, railroad facilities. Address box Y, No. 37, Free Press.

Tecumseh has all the advantages required, but who will so present them as to attract the party in question. In just such a contingency, the secretary of a live Business Men's Association would step in and push the matter to a satisfactory conclusion. The matter of increased insurance rates, increased taxes, franchise for an electric road and a thousand and one matters would be taken up and discussed to the advantage of every person living within our corporate limits. Our sister cities and villages are getting results from just such a movement. Let the Tecumseh Business Men's Association be immediately organized and let it take hold with vigor and with the determination to make Tecumseh more prosperous and more attractive than ever before in her history.

A Fine Business.

All this month S. W. Anderson has conducted a discount sale, which continues until and including Saturday of this week. He says that in all his business experience he never had a better sale. People have come from far and near and all gone away happy having traded liberally and gone away delighted with the bargains.

A Ride to Trouble.

By John McKinney, Age 14, Detroit.

Winner of Fourth Prize in Adventure Story Contest.

"All aboard for Royal Oak, Birmingham and Pontiac!" cried a conductor as my friend and I stepped onto the car and whizzed off for the country.

We soon reached our cross road where we breathed the fresh scent of summer.

"Hark! hear that fire bell!" said my friend.

"Surely, your right, for 'tis not a dinner bell; it is but 11 o'clock," I replied.

We both began to run, dragging our satchels and were dumfounded to find that we were chasing a cow with a bell dingling around her neck.

"Talk about a farmer being green in the city, how about a city fellow being green in the country," I remarked.

We arrived at the farmhouse and soon were sipping fresh milk to our heart's content. A boy called from the yard grinning broadly:

"How'd you like ter go for the cows wid me?" he asked. We smiled and followed him to the barn, where we all three mounted one horse. Such a sight! The farmer boy sat in front, with bare feet dangling, my companion sat next, while I hung on behind.

"Please go a bit slower, boy," I cried.

"Ha! youse fellers gitting scared? Well, I'll show youse how the great Diamon' Dick rides," he said, giving the horse a slap.

"Stop! I'm falling," I begged. "Stop!"

"Ah, youse gaway."

"Whoa!" I cried but the horse obeyed the command no better than the farm boy.

My comrade gave me a pull. I gave the farmer one and all three landed flat on the ground. But the farmer jumped up laughing in a minute. I, yelling with fright and pain, lost consciousness, but soon revived, and my friend, who was braver than I, led me back to the house. One of the farm hands jumped on a wheel and rode five miles for a doctor, who returned with him. We boys both had a broken arm, and each wanted to have his dressed first. A sudden jerk and a flash of a star and I was ready to go home. My companion had the same happen to him, then we jumped into a wagon and rode to the car. As we bade farewell, we said in an undertone, "Wait till we catch that boy in the city."

The above appeared in the Sunday Detroit Free Press. John McKinney is well known in Tecumseh. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Truman McKinney of Detroit, and a grandson of Mrs. M. A. Freeman, of this city.

AROUND TOWN

Thoughts about crosswalks and CLEAN SHIRTS

And other things interesting to Tecumseh.

Speaking of old acquaintances, Elgin, Ill., is 36 miles west of Chicago and the early morning train is always filled with Chicago business men from Elgin. These men always play cards going into the city and the "regulars" get boards and cards of the brakemen. One morning I was going in, a short distance out of Elgin, J. N. Buck, a man well known on the train, asked me to "set in" to a game of whist, he picked up a board and pulled a deck from his pocket. When we arrived at Turner Junction a lot of other fellows boarded the train among them Ed. Oatman, a dealer in butter from up the road. He came looking along for a board and finally looked at the one we were using. Said he, "Hello Buck that is my board, have had it all year." Buck said, "I bought that board and left it on this train 20 years ago and there is my name carved on the back." Said Oatman, "Your name is there alright but I bought this board from the brakeman and you are the only man mean enough to claim it."

"Oatman, I may be mean but if you will think HONESTLY about yourself for 20 minutes you will think of enough mean things so that in your estimation I will be an angel."

I have thought of old man Bucks saying a number of times since and regretted that if we, more of us, thought more of our own meanness and less of other men's the world would be the better for it. Try it. I have.

The thought of old tramp "John" reminds me of Tecumseh's cross walks or rather the lack of cross walks in some instances.

Last summer the street commissioner took out the cross walk in front of the opera house and said when, out of natural curiosity, I asked him about it, "In time we will put in a cement walk in the middle of this block the same as there now is in the middle of the street below the line.

This is all right, but there is no walk across the east side of Pearl street and it will be necessary to place two walks to make the street at this end the same as it is below, besides there should be a walk in front of the opera house to accommodate the people who come to the opera house especially at night.

But we can get along, for a few months. No doubt the street committee is like the tramp, if there was plenty of money they would build a number of walks, as there is not they build them in time but always good ones.

* * *

A number of years ago when I used to run a job office there used to show up about once in so often a tramp printer, who amongst all the others was a peculiarity, in the fact that when he came, he was sober and would remain in this condition usually a whole week. This tramp printer was unusually bright and would on occasions when sober, emit some very clever sayings. One day I remember his coming in with a very dirty shirt on and I said, "John, you are in a bad shape this time, better go and indulge in a bath, go to sleep and have your shirt washed." He said, "That is a peculiarity of mine, I care not for money except to furnish myself with clean laundry. Why if I was rich I would have a clean shirt every day, but as I am poor I change my shirt as often as possible, any way once a year" and with this "John" burst into tears and shed enough to wash a two weeks' worn shirt.

* * *

Speaking about shirts reminds me of a note I heard about a Tecumseh business man the other day. Now this man is a pretty good fellow but is apt to be a little careless at times about his personal appearance much to the annoyance of his wife. The other night when he was putting on a clean night shirt, she said to him, "Now for goodness sake button the button on that shirt and don't go looking so slovenly any more." Said he, "My dear, I would be delighted to look spick and span at night as well as in the day time but you will remember that there has not been a button on that night shirt for three years."

* * *

Speaking of old acquaintances, the other night John Orr was coming up from Adrian on the Lake Shore and seeing a man he thought he knew on the train, spoke to him and found the man was Richard Cantrick of Toledo, a conductor on the main line of the Lake Shore between Toledo and Chicago. He is the son of John "Cann," who years ago was a mason in Tecumseh and John Orr has not seen "Rich "Cann" for 40 years. Our friend, John Orr, sees everyone and his memory never grows dim.

Dr. Bunnell was in the HERALD office the other day and I saw on his coat what seemed to be a G. A. R. button. On examination I discovered it was a watch, ticking as nice as could be and keeping good time. The watch is about one fourth of an inch in diameter, was made in France, sent to the Doctor last Christmas and keeps splendid time. It is quite a souvenir and greatly valued by the Doctor.

GEO. N. STACY.

Saved from terrible death.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly, but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption turned despair into joy. The first bottle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

The great fact is that life is a service; the only question is: Whom shall we serve.

If you wrest God's promises, you will miss God's promise of rest.

A FAIR CROWD

Much interest was shown in both papers and discussions.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather yesterday, so few ventured out in the morning that the morning program of the Farmers' institute was carried out in the afternoon. The meeting was called to order by the President, M. E. Taylor at 1 p. m. Prayer by Rev. Sedweek. This was followed by remarks from the County Secretary Young of Morenci. He called attention to the importance of asking any question that may be in the mind of any one present for the question box.

A paper by Dr. C. A. Waldron, subject "The Profitable production of poultry on the farm," was followed by a discussion led by J. L. Richard of Raisin. "Crops for the Dairy Farm" by the State Speaker, N. I. Moore. He also spoke of the food and care of the dairy cow.

The Misses Blanche and Bertha Macham rendered some very fine music which was followed by a talk by Mrs. C. A. Wright on the "Possibilities of Womens Clubs in Rural Communities," followed by recitation by Anna Ferguson. Tillage and Maintaining the Soil Fertility, was then given by State Speaker, N. I. Moore, which was followed by a Discussion by D. T. Hall and H. C. Daniels. The Question Box was then opened and many different subjects pertaining to the dairy farm were discussed. The possibilities of Alfalfa," a paper prepared by John T. Clark of Clinton, was read by A. W. Mills. Mr. Clark was unable to be present having been called to Chicago on business.

The evening session opened with music by the Ladies' Orchestra, the Misses Blanche and Bertha Macham, Cutting, Gillespie, Owen, Wilson and Gray. N. I. Moore, the State Speaker, was to have given a paper on "Profitable Pork Production," but he asked that he might speak on the subject, "Beautifying the homes," as a number of ladies were present, to whom he thought it would be more interesting. By vote this was changed and Mr. Moore gave a few minutes talk on that subject, which was very interesting.

Miss McKenna rendered a vocal solo, and Miss Mingay gave a reading and responded to an encore.

J. D. Shull read a paper on "All is well in Old Lenawee in 1904," which after the following resolutions closed the evening's program.

A. W. Mills offered these resolutions. Resolved: "That a vote of thanks be extended Mr. John T. Clark for his very able paper, The possibilities of Alfalfa, —and that it be printed in the Michigan Farmer."

The meeting adjourned.

Feeder for Toledo Lines.

The story furnished by The Blade's special correspondent at Delta, regarding the building of a proposed feeder for the Toledo and Western and the Toledo and Indiana electric lines, is further confirmed by a dispatch from Defiance to the effect that the officials of the Toledo & Indiana have combined with several Defiance capitalists to build the line from that city to Adrian, Mich., going via Napoleon and Wauseon and paralleling the Detroit Southern tracks from Napoleon to Adrian. It is said the company has already purchased terminal rights at Wauseon to connect with the Toledo line. William Kettering, head of the Defiance Machine Works; William Geiger, of the Gieger Furniture company, and K. V. Haymaker, all of Defiance, are mentioned as directors of the new company.—Toledo Blade.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Monday night a tramp obtained entrance into the schoolhouse, built a warm fire and spent the night in comfort. A small sum of money laying on the teacher's desk was unmolested.—Manchester in Clinton Local.

The stingiest man has been found in Missouri. He pumped water on his head, let his hair freeze and then broke it off to save paying for a hair cut because the barbers raised the price to a quarter.—Ex.

When help was scarce a farmer posted the following notice: Help wanted. Wages $6. per day; breakfast served in bed; working hours from 10 a. m. to 2. p. m. All heavy work will be done by the boss; cigars and drinks furnished free. Any hand working the entire season can have the farm.

An exchange says: The true standing of an editor is appreciated after death, if not before. A lawyer recently sent the following words of consolation to the widow of an editor of a nearby town: "Dear Madam—I cannot tell you how pained I was to hear that your husband has gone to heaven. We were bosom friends, but can never meet again."

Charlie Snyder, the boy who was convicted and sentenced to Ionia for ten years, escaped Friday from the county jail where he was confined until his commitment papers could be made out. The city police captured him in the night and locked him up as a suspicious character but not knowing him and having no information released him about ten o'clock. The sheriff did not notify the police of his escape till after the boy had made himself scarce.—Ex.

When Leon Allen returned from the concert at Tipton, Monday night he found a horse and cutter standing at the barn door the horse, nicely blanketed and haltered but with the rope hanging. The use of the telephone disclosed the fact that it belonged to Floyd Billington who had driven it to the church early in the evening. How it happened to stray so far away is a mystery. The robes were just as they had been left, showing that the horse had not been frightened or running.—Franklin in Clinton Local

A Missouri editor has created a sensation by printing a strong editorial defensive of Sunday fishing. NOW IS THE TIME TO USE HYOMEI

At this season of the year, catarrhal troubles are very prevalent, and nearly every person suffers to a certain extent.

Catarrh is actually the result of a succession of colds and can be easily prevented if the proper treatment is followed.

Hyomei is a natural yet scientific cure for the colds and grip troubles that lead to catarrh, as well as a positive cure for the disease itself.

The balsamic air of Hyomei breathed through the small pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit is filled with germ-killing and health-giving qualities that penetrate to the minutest air cells of the head, throat and lungs. It kills all catarrhal germs, frees the mucous membrane from poisonous microbes, and makes a perfect and complete cure of catarrh.

The complete outfit costs only $1, while extra bottles of Hyomei can be procured for 50c. C. A. Wright sells Hyomei on the "no cure, no pay" plan, and will refund the money if it fails to give perfect satisfaction. You take no risk whatever in using Hyomei. It is the only treatment sold under a guarantee of this nature where a leading local druggist agrees to return the money if the treatment fails to cure.

WHAT A FEMALE REGULATOR IS

A vegetable liquid for governing or equalizing the flow of women's menses which occur once in every lunar month.

BRADFIELD'S Female Regulator

is the essential quality of powerful herbs. It is a concentrated essence best adapted for women's delicate organism, and put in such form that it is always properly assimilated and taken into the system.

Stoppages, suppression, painful or other irregularity of the menses and sickly flows are corrected and cured by the regular use of this superior emmenagogue.

Menstruation, or periodic flows, necessitate a breaking down of cells lining the mucous membrane and a reconstruction after every sickness, which is accompanied with marked congestion and loss of blood. Such changes are very apt to produce chronic catarrh. Leucorrhea or Whites is the result of these irritating discharges. Regulator cures these troubles and restores to perfect health the patient who suffered the debilitating losses.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

The following public statement of a respected citizen adds one more emphatic endorsement of merit to the scores that have appeared before.

Mrs. E. D. Fryer, who lives in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up but I keep on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and in spite of all the remedies I used I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicine I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity."

WORTHY OF AN EFFORT.

Chicago Firm Offers Big Prizes In Contest For Students.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 25.—Professor Henry Carter Adams of the department of political economy in the university, has announced a $2,000 prize contest for essays in economics instituted by a large Chicago firm, whose purpose is to arouse interest in the study of topics relating to commerce and industry, and to stimulate an examination into the value of college training for businessmen. The competitors are divided into classes A and B. Class A consists of all who have received bachelor degrees from an American college since 1893. The prizes offered in this class are as follows: First prize, $1,000 and $500 for the second prize.

Class B comprises all who are undergraduate students when the essays are handed in. The first prize in this class will be $300, and the second $150. Any contestant in class B may compete in class A. The essays must be submitted before June 1, 1905.

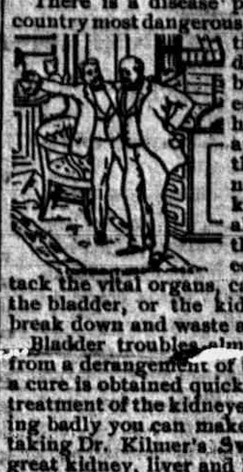
The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.



There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Why the Stomach Lasts.

An old question which has long puzzled physiologists is, Why does not the stomach digest itself? The walls of the stomach are in substance not unlike the food which they contain and which is digested by the peptic fluid. The stomach is able to digest proteid food when introduced into it, yet it does not digest itself.

The reason for this has been shown by Weinland. Weinland found that a substance can be extracted from the cells of the stomach which, when added to proteid material, will not allow it to be acted upon by the pepsin of the stomach. This substance belongs to the class of so called antiferments—that is, a group of bodies which by their presence inhibit fermentative actions. The presence of this antiferment in the cells of the stomach prevents them from digesting themselves.

After death, when this substance decomposes, the stomach will digest itself.

DID HE TAKE POISON?

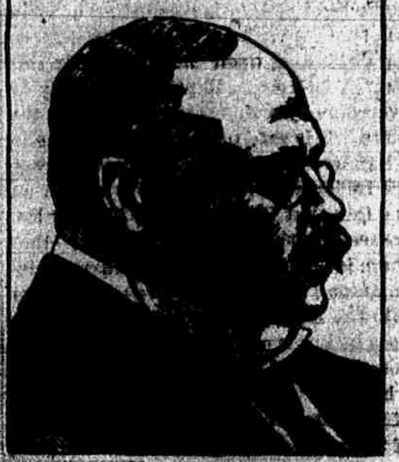
Strange Case of English Financier, Whitaker Wright.

HAD JUST BEEN SENTENCED

To Seven Years' Penal Servitude—Greatest Tragedy England Has Experienced in Years—Wright Was Very Confident of Acquittal.

London, Jan. 27.—At 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon Whitaker Wright was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude. At 4 o'clock he lay dead on the floor of a small room in the law courts. Whether he took his own life by poison or whether death, in its natural course, robbed the law of its fulfillment, will not be known until a postmortem examination is held; the indications, however, point to poisoning.

The career of this man, who was known on three continents for his stupendous financial operations, closed in a startling tragedy. Even in his life, which, with his rise from poverty to enormous wealth, was full of dramatic incidents, there was nothing that could compare with the manner of his death. All London is thrilled with the news of it. No such human tragedy has been enacted in England for many a year.



WHITAKER WRIGHT.

Wright was very confident in his acquittal. For an hour he awaited the verdict, meanwhile talking cheerfully with his counsel, while the city magnates, members of the aristocracy and the other spectators who crowded the room keeping their eyes riveted on the man whose fate hang in the balance.

When the jury filed in at 3 o'clock Wright showed his first signs of nervousness. Peering through his glasses he leaned forward to catch the foreman's ear. At the word "Guilty," which broke the tense and expectant silence, Wright did not even flinch, but sticking his hands deep down into his pockets and gazing rather grimly at his judge, he stood up to receive sentence.

For some twenty minutes after sentence Wright discussed his family affairs and the disposition of his remaining moneys. He frankly expressed his amazement at the verdict and still more so at the sentence, but George Lewis, Jr., his solicitor, tells the Associated Press that he spoke rather as a man prepared to grin and bear it than as a person who contemplated suicide.

Suddenly Wright fell backward as is he had fainted. A doctor came quickly. His first thought was that Wright had fallen in an ordinary apoplectic fit, but it was noticed that his heart began gradually to give out, and before another doctor could arrive Whitaker Wright, within one hour of the time he had been sentenced, was dead.

An examination of the body, made at a late hour last night, points strongly to the fact that death was due to poison. The postmortem examination will be held on Wednesday.

Storm Caused a Wreck.

St. Louis, Jan. 27.—According to the officials of the Burlington road, the collision of a local passenger train and the Denver express Tuesday night at Dardene creek, thirty-eight miles north of here, in which four were killed and ten injured, was the result of the terrific blizzard weather, and no blame rests on the crew. The blinding snowstorm made it impossible for the engineer of the local train to see the danger signals in time to stop from crashing into the express train, which stopped at a water tank. Engineer Nunns of the local train went down in the wreck and his body has not been recovered.

Two Lions for Teddy.

Port Said, Egypt, Jan. 27.—United States Consul-General Skinner has just sailed to his post at Marseilles, France, on his return from his expedition to Abyssinia. The United States gunboat Machias is expected here January 30 from Jibuti, French Somaliland, with two lions and other gifts, which Emperor Menelik is sending to President Roosevelt.

Superior Company Reorganizing.

New York, Jan. 27.—The reorganization plan of the Consolidated Lake Superior Co. probably will be announced in a few days. Out of a total of $6,056,000 syndicate participants all but about $250,000 have consented to the proposition, which allows a liberal interest in the plan to old stockholders.

Lived 125 Years.

Menominee, Mich., Jan. 28.—Mrs. Mary Schaferenski, said by her relatives to have been 125 years old, died at her home near here Wednesday.

Wonderful nerve.

Is displayed by many a man endurig pains of accidental cuts, wounds, bruises, burns, scalds, sore feet or stiff joints. But there's no need for it. Bucklen's Arnica Salve will kill the pain and cure the trouble. It's the best salve on earth for piles, too. 25c at C. A. Wright's druggist.

ILLNESS OF HIS WIFE

Brought Mental Troubles to William A. Saunders.

SHOT HIMSELF ON THE STREET

While in Ann Arbor—Death Was Instantaneous—Was a Dentist in Grand Rapids—Graduate From University of Michigan.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 28.—William D. Saunders, a Grand Rapids dentist, committed suicide by shooting himself Wednesday afternoon. It is believed he was suffering from temporary insanity. Financial troubles do not seem to have been the cause, as in a pocket were found certificates of deposit in Grand Rapids banks for $4,700 and an Ann Arbor Savings bank book containing a credit balance of $1,100.

He had been in a private sanitarium for two weeks, but came back to the home of his father-in-law, Moses Seabolt, Tuesday. His mental troubles were induced by the long illness of his wife, who is nearly blind as the result of nervous prostration, and who has been living at her father's home since May.

He shot himself at the corner of Depot street and Fifth avenue, about 1:30, after walking up and down in the vicinity for nearly three hours. He died instantly.

Dr. Saunders was a graduate of the university and immediately after graduation went to Muskegon. He only remained there a year, when he removed to Grand Rapids, where he had since made his home. He was born in Ann Arbor and married a popular Ann Arbor young lady, Miss Grace Seabolt, the daughter of a prominent citsen. No inquest will be held.

Running Short of Provisions.

Harbor Beach, Mich., Jan. 28.—The Pere Marquette railroad, having stated that it would be next to impossible to get trains through to this point inside of the next ten days, has rendered the situation quite serious, as it is feared the stock of provisions will not hold out. Fuel is also getting scarce, but the railroad company has relieved the tension on that score by placing its supply at the disposal of a committee of citizens, who will see to its distribution. An attempt will be made to bring provisions from Bad Axe by teams. The snow on the railroad is from twelve to fourteen feet deep in places, and packed as hard as ice.

Wife Tried to Knife Him.

Niles, Mich., Jan. 28.—John Ford, a well-to-do farmer of Berrien township, has commenced divorce proceedings against his wife, whom he charges with having driven him out of his home on several occasions with a knife, and with having threatened to kill him. Ford makes other sensational charges, which are denied by Mrs. Ford, who declares in the course of a cross-bill that since she married Ford seven years ago, she has been submitted to all sorts of indignities, and that the only society he allowed her to mingle in was that of laborers and woodchoppers.

Big Car Plant Closing Down.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 28.—The big plants of the American Car & Foundry Co.—the Michigan branch on Clark avenue and the Peninsular branch on Ferry avenue east—are practically closed down, and how long they will remain in this condition even the officers of the company say they do not know. From a force of about 5,000, employed when running at full capacity, only a few hundreds remain, and these have been given to understand that work will cease in a few days.

Burned By Powder Explosion.

Saginaw, Mich., January 28.—Two brothers named Kretlitz, employed at the Standard Oil Company's mine near the city limits, were fatally hurt Wednesday afternoon by the explosion of two kegs of blasting powder. They were filling blasting cartridges when in some manner the powder was ignited and the explosion followed. Both were burned almost beyond recognition. They only recently came here from Pennsylvania. They are in a dying condition at St. Mary's hospital.

Bliss Grants Several Paroles.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—Governor Bliss Wednesday granted paroles to the following prisoners: Jerome Lassey and Arthur Skillings of Dickinson county, sent to Marquette in January, 1902, for three years for larceny from the person; William Johnson, Monroe county, sent to Ionia in November, 1901, for three years for grand larceny; E. B. Rose, Ogemaw county, sent to Ionia October, 1902, for two years for attempted criminal assault.

Hadsall Reinstated.

Lansing, ich., Jan. 28.—At the session of the Masonic grand lodge here Wednesday afternoon ex-State Senator Henry S. Hadsall, formerly of Owosso, now of Denver, Col., was reinstated on appeal from the action of the Owosso lodge, which expelled him about a year ago.

Goodwin Pleaded Guilty.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 28.—Frank Goodwin, the young man arrested at Jackson a few days ago charged with making and circulating counterfeit 5-cent pieces, was brought here Wednesday for examination. He pleaded guilty and was remanded to the charge of United States officials.

Secretary Shaw to Resign.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The report is again current that Secretary of the Treasury Shaw before long will withdraw from the cabinet. The statement comes from a source near to the secretary and under circumstances which give it the color of probability. Shaw himself will not talk of the matter. The reason assigned for the expected resignation is that between the secretary and the president friction has occurred from time to time as to administrative policies.

IN HONOR OF ROOT

PRESIDENT AND TAFT THERE

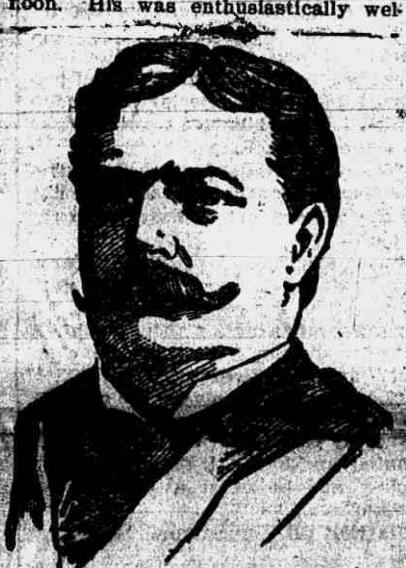
Met For First Time Since Taft's Return—New Secretary or War Given Rousing Reception Upon His Arrival in Washington.

Washington, January 28.—Senator Russell A. Alger, formerly secretary of war, gave a reception last night at his residence in honor of Secretary Elihu Root, his successor in the war department, who retires from that office in a few days. Among the guests of the evening were President Roosevelt, the members of his cabinet, many senators and members of the house, the Supreme Court, military officers, men distinguished in civil life, and ex-Gov. Wm. H. Taft, who arrived yesterday from Manila, to succeed Secretary Root as the head of the war department.

The guests began to arrive at 9 o'clock, Senator Alger and Secretary Root receiving them in the drawing room, which had been gracefully decorated with white lilies and other potted plants in bloom. Behind the former secretary and his successor as they greeted the guests were suspended the emblem of the secretary of war and the United States flag.

President Roosevelt and former Governor Taft arrived some time after the reception began. They had not met since Mr. Taft came to the city and the greeting between the two was very cordial.

Washington, Jan. 28.—William H. Taft, the former governor-general of the Philippines and new secretary of war, arrived here Wednesday afternoon. His was enthusiastically welcomed by a large crowd at the depot. Maj.-Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, chief of staff of the army; Assistant Secretary of War Oliver, and Colonel Clarence Edwards, chief of the division of insular affairs, formally greeted the new head of the war department.



EX-GOV. TAFT,
Who has reached Washington to assume his new duties of Secretary of War.

Governor Taft was escorted down the long train shed by General Chaffee and Assistant Secretary Oliver, and as they reached the gates and passed through a lane formed in the crowd there was a prolonged outburst of cheers, which was repeated vociferously by the crowd gathered outside.

Governor Taft, with General Chaffee and Colonel Edwards, both in full uniform, entered one carriage and General Oliver followed in another, and led by Troop E of the Fifteenth cavalry from Fort Myer, which had been drawn up in the plaza in front of the depot, they were rapidly driven to the war department, where Secretary Root formally welcomed his successor. From there the new secretary was driven to the Arlington hotel, where apartments had been reserved for him. Governor Taft looked the picture of health.

A Fast Six-Round Bout.

Philadelphia, January 28.—Jack O'Brien and Tommy Ryan fought one of the fastest six-round bouts ever seen in this city last night, and the Philadelphian had a slight advantage. O'Brien clearly outfought Ryan in the first four rounds and in the fifth dropped him with a hard blow to the jaw. Ryan took the count of eight and came up groggy. He saved himself by clinching until he had regained his bearings. A moment later Ryan drove a vicious left to O'Brien's stomach which sent the Philadelphian to his knees. Ryan seemed to regain his wind as the round progressed and landed repeatedly on O'Brien's stomach with vicious lefts. It was only the gong that saved O'Brien from being knocked out. In the sixth round honors were about even, both men having received severe punishment. When the gong sounded ending the fight both men were in very bad shape.

White Man Got It.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The president has appointed W. B. Martin to succeed Mrs. Minnie Cox as postmaster at Indianola, Miss. This postoffice was closed some time ago, the white inhabitants of the place refusing to accept their mail from Mrs. Cox, who is colored. Martin, who is a white man, was one of Mrs. Cox's bondsmen.

Fresh Revolt Proclaimed.

Domestic troubles.

It is exceptional to find a family where there are no domestic ruptures occasionally, but these can be lessened by having Dr. King's New Life Pills round. Much trouble they save by their great work in stomach and liver troubles. They not only relieve you but cure. 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

FROM WEALTHY WOMAN

Chicago Coachman Is Charged With Trying to Extort $12,000.

HE MAKES STARTLING CHARGE

Declares She Wrote Hundreds of Letters to Him and Promised to Marry Him Upon Getting Divorce—Couldn't Produce Letters.

Chicago, January 28.—James Gordon Tilbury, former coachman for Mrs. Hollis M. Thurston, a prominent society woman, was placed on trial Wednesday for attempting to blackmail his employer.

Tilbury claimed he had received letters from Mrs. Thurston and threatened her with their publication unless he was given $12,000. Mrs. Thurston arranged to give him the money, and officers placed him under arrest at the very moment he was receiving it. Mrs. Thurston declared that she had never written any letters to Tilbury and that the entire matter was a blackmailing scheme.

Tilbury when placed on the stand in the afternoon swore that he had received the letters and that Mrs. Thurston had offered him $12,000 for them and had promised to marry him after securing a divorce from Mr. Thurston. Although he claimed that he had received 250 letters from Mrs. Thurston he failed to produce them when called upon to do so by the state. After being pressed on the matter Tilbury said the letters were in a tin box in the barn at the Thurston residence.

Officers were at once sent to search, but at a late hour last night had been unable to find anything.

During his evidence Tilbury said that he came to this country in 1891 while on furlough from the British army and had never returned.

SINGULAR EXPERIENCE.

Chicago Man Escapes Death in Peculiar Manner.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—"Block the limited. There's a man on the cowcatcher." This message, flashed along the Pennsylvania line, told the story of a railroad accident just outside of Chicago, which nearly cost a man's life and which trainmen say was almost unprecedented in their experience. John Hancrow, while crossing the tracks in Park Manor, was caught from his feet, hurled in the air, recaught in the cow-catcher, and while the train sped on nearly a mile a minute he saved himself by wrapping his arms around the iron beams in front of the engine.

Two of his ribs and one of his legs were broken, yet in spite of a freezing temperature he clung for four miles, unable to get a signal to the engineer and fireman who were only a few feet behind him. Not until the telephone messages were sent ahead and the train was stopped by signal at the river line station was the man rescued. Hancrow will probably recover.

Uncle Sam as Peacemaker.

Panama, January 28.—At Wednesday afternoon's session of the constitutional convention Dr. Amador proposed that the following article be inserted in the constitution of the republic: "Should public peace or constitutional order be disturbed in any part of the republic of Panama, the government of the United States may intervene to restore peace or order in the event that the United States by treaty or convention shall have assumed, or expressed the intention of assuming the obligation of guaranteeing the independence and sovereignty of this republic." Dr. Amador spoke eloquently on this matter and the proposal to incorporate the article was approved by a big majority.

Not Denominational Now.

Chicago, January 28.—"The University of Chicago is no longer a Baptist institution." Almost in so many words President Wm. R. Harper announced to the senior class Wednesday that the university had outgrown its denominational character. He declared that in the nature of its faculty, its students and its methods, it had spread beyond its allegiance to the Baptist church. Most of the students and most of the professors, he said, were non-Baptists. All the buildings on the campus were paid for by people of other creeds, he continued, and $99 out of every $100 except that given by John D. Rockefeller, who was a Baptist, were contributed by people not members of that church.

Infernal Machine in Palace.

London, January 28.—A despatch to the Central News from Madrid says it has been learned that on last Saturday during King Alfonso's levee at the palace the police discovered an infernal machine underneath a bench near the doorway of the palace, which was crowded at the time with persons of distinction.

Returned Several Indictments.

Milwaukee, January 28.—The grand jury, which is investigating alleged corruption in city and county affairs, returned a number of indictments last night. The papers in the several cases were turned over to the sheriff. Seven persons, it is said, will be taken into custody. Their names have not yet been made public.

Bay City Got a Scorching.

Bay City, Mich., Jan. 28.—The Norton block on the west side, owned by the Fisher Land Co., burned Wednesday morning. It was occupied by W. A. Gregory, jeweler; A. Robacheck, printing and wholesale paper, and H. A. Sieloff, tobacco and cigars. Loss on building, $3,500; insurance, $5,000. Gregory's loss, $2,000; insurance, $1,750. Robacheck's loss about $3,500; insurance, $3,100.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't and can't if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching.

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at different times for stomach troubles, and a run down condition of the system, and have been greatly benefited by its use. I would not be without it in my family. I am troubled especially in summer with weak stomach and nausea and find Hood's Sarsaparilla invaluable." E. B. HICKMAN, W.Chester, Pa.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Strengthen and tone the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Beware of ointments for catarrh that contains mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimoniols free.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

You cannot make clouds for others and live in the clear light yourself.

A very close call.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain," writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright. Price 50 cents.

A good push will scare the devil more than a whole lot of preaching.

Mrs. Johanna Soderholm of Fergus Falls, Minn., fell and dislocated her shoulder. She had a surgeon get it back in place as soon as possible, but it was quite sore and pained her very much. Her son mentioned that he had seen Chamberlain's pain balm advertised for sprains and soreness and she asked him to buy her a bottle of it, which he did. It quickly relieved her and enabled her to sleep which she had not done for several days. The son was so pleased with the relief it gave his mother that he has since recommended it to many others. For sale by all druggists.

Brigham Young was merely the man who had the opportunity.

The many friends of G. H. Hausan, Engineer L. E. & W. R. R., at present living in Lima, O., will be pleased to know of his recovery from threatened kidney disease. He writes: "I was cured by using Foley's Kidney Cure, which I recommend to all especially trainmen, who are usually similarly afflicted." For sale by all druggists.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER VIII.

He was silent. He hoped for an answer. None came. But suddenly the silence was broken by a repressed sob. It was Madeleine's maid, who, seated in a corner, was weeping.

Prosper had been so moved at finding Madeleine that he had not noticed her. He turned in surprise and looked at the weeping woman. He was not mistaken—this neatly dressed waiting maid was Nina Gipsy.

Slowly and almost unconsciously Madeleine had put on her wraps, which were lying on the sofa. When she was ready, she approached Prosper.

"Why did you come here?" she said. "We both have need of all the courage we can command. You are unhappy, Prosper. I am more unhappy. You have a right to complain. I have not the right to shed a tear. While my heart is slowly breaking I must wear a smiling face. You can seek consolation in the bosom of a friend. I can have no confidant but God."

Prosper tried to make a reply, but his pale lips refused to articulate. He was stifling.

"I wish to tell you," continued Madeleine, "that I have forgotten nothing. But, oh, let not this knowledge give you any hope. There is no hope for us. But if you love me you will live. You will not add to my already heavy burden of sorrow the agony of mourning your death. The day may come when I can justify myself in your eyes. And now adieu, adieu!"

She kissed his forehead and rushed from the room, followed by Nina Gipsy.

Prosper was alone. He seemed to be awaking from a troubled dream. He tried to think over what had just happened and asked himself if he were losing his mind. When M. Verduret entered the little parlor, he strode toward him and in a harsh, threatening voice said to him:

"Who are you?"

The fat man did not show any surprise at this burst of anger, but quietly answered:

"A friend of your father. Did you not know it?"

"This is no answer, monsieur. I have surrendered my will to a stranger, and now"—

"Do you want my biography—what I have been, what I am and what I may be? What difference does it make to you? I told you that I would save you. It is essential that I save you."

"Madeleine has ceased to love me, and of what importance is anything else?"

His heartbroken tone aroused M. Verduret's sympathy, and he said in a kind, soothing voice:

"Then you suspect nothing? You did not fathom the meaning of what she said?"

"You were listening!" cried Prosper fiercely.

"I was. It was a presumptuous thing to do, perhaps, but the end justified the means. I am glad I did listen, because it has enabled me to say to you: Take courage, Prosper. Mlle. Madeleine loves you; she has never ceased to love you."

"She loves me, she is free, and yet she shuns me."

"She is not free. In breaking off her engagement with you she was governed by some powerful, irrepressible motive. She is sacrificing herself—for whom? We shall soon know, and the secret of her self sacrifice will discover to us the secret of the plot of which you are the victim."

As M. Verduret spoke Prosper felt all his resolutions of revolt slowly melting away and their place taken by confidence and hope.

"If what you say were true!" he mournfully said.

"Why do you persist in obstinately shutting your eyes to the proof I place before you? Can you not see that Mlle. Madeleine knows who the thief is?"

"Impossible!"

"She does, but no human power can tear the secret from her. She sacrifices you. But, then, she almost has the right, since she first sacrificed herself."

Prosper was convinced, and it nearly broke his heart to leave this little parlor where he had seen Madeleine.

"Alas," he said, pressing M. Verduret's hand, "you must think me a fool! But you don't know how I suffer."

For a moment Prosper was silent, then he said:

"I have finally decided. My honor is a sacred trust for which I must account to my family. I am ready to follow you to the end of the world. Dispose of me as you judge proper."

That same day Prosper, faithful to his promise, sold his furniture and wrote a letter to his friends announcing his intended departure for San Francisco. In the evening he and M. Verduret installed themselves in the Archangel.

CHAPTER IX.

NOT far from the Palais Royal is the sign of The Good Faith, a small establishment, half cafe and half shop, frequented by the people of the neighborhood. It was in one of the rooms of this modest cafe that Prosper the day after his release awaited M. Verduret, who had promised to meet him at 4 o'clock. The clock struck 4. M. Verduret, who was punctuality itself, appeared. He was more red faced and self satisfied, if possible, than the day before. As soon as the servant had left the room to obey his orders he said to Prosper:

"Well, are our commissions executed?"

"Yes, monsieur."

"Have you seen the costumer?"

"I gave him your letter, and everything you ordered will be sent to the Archangel tomorrow."

"Very good. You have not lost time. Neither have I. I have good news for you."

The Good Faith is almost deserted at 4 o'clock. M. Verduret and Prosper could talk at their ease without fear of being overheard by gossiping neighbors. M. Verduret drew forth his memorandum book, the precious diary which, like the enchanted book in fairy tales, had an answer for every question.

"While awaiting our emissaries whom I appointed to meet here let us devote a little time to M. de Lagors. Do you know what part of France this devoted friend of yours comes from?"

"From St. Remy, which is also Mme. Fauvel's native town."

"Are you sure?"

"Oh, perfectly so, monsieur. He has not only often told me so, but I have heard him tell M. Fauvel, and he would tell Mme. Fauvel about his mother, who was her cousin and dearly beloved by her."

"Then you think there is no possible mistake about this?"

"No, monsieur."

"Well, things are beginning to look queer."

And he began to whistle between his teeth, which with M. Verduret was a sign of intense satisfaction.

"What do you mean, monsieur?" inquired Prosper.

"What has just happened, what I have been tracing. Here is a lovely town called St. Remy, 6,000 inhabitants, charming boulevards on the site of the old fortifications, fine statehouse, numerous fountains, large charcoal market, silk factories, famous hospital, and so forth."

Prosper was on burning coals.

"Please be so good, monsieur"—

"It also contains," continued M. Verduret, "a Roman triumphal arch which is of unparalleled beauty and a Greek mausoleum, but no Lagors. St. Remy is the native town of Nostradamus, but not that of your friend."

"Nevertheless I have proofs."

"Naturally. But proofs can be fabricated; relatives can be improvised. Your evidence is open to suspicion; mine are authenticated. While you were pining in prison I was preparing my batteries and collecting munition to open fire. I wrote to St. Remy and received an answer."

"What was it?"

"Have patience," said M. Verduret as he turned over the leaves of his memoranda. "Ah, here is No. 1. Bow respectfully to it; 'tis official."

He then read:

"Lagors. Very old family, originally from Maillane, settled at St. Remy about a century ago."

"You see?" cried Prosper.

"Pray, allow me to finish," said M. Verduret, who proceeded:

"The last of the Lagors (Jules-Rene-Henri), bearing without warrant the title of count, married in 1829 Mlle. Rosalie Clarisse Fontanet of Tarascon; died December, 1848, without male heir, but left two daughters. The registers of the province make no mention of any person in the district bearing the name of Lagors.

"Now, what have you to say to that?" said the fat man.

Prosper looked amazed.

"But why did M. Fauvel treat Raoul as his nephew?"

"You mean as his wife's nephew. Let us examine note No. 2. It is not official, but it throws a valuable light upon the 20,000 livres income of your friend.

"Jules-Rene-Henri de Lagors, last of his name, died at St. Remy on the 29th of December, 1848, in a condition bordering on poverty. He at one time was possessed of a moderate fortune, but invested it in a silkworm nursery and lost it all.

"He had no son, but left two daughters, one of whom is a teacher at Aix, and the other married a retail merchant at Orgon. His widow is supported entirely by one of her relatives, the wife of a rich banker in Paris. No person of the name of Lagors lives in the district of Arles.

"That is all," said M. Verduret. "Don't you think it enough?"

"Really, monsieur, I don't know whether I am awake or dreaming."

"Now I wish to remark one thing. Some people may assert that the Widow Lagors had a child born after her husband's death, not acknowledged, but bearing the father's name. This objection is destroyed by the age of your friend. Raoul is twenty-four, and M. de Lagors has not been dead twenty years."

"But," said Prosper thoughtfully, "who is Raoul?"

"I don't know. I confess it is easier to find out who he is than to know who he is not. There is one man who could give us all the information we seek, but he will take good care to keep his mouth shut."

"M. de Clameran?"

"Yes."

"I have always felt the most inexplicable aversion toward him. Ah, if we could only get his record in addition to what you already have!"

"I have been furnished with a few notes concerning the Clameran family by your father, who knew them well. They are brief, but I expect more."

"What did my father tell you?"

"Nothing favorable, you may be sure. I will read you the synopsis of his information:

"Louis de Clameran was born at the Chateau de Clameran, near Tarascon. He had an elder brother named Gaston. In 1842, in consequence of an affray in which he had the misfortune to kill one man and badly wound another, he was compelled to fly the country. Gaston was an honest, noble youth, universally beloved. Louis, on the contrary, was a wicked, despicable fellow, detested by all who knew him.

"Upon the death of his father Louis came to Paris and in less than two years had squandered not only his own patrimony, but also the share of his exiled brother.

"Ruined, harassed by debt, Louis entered the army, but behaved so disgracefully that he was dismissed from the service.

"After leaving the army we lost sight of him. All we know is that he went to England and thence to a German gambling resort, where he was mixed up in a scandalous affair.

"In 1865 we find him again in Paris. He was in great poverty, and his associates were depraved.

"But he suddenly heard of the return of his brother Gaston to France. Gaston had made a fortune in Mexico; but, being still a young man and accustomed to a very active life, he purchased an iron mill near Oloron, intending to spend the remainder of his life in working it. Six months ago he died in the arms of his brother Louis. His death gave our De Clameran an immense fortune and the title of marquis."

"Then," he said, "from all this I judge that M. de Clameran was very poor when I met him for the first time at M. Fauvel's."

"Evidently."

"And about that time Lagors arrived from the country?"

"Exactly."

"Well," exclaimed M. Verduret, "I am glad you are beginning to understand the state of affairs."

He was interrupted by the entrance of a stranger. The newcomer was a spruce looking coachman, with elegant black whiskers, shining boots with fancy tops, buff breeches and a yellow waistcoat with red and black stripes. After cautiously looking around the room he walked straight up to the table where M. Verduret sat.

"Well, Master Joseph Dubois?" said the stout man eagerly.

"Don't speak of it," answered the servant. "Things are getting warm."

Prosper concentrated all his attention upon this superb domestic. He thought he recognized his face. He had certainly somewhere seen that retreating forehead and those little restless black eyes, but where and under what circumstances he could not remember. Meanwhile Master Joseph had taken a seat at a table adjoining the one occupied by M. Verduret and, having called for some absinth, was preparing it by holding the water aloft and slowly dropping it in the glass.

"Speak," said M. Verduret.

"In the first place, I must say that the position of valet and coachman to M. de Clameran is not a bed of roses."

"Go on. You can complain tomorrow."

"Very good. Yesterday my master walked out at 2 o'clock. Of course I followed him. Do you know where he went? The thing was as good as a farce. He went to the Archangel to keep the appointment made by Nina Gipsy."

"Well, make haste. They told him she was gone. Then?"

"Then? Ah, he was not at all pleased, I assure you. He hurried back to the hotel where the other, M. de Lagors, awaited him. And I have never heard so much swearing! M. Raoul asked him what had happened to put him in such a bad humor. 'Nothing,' replied my master, 'except that little devil has gone off, and no one knows where she is. She has slipped through our fingers.' Then they both appeared to be vexed and uneasy. 'Does she know anything about us?' asked Raoul. 'Nothing but what I told you,' replied Clameran. 'But this nothing, falling in the ear of a man with any suspicions, would put him on the track of the truth.' Then Lagors exclaimed, 'If it is as serious as that, we must get rid of this little serpent!' But my master shrugged his shoulders and, laughing, said: 'You talk like an idiot. When one is annoyed by a woman of this sort, one must take measures to get rid of her administratively.' This idea seemed to amuse them both very much."

"I understand," said M. Verduret. "It is an excellent idea. But the misfortune is it is too late to carry it out. The nothing which made Clameran uneasy has already fallen into a knowing ear. Nevertheless I must not let them see my hand."

With breathless curiosity Prosper listened to this report, every word of which seemed to throw light upon past events. This Raoul, in whom he had confided so deeply, was nothing more than a scoundrel. A thousand circumstances, unnoticed at the time, now recurred to his mind and made him wonder how he could have been so long deceived.

Master Joseph continued his report.

"Yesterday after dinner my master decked himself out like a bridegroom. I shaved him, curled his hair and perfumed him with especial care, after which I drove him to Provence street to call on Mme. Fauvel."

"What!" exclaimed Prosper, "After the insulting language he used the day of the robbery did he dare go to the house?"

"Yes, monsieur; he not only dared this, but he also stayed there until midnight, to my great discomfort, for I got as wet as a rat waiting for him."

"How did he look when he came out?" asked M. Verduret.

"Less pleased than when he went in. After grooming my horses and putting away my carriage I went to see if he wanted anything. I found the door locked, and he swore at me through the keyhole."

"Is that all?" questioned M. Verduret.

"All for yesterday, but this morning my master rose late, still in a horribly bad humor. At noon Raoul arrived, also furious. They at once began to dispute, and such a row! At one time my master seized the other by the throat and shook him like a reed. I thought he would strangle him. But Raoul drew from his pocket a sharp pointed knife, the sight of which made my master drop him in a hurry."

"But what did they say?"

"Ah, there is the rub," said Joseph piteously. "They spoke English, so I could not understand them. But I am sure they were disputing about money."

"How do you know?"

"Because I learned at the exposition that the word 'argent' meant money in every language in Europe, and this word they constantly used in their conversation."

M. Verduret sat with knit brows, talking in an undertone to himself, and Prosper, who was watching him, wondered if he was trying to understand and construct the dispute by mere force of reflection.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

VIII

It is my firm conviction that what our people need in these days is not so much CONVERSION as INFORMATION. In other words, I believe that the only way to secure a real and lasting revival of interest in the Christian Religion is by the dissemination of knowledge. Of course we are none of us perfect; "in many points we offend all." Still, as a rule, people are kind neighbors, true friends, loyal citizens. Yet these same persons—many of them—take little or no interest in Religion. Why? Obviously not because they are so diabolically wicked and need conversion, but rather, as I think, because they do not understand the importance of Religion. "My people perish for lack of Knowledge." Clearly Knowledge is both a guide and an INSPIRATION to action. "Not one in a hundred"—we are told—"has the essentials of a Christian education." Here is sufficient reason for the lamentable lack of interest in religious matters which we find today. It is evident enough that "this kind" can only be cast out by the diffusion of knowledge.

This matter of Baptism to wit. Many persons in these days are disposed to make light of Baptism as being a mere empty form without any Spiritual blessing depending upon it. Obviously this lack of interest in Baptism can only be overcome by a better knowledge of the facts. It is safe to say that "not one in a hundred" who is disposed to disparage the importance of Baptism is aware of the fact that Baptism is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God—that there is no other door under heaven given among men whereby we must enter into the Kingdom of God. (Much less does he know anything about the Kingdom itself!) I suppose that "not one in a hundred" who denies the importance of Baptism can quote a single passage of Scripture bearing upon the subject, or, if he can, has any understanding of the meaning of the passage which he quotes. Absolutely nothing will correct this state of affairs but fuller knowledge—not CONVERSION but INFORMATION.

This has been somewhat of a digression—not altogether out of place I trust, as emphasizing the importance of the work I am trying to do. Next day I will take up the subject of the proper age for Baptism—which we are now in a position to understand, viz., from the meaning and purpose of the rite. Meantime let us gather together the teaching of Scripture with reference to the Spiritual blessing of Baptism.

1. Baptism admits into UNION WITH CHRIST.

Rom. 6:3—"Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?"

1 Cor. 12:13—"For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body."

Gal. 3:27—"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

2. Which union implies the NEW BIRTH OR REGENERATION OF THE SPIRIT.

John 3:5—"Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

Tit. 3:5—"According to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost.

3. Is a STATE OF SALVATION.

Tit. 3:5—(Quoted above.)

1 Pet. 3:21—"The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us."

4. Implying the FORGIVENESS OF SINS.

Acts 2:38—"Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins."

And all this is seen to follow readily enough from the fact that Baptism is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God, which is the Church (Matt. 16: 18, 19) which is the Body of Christ (Eph. 1:22, 23.) C. C. KEMP.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. READ THE STORY OF MICHIGAN IN PEARSON'S MAGAZINE FOR FEBRUARY

DAVID S. BARRY has told the history of Michigan concisely, accurately and dramatically. No State has a story more romantic.

DO YOU KNOW that PEARSON'S entertains more than 1,250,000 people every month?

Modern Methods of "Finance" by Henry George, Jr. President Roosevelt, at Concord, N. H., August 26th, 1902, said: "About all we have a right to expect from Government is that it will see that the cards are not stacked." He was referring to the great industrial combinations. With a view to showing the methods pursued in the organization and manipulation of many of the giant industrial consolidations PEARSON'S will publish a series of articles by Henry George, Jr., the Amalgamation, Inflation, and Manipulation of Copper being the theme of the first two articles. The Asphalt Catastrophe is to be the third.

Indian Fights and Fighters, 1865-1902, by Cyrus Townsend Brady. Illustrated by SCHARNVOGEL. Presenting an authentic, brilliant and thrilling history of frontier tragedies, including Custer's successful attack upon Black Kettle, Custer's Fatal Defeat at the Little Big Horn, Forsyth's Famous Fight on the Arickaree, the story of Powell's desperate defence of Piney Island, the Massacre of Fetterman's Command, Crook's Campaign, Wheaton's Campaign, In the Lava Beds of Oregon.

Tom Nast, Cartoonist. Gen. U. S. Grant said he considered Tom Nast the greatest single figure that had come out of the Civil War. Mr. Albert Bigelow Paine has prepared for PEARSON'S a series of articles from scrap books and memoranda given to him by Tom Nast shortly before his death. This most important set of papers, which includes the Overthrow of the Tweed Ring, the Civil War Period, the Horrors of Slavery, the Reconstruction Period, the Greeley Presidential Campaign, and many other articles presenting vivid pictures of the times when history was warm in the making, will shortly appear.

Monsieur A. V. resumes "Revelations of An International Spy." Following is the schedule thus far planned: The Ruse of the Dowager Empress; the Abdication of Francis Joseph; the Death of Queen Draga; King Edward's Tour; The Black Pope; The Secret History of Panama. The author still insists that his identity must remain a secret.

Mr. Cutting was only 16, and had been accused, falsely, of stealing money, and was so frightened that he deserted, went north and enlisted under another name and served until the close of the war. Since that time the church has been undergoing extensive repairs and when finished it will be open all week days and Bible and literary classes will be held there. It is believed that this will enable the pastor to do the most effective work.

Y. M. C. A. in Tecumseh.

The question of a Young Men's Christian Association in Tecumseh can best be answered by considering the work such an association should perform and the support a work of this kind can expect from business men.

Every association is composed of two classes of members, active and associate. Active members must be members in good standing of evangelical churches. Associate members must have and maintain good moral characters and they enjoy all the privileges of the association except voting and holding office.

The association tends to develop men of an all round character as is stated in its motto, "Spirit, Mind and Body." To do this, it plans to reach men along the religious, educational, social and physical lines. The following out of any one line of work without regard to the work. While on the other hand where a band of men who have been willing to abide by a nominal growth, department after department has been added and the work has grown to be a tower of strength in the community, turning out men in every sense of the word.

The money for the support of an association is derived from two sources, membership fees and subscription. The fact that last year four million dollars was expended in this country in buildings and association work, contributed largely by business men and corporations, shows the appreciation of the work.

The hearty response of the people of Tecumseh to the county committee planing for organization in Tecumseh at the present time. With that in view a meeting will be held in the armory next Sunday at 3 p. m. addressed by Mr. Chas. D. Hurrey, International Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. At this meeting steps will be taken for permanent organization. All men interested in the project are invited and urged to be present at the meeting.

C. L. ROWE, County Secretary.

The regular program was carried out in good season and delicious refreshments served by the charming hostess. Some private conveyances brought out an additional number until a good attendance was present to bear witness to the fact that this was an afternoon to be remembered as a pleasant mile stone in the winter's club work.

AROUND TOWN.

Poor Care taken of the DETROIT SOUTHERN AND D. T. & M.

Railroad Station. Also other items of interest that blew in.

Since the new Lake Shore station has been built it has been a pleasure to patrons of the road at Tecumseh, the place is roomy and pleasant and best of all well taken care of, always kept clean and neat and free from tobacco smoke, really a credit to the Lake Shore road and Mr. Ziehr the local agent. In great contrast is the Detroit Southern and D. T. and M. station, which is simply rotten in every way.

In the first place there is no separate room for the accommodation of the ladies Men and women are crowded together in one room. The men fill the space with smoke and cover the floor with tobacco spit. Most of the time there is little if any fire in the stove, which is partitioned from the room occupied by the operators, and when the 6:45 Detroit Southern train comes in, the room is so filled with news boys, who raise the very devil, that waiting passengers are nearly in danger of their lives. The place has not been scrubbed out since the HERALD roasted the place a year ago last fall. It is actually a disgrace for any lady to go into this station for ever so short a stay and dangerous these cold days on account of lack of fire. Lately the D. S. afternoon trains have been two or three hours late nearly every day and for a lady to spend this time in a room filled with tobacco smoke and rotten with spit on the floor is certainly a disgrace to any civilized community.

Whether the D. T. & M. or Detroit Southern officials are to blame for this state of affairs, I do not know, but I have an idea that the thing must have some relation to the Detroit Southern as the station in Adrian, is worse, if that condition were possible. Certainly, the local agents have given the matter no attension and it is a shame.

Mr. J. J. Dooley is a traveling representative of H. E. Bucklen & Co. of Chicago, one of the strongest patent medicine firms in this country. Mr. Dooley usually strikes Tecumseh in January of each year, makes an advertising contract with the HERALD and sells Bucklen's Arnica salve for his firm. I always feel like singing "Oh Mr. Dooley" when he comes, for he is a mighty good natured, short, stubby, little chap, who carries good nature around with him dropping flakes off at every stop. This trip he told me that his first trip to Tecumseh was made 21 years ago. He made a contract that year with me for the HERALD and the work has not been out of the paper since. He always tells me of a friend of his down at Tuscola, Ill., named M. F. Stacy a druggist there who is quite well to do financially. This man Stacy is certainly no relative of mine for if all my relatives would die and will all their money to me I would not have enough money left with which to give the last one a decent burial.

* * *

Along the middle of last November I received two menu cards from the management of the M. & O. Railroad Co. These cards were beautifully printed and contained great bills of fare of meals served on the dining cars of that road. Among other things served was "Porridge." Now to the average resident of the United States "porridge" is an uncommon dish. "Oat meal" is common here, but porridge is the name used in England. American people will be "led by the nose" and anything "English y' know" is taken up by many people here. I have heard several ladies of late speak of "porridge" and have thought of what my brothers used to tell me of being "Led by the nose."

* * *

I understand that the school board has let the contract for the building of the new Library. The wood work to Charley Smith and brick work to Frank Pocklington.

This is as it should be. Both these men are capable mechanics and will take pains and great pleasure in producing a fine structure. In fact the school board of Tecumseh, is composed of very capable painstaking men deserving great credit for securing this money from Carnegie and they will spend it in the most economical and best way.

* * *

Thinking of snow and cold weather the goose bone prophet of the Chicago Record Herald last fall predicted that we would have the severest winter in 40 years, but an early spring. The winter prediction has certainly been true, and we hope he has also told the truth about the coming spring.

During the last few days it has been easy to tell the painstaking house holder by the looks of his front walk, whether it is cleaned off the whole length or just the portion nearest town.

GEO. N. STACY.

John Engel, a horse dealer of Ypsilanti, met with an accident last week Wednesday which may cost him the loss of an eye. He was assisting the men in filling his ice houses from the pond above the Paper mills and a cut spike was bothering them which he ordered removed. A man struck it with a hammer and as it broke a piece struck Mr. Engel in the eye. He was removed to the U. of M. hospital where Dr. Carrow made an examination and then stated that there was a possible chance of saving his sight.—Saline Observer.

In Adrian eighteen telephone girls went out for a sleigh ride, had you been there and heard them talk, you would have almost died, for all the gossip of the town, they had at their tongue's end, they'd caught it flying o'er the wires, from friend to dearest friend; and every time they passed a house, they'd yell "Hello! what number?" and rudely wake the farmer up from calm and peaceful slumber. The telephone girls are always nice, but there's a question whether they'd rather sleighride with the boys, or in a load together.

The Sparring Match.

Tecumseh, Mich., Jan. 27, 1904.

EDITOR TECUMSEH HERALD:—It appears to be the general understanding that there is to be a prize fight in the opera house in Tecumseh on Thursday evening, February 4th, under the guise of a sparring contest, the parties undoubtedly have ascertained what their rights are under the law of this state. Unless you are unusually crowded for space that is paid for, will you donate a little space that the people may know their rights?

Compilers' section 11732 of the compiled laws of Michigan 1897, THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF MICHIGAN ENACT: That any person who shall hereafter be a party to, or engage in a prize fight, or any other fight in the nature of a prize fight, in this state, or who shall aid or abet therein, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the state prison for a term not exceeding five years, nor less than one year, or by a fine not exceeding two thousand dollars, nor less than two hundred dollars, or by both fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court.

Section 11733:—All persons who shall engage in the training of any party to a prize fight, or shall assist therein, or who shall knowingly carry any person or persons to or from a prize fight shall be deemed aiders and abettors, within the meaning of the preceding section.

Section 11734:—Any person who shall wilfully be present at such prize fight in this state, or shall give or publish notice thereof or invite any person or persons to attend the same, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the county jail, or in the Detroit house of correction, not exceeding one year, or by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

Section 11735:—Any person who shall, within this state, enter into any agreement, or understanding whatsoever, aid, advise, or council in making any such agreement or understanding whatsoever, for a prize fight to take place either within or without this state, or who shall, in this state, train, or prepare any person or persons for a prize fight to take place out of this state, shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by imprisonment in the county jail, or Detroit house of correction, not exceeding one year, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars.

If you do not want the fight to go on, write the Sheriff, Wm. F. Shepard, or Theodore M. Joslin prosecuting attorney at Adrian, Mich., or call on the president of the village of Tecumseh and tell them you will stand behind them.

Respectfully,
J. W. WIGHTMAN.

Saved from terrible death.

The family of Mrs. M. L. Bobbitt of Bargerton, Tenn., saw her dying and were powerless to save her. The most skillful physicians and every remedy used, failed, while consumption was slowly but surely taking her life. In this terrible hour Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption turned despair into joy. The first botttle brought immediate relief and its continued use completely cured her. It's the most certain cure in the world for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at C. A. Wright's drug store.

Mr. Page was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Page, and was born July 17, 1856, in New York, making him 47 years, 6 mo. 9 days old at the time of his death. He was married in 1889 to Miss Jennie Smith and since residing in Tecumseh has worked at the upholsterer's trade. He leaves beside his wife, a brother Dell Page of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Richmond, and Mr. and Mrs. Hague of Stockbridge, to mourn his loss. A half brother, John Lewis of AnnArbor, was unable to be present at the funeral.

The funeral was held at two o'clock from the house, Rev. Bower officiating.

NOW IS THE TIME TO USE HYOMEI

At this season of the year, catarrhal troubles are very prevalent, and nearly every person suffers to a certain extent.

Catarrh is actually the result of a succession of colds and can be easily prevented if the proper treatment is followed.

Hyomei is a natural yet scientific cure for the colds and grip troubles that lead to catarrh, as well as a positive cure for the disease itself.

The balsamic air of Hyomei breathed through the small pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit is filled with germ-killing and health-giving qualities that penetrate to the minutest air cells of the head, throat and lungs. It kills all catarrhal germs, frees the mucous membrane from poisonous microbes, and makes a perfect and complete cure of catarrh.

The complete outfit costs only $1, while extra bottles of Hyomei can be procured for 50c. C. A. Wright sells Hyomei on the "no cure, no pay" plan, and will refund the money if it fails to give perfect satisfaction. You take no risk whatever in using Hyomei. It is the only treatment sold under a guarantee of this nature where a leading local druggist agrees to return the money if the treatment fails to cure.

A FITTING TRIBUTE.

The following public statement of a respected citizen adds one more emphatic endorsement of merit to the scores that have appeared before.

Mrs. E. D. Fryer, who lives in the northwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I suffered from my kidneys off and on for about two years. During an attack the pain was worse along in the afternoon and I often felt like giving up but I keep on working in misery, for stooping or straightening made my back feel as if it were breaking in two. If I took a slight cold it always settled in my back and in spite of all the remedies I used I could not get relief. Procuring Doan's Kidney Pills at C. A. Wright's drug store I took a course of the treatment. It did more good than all the other medicine I ever used. The pain in my back was quickly relieved. I take pleasure in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills at every opportunity."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

NO WEATHER BUREAU

Rheumatics Can Tell by Their Aches When a Storm is Coming.

Rheumatics save barometers, but it is like sticking knives into them when change of weather comes.

When nature waves her danger flag it is an acute evidence of the disease and a cry for help. She cannot free herself from this Uric acid, but convulsively tries to throw it off as the stomach tries to eject a poison.

If you do not help nature you will have to suffer. You have suffered. There's no need. Athlophoros can stop the pain and free you from this weather-vane trick. Athlophoros acts directly on the Uric acid like a May day on an ice field—it will drive your Rheumatism away, no matter what kind of Rheumatism or Neuralgia you may have. Sciatica and Lumbago both come from Uric acid and will respond quickly to the action of Athlophoros—it will soothe and quiet you—you can prove it easily. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. It is pleasant to know help is so near. You will find it still pleasanter to be without aches and pains.

GAVE UP TO POLICE

Murderer of Mrs. Seville of Detroit Makes Complete Confession.

WALKED INTO THE STATION

And Told Story of His Cold-Blooded Deed—Fear of Losing Woman He Loved His Motive—Tried Self-Destruction.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 1.—Although being eagerly searched for by the police, it remained for Joseph Miller, alias Meunier, to walk into police headquarters yesterday morning at 9:45 and give himself up, confessing as he did so that he had committed one of the most horrible deeds in Detroit's criminal annals. All the previous evening, while nearly a score of detectives had been scouring the city for him, the man had walked the streets. Miller claims also that he attempted self-destruction, but that he failed to accomplish his purpose and that at last, conscience-stricken, he decided to give himself up. A mad love for another man's wife is attributed by Miller as a cause for his murdering Mrs. Seville.

A charge of murder was registered opposite Miller's name. He then confessed that he had caused the woman's death.

His Story of the Crime.

Joseph Miller, the self-confessed murderer of Loretta Seville, is one of the most remarkable psychological studies ever presented to the police. His only regret is that he was not able to take his own life as a fitting climax to the bloody murder he perpetrated. His absorbing passion was love for the woman he slaughtered.

"I went to see her about 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon. I saw Mrs. Seville in her room and asked her down stairs to have a drink. First we had a little beer, and knowing how well she liked wine I ordered some. I managed to drop some arsenic in each glass and then stirred it up. I don't know whether she saw it or not, but she wouldn't drink her wine. I downed mine and hoped the poison would work soon.

Tried Self-Destruction.

"I then went out and to my room in the Michigan Exchange. I got that dagger out of my trunk and placed it in my hip pocket.

"Then I started for the saloon again. I sneaked up the stairs and heard Mrs. Seville talking to another woman, and my blood boiled when I heard what she said: 'I'll get that train out at 8 o'clock Sunday morning and shake both of them ——.'

"I saw the woman I loved drifting away from me, and I grew frenzied. I went to her room a few moments later. She saw me enter and grew pale as she did so, but I do not remember that she uttered a word. I wanted to die and take her with me. It is all a haze to me," said Miller, as he rubbed his forehead. "I stabbed again and again. If I couldn't have her I was determined that no one else would. I walked out of the place and over to my room."

Miller says he then went to Lafayette avenue and engaged a room under the name of John Smith, but upon retiring found he could not sleep, rolling and tumbling in his bed until morning, then getting up, and after getting breakfast at a nearby restaurant went to the police headquarters and gave himself up.

It is possible that in view of his full confession of his crime that he may be arraigned in the recorder's court and sentenced within a very short time.

WOMAN MURDERED.

Detroit Woman Victim of a Jealous Lover.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 30.—With nine stabs in her body, one in the left ventricle of the heart and others tearing the lungs, Mrs. Loretta Seville, wife of James T. Seville, an employe of the Detroit Omnibus Co., rushed from her room upstairs at 293 Jefferson avenue into the saloon of Thomas E. Lewis below and expired. The woman had been brutally murdered, it is alleged, by Joseph Miller, whose right name is said to be Meunier. She died without being able to tell her story of the terrible affair, but according to her husband the murder is the result of his wife's infidelity, which was made known to him last Friday morning by her betrayer and alleged slayer.

Miller had visited Mrs. Seville with the intention of inducing her to elope with him, but evidently failing in this then drew a knife and stabbed her.

As soon as it became known that the woman had been murdered the police were notified, and shortly afterwards the entire detective force of the city was at work on the case. Miller escaped from the building during the excitement incident upon Mrs. Seville's death and has not been found.

Snubbed Miss Alice.

Washington, Jan. 30.—A break in the relations between Alice Roosevelt and Countess Cassini, wife of the Russian ambassador, is said to have occurred as the result of a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Russell A. Alger last Saturday night in honor of the president's daughter. Three hours before the reception the countess sent a note to Mrs. Alger saying she had a cold and would be unable to attend. Late in the evening Miss Roosevelt and other guests went to a dinner given by Mrs. Townsend and there found Countess Cassini, who showed no signs of being ill. Now they do not speak.

Mysterious Circumstance.

One was pale and sallow and the other fresh and rosy. Whence the difference? She who is blushing with health uses Dr. King's New Life Pills to maintain it. By gently arousing the lazy organs they compel good digestion and head off constipation. Try them. Only 25c, at C. A. Wright's, Druggist.

DELAY IN THE REPLY

But Russia Will Answer Japanese Note This Week.

MUCH CARE IS BEING TAKEN

Effort Being Taken to Shape Reply So as to Prevent Rupture—Tone of Official Sentiment Improved.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Information received at the state department is to the effect that Russian reply to Japan's last note on the far eastern question will be made the early part of the present week. The tenor of the prospective communication is not known here.

Paris, Feb. 1.—Another delay has occurred in framing and forwarding the Russian answer to the latest Japanese note, and this will result in further averting the culmination of the crisis until the middle or the latter part of this week.

The official advices just received here from St. Petersburg, although somewhat negative, gave definite details of the status of the note and the program it was intended to follow. Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister, had expected that the exchanges going on would have permitted the final drafting of the answer so it could have been presented to the czar Saturday for his approval, but the expectation was not realized, and as a matter of fact the answer has not yet been finally drafted. It was therefore determined to defer its submission to the czar until Tuesday or Wednesday. Efforts are still being made to so shape this answer as to prevent a rupture.

Owing to the fact that the Russian answer is not completed, it is pointed out that the reports concerning its general terms must be taken with allowance, as the delay indicates that some of the points which presented the most serious difficulties may yet be reconciled. In any event, officials here are confident that definite results will be known next Thursday. Owing to the feeling that a final effort toward reconciliation was being made the tone of official sentiment on the matter is somewhat improved.

London, Feb. 1.—Baron Tayashi, the Japanese minister to Great Britain, said to the Associated Press last night that his government did not know what Russia's answer would be, and therefore it was impossible to say whether war was probable or not. The fact that the Russian reply had not yet been dispatched showed, according to Baron Hayashi, that Russia's decision had not yet taken, as it was hardly probable if a decision had been reached that the note should be delayed.

Wife and Baby Stabbed.

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 1.—When George A. Shields, a well-known business man, reached his home in the heart of the city at the luncheon hour he found his 3-year-old daughter Mildred lying in a pool of blood in the hall, with two ugly wounds in her head. He found his wife lying in pools of blood on a closet floor upstairs, with her throat cut from ear to ear and her head horribly hacked. Mrs. Shields managed to gasp: "A large black negro man came through the kitchen and attacked me in the dining room." Beside this there is no clue to the criminal.

Catcher Mahaney a Suicide.

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 1.—Daniel Mahaney of this city, a famous base ball catcher, committed suicide at home last night by drinking carbolic acid. He had not been working regularly for some time and had threatened to take his life unless his affairs became brighter. He played on many teams during the '90s, including the Washingtons and Cincinnatis.

Fortune For His Inventions.

Albion, Mich., Feb. 1.—An ingenious brain has brought a fortune to Charles E. Shumway of this city. Mr. Shumway is the inventor of a cement mold, to be utilized in the manufacture of blocks for building purposes, and he is also the patentee of two engines. G. E. Murdock, Mr. Shumway's financier, with the latter's consent, sold the three patents to A. J. Stacer, a Chicago promoter, for $40,000.

Shot by Burglars.

Joplin, Mo., Feb. 1.—In an exchange of shots with two masked men, who had rifled the depot safe, William H. Broadstreet, station agent on the 'Frisco system at Granby, near here, was fatally wounded. The men escaped. Bloodhounds have been sent to the scene from Joplin.

Turned Catholic.

Milwaukee, Feb. 1.—The Rev. H. Schultz, formerly rector of the St. Stephen's Episcopal parish in this city, has publicly renounced allegiance to the Episcopal faith and was baptized and received into the Catholic church. A number of his former parishioners witnessed the ceremony.

Fought Over Boundary Fence.

Jonacatepec, Mexico, Feb. 1.—Pedro Alcazar, a wealthy ranchman living near this city, killed a commandant of police and two other officers who were attempting to arrest him in connection with a dispute over a boundary fence on Alcazar's ranch. Alcazar made his escape and is still at large.

A Prominent Citizen.

Church Closed Up.

Owosso, Mich., Feb. 1.—The old Presbyterian church at Corunna has been closed on account of the congregation not being able to pay running expenses. Rev. Thomas Towler, formerly pastor of the church, has moved to Owosso.

CONNECTED BY WIRES

Guests of Banquets Conversed Across the Ocean.

NOVEL AFFAIRS BY PILGRIMS

London, Jan. 30.—While the American branch of the Pilgrims' society was giving its dinner last night at Delmonico's in New York in honor of Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, British ambassador to the United States, the English branch of the society celebrated the occurrence with a supper at the Carlton hotel.

Shortly before the Delmonico banquet commenced some seventy members of the Pilgrims' society here sat down at a number of small tables, which were all looped up with telegraph wires strung on miniature poles and decorated with foliage. Among those present were Joseph H. Choate, the American ambassador; the Earl of Halsbury, lord high chancellor; Sir Edward L. Durand, brother of Sir Henry; Sir Thomas Lipton, Lord Deerhurst and Lord Fairfax.

The unique feature of the evening consisted in the innovation by Trans-Atlantic cable company of cable instruments in one of the supper rooms. By means of this arrangement frequent messages were exchanged between Delmonico's in New York and the Carlton hotel here, so that the English pilgrims felt as much in touch with the New York celebration as if they had been actually present.

The old grandfather's clocks, one showing English and the other American time, enabled Mr. Choate, the Earl of Halsbury and the others to keep an eye on the progress of the New York banquet. Strands of the Atlantic cable laced on the tables enabled the guests to realize the means by which such instantaneous and intimate interchange was possible in spite of the difficulties of distance and the difference in time. The name of Sir Mortimer Durand, when pronounced, was given a hearty cheer.

New York, Jan. 30.—Interchanges of cable messages of good will with the English pilgrims at supper at the Carlton hotel, London, formed a striking feature of the banquet given at Delmonico's last night by the pilgrims of the United States in honor of Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, British ambassador. Bishop Potter presided.

The banqueting hall was decorated with a great profusion of intertwined British and American flags. Just before the dinner began the following cable was sent by Secretary Wilson to Walter Neef of London:

"Hello, there. Whenever you are ready we are. Hoop-la."

Bishop Potter sent this to Lord Roberts:

"Lord Roberts: We reciprocate your good wishes and return hearty greetings. God speed the good work of the pilgrims and all efforts to bring the Anglo-Saxon race together. We hope you will pay us the promised visit."

Cables were sent back and forth during the banquet. During the progress of the dinner press dispatches were read which told of peace negotiations between the Russian and Japanese powers having reached that stage where peace is practically assured.

GAINS HIS LIBERTY.

Indictment Against Ex-Mayor Ames of Minneapolis Was Faulty.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 30.—The supreme court Friday quashed the indictment against former Mayor Ames of Minneapolis, and the entire court held that the indictment was faulty. Judge Start, Collins and Lewis concurred in the majority opinion that the offense was not proven, while Judges Lovely and Brown disagree with that part of the opinion of the majority.

Dr. Ames was charged and convicted in the district court of Hennepin county of receiving money illegally as mayor of Minneapolis from women. He was indicted for that offense Feb. 4, 1903, and after a trial of several weeks, during which much sensational testimony was introduced, was found guilty and sentenced to a term of six years in prison. An appeal was taken to the supreme court on the ground that the indictment was not properly drawn, in that it charged more than one crime. This contention was sustained by the supreme court yesterday. Dr. Ames was mayor of Minneapolis four times. Ames will be given his liberty.

Wreckage Was Burned.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 1.—After all the valuables were taken from the wrecked cars at the bridge over the Huron river, the wreckage was set on fire Sunday afternoon and burned up. The railroad men thought this the easiest way of getting rid of it. Work on the bridge will be pushed as rapidly as possible and it is hoped to have trains running on the division again this week.

Gasoline For Street Lights.

Berrien Springs, Mich., Jan. 30.—This village is the first place to try the experiment of lighting wholly by gasoline lamps, which are being installed by the Searchlight company of Benton Harbor. The experiment is being watched with interest by other villages.

A Mother's Recommendation.

EXPLODING GAS

Caused Death of Two Persons and Injury of Six Others.

Pittsburg, Feb. 1.—An explosion of natural gas in the cellar of the home of Henry Magel, in West Liberty Sunday, was the cause of the deaths of two persons and the severe injury of six others.

The dead are: Henry Magel, aged 55 years; burned to death in the cellar. Charles Magel, his son, aged 20; both legs burned off and caught under falling walls.

Mrs. Henry Magel fell through to the cellar and was seriously injured. Her children, William, aged 13, Annie 25 and Otto 18, and Charles Almasy, a son-in-law, and his wife were all badly bruised and cut.

The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a leak from the gas main into the cellar, and when Mr. Magel went to the cellar for a bucket of coal, carrying a lighted candle, a terrific explosion followed, completely wrecking the house.

SHOT HIMSELF.

Son of President of Switzerland Committed Suicide.

M. Comtesse, who had been living here recently, drove out on Thursday to pay a visit to a woman of his acquaintance. Upon being informed that she was not in Comtesse reentered his carriage and shot himself in the mouth with a revolver, the bullet penetrating his brain. He was taken to a hospital, where he died at midnight.

He had been suffering from cerebral derangement, resulting from malarial fever.

Florence Maybrick Not Free.

London, Feb. 1.—Mrs. Florence Maybrick, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of her husband, has not been released, but was removed from Aylesbury prison Jan. 25, presumably to a private institution, for the purpose of recuperation. She is still undergoing sentence under guard and though apparently not an inmate of any prison she still remains as much a prisoner in the eye of the law as when she was at Aylesbury. On the authority of the United States embassy here, the Associated Press is authorized to definitely deny that Mrs. Maybrick has been pardoned.

Theaters Given Warning.

New York, Feb. 1.—Mayor McClelland has notified the managers of nineteen theaters that, having been informed that they had failed to fulfill promises made by them to adopt measures of safety prescribed by the fire, health and building departments, he would give them up to midnight on Tuesday to inaugurate the reforms, and that in the event of failure to do so he would then exert all his power to compel compliance.

Won't Accept Double Mileage.

Washington, Feb. 1.—By a vote of 167 to 0 the house decided that its members would not accept double mileage for the extraordinary and the present regular sessions of the fifty-eighth congress. This means that the government will be saved $149,000 and possibly $190,000, which would be the amount if the senators had been included in the arrangement, as would undoubtedly have been the case had the provision passed both branches.

Burkhold's Shortage $241,000.

Cincinnati, Feb. 1.—The report of the experts, who have completed their examination of the books of the Franklin bank of this city, shows former Cashier Henry Burkhold to have been $241,000 short. Burkhold was superceded as cashier several months ago and has been so prostrated by his financial collapse that he is not expected to recover.

NOT AN EMPTY SEAT.

Many Republicans at the Gridley Club Banquet.

Ionia, Mich., Jan. 30.—The sixth annual banquet of the Gridley Republican club of Ionia county, held here last night, eclipsed all former functions of the kind held in the county. Never has the demand for seats or the crush been so great and the real Rooseveltian spirit of strenuousness could only be likened to the skirmish that took place to secure tickets. The arrangements to handle the crowd were as complete as could be expected for the size of the hall.

Five hundred and seventy plates were laid, but to accommodate the overflow another hundred was crowded in during the afternoon. There were twelve long tables and not an empty seat. The Presbyterian and Methodist ladies served the spread, seventy young ladies dressed in white bringing on the several courses with military precision and to the tap of the bell at 8 o'clock.

Midland, Mich., Jan. 30.—As was expected, the fourth annual banquet of the McKinley Republican club of Midland county, which took place in Germania hall, this city, last night, proved an event that will not soon be forgotten. Guests to the number of 250 were seated at the twelve tables.

Hanged Himself In Deserted House.

Cheboygan, Mich., Jan. 30.—The body of an unknown man was found in a deserted house on the outskirts of the city. He had evidently committed suicide by hanging, for one end of a broken clothesline was around his neck, while the other end was attached to the joist above. A letter in German was found on his person, but there was nothing in it to show his identity.

Nearly Forfeits His Life.

A runaway almost ending fatally, started a horrible ulcer on the leg of J. B. Orner, Franklin Grove, Ill. For four years it defied all doctors and all remedies. But Bucklen's Arnica Salve had no trouble to cure him. Equally good for Burns, Bruises, Skin, Eruptions and Piles. 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

All Stuffed Up

That's the condition of many sufferers from catarrh, especially in the morning. Great difficulty is experienced in clearing the head and throat.

No wonder catarrh causes headache, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, pollutes the breath, deranges the stomach and affects the appetite.

To cure catarrh, treatment must be constitutional—alterative and tonic.

"I was afflicted with catarrh. I took medicines of different kinds, giving each a fair trial; but gradually grew worse until I could hardly hear, taste or smell. I then concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking five bottles I was cured and have not had any return of the disease since." EUGENE FORBES, Lebanon, Kan.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER IX.

"When they had done fighting," continued Joseph, "the villains began to talk in French again, but they only spoke of trifles—a fancy ball which is to be given by some banker. When Raoul was leaving, my master said, 'Since this thing is inevitable, and it must take place today, you had better remain at home, at Vesinet, this evening.' Raoul replied, 'Certainly.'"

Night was coming on, and the room was gradually filling with men, who called for absinth or bitters, and youths, who perched themselves upon high stools and smoked their pipes.

"It is time to go," said M. Verduret to Joseph. "Your master will want you. Besides, here is some one who wishes to speak with me. I will see you tomorrow."

The newcomer was no other than Cavaillon, more troubled and frightened than ever. He looked uneasily around the room, as if he feared the whole Paris police force to appear and carry him off to prison. He did not sit down at M. Verduret's table, but stealthily gave his hand to Prosper, and, after assuring himself that no one was observing them, handed M. Verduret a package, saying:

"She found this in a cupboard."

It was a handsomely bound prayer book. M. Verduret rapidly turned over the leaves and soon found the pages from which the words pasted on the letter received by Prosper had been cut.

"I had moral proofs," he said, handing the book to Prosper, "but here is material proof sufficient in itself to save you."

At sight of the book Prosper turned pale as a ghost. He recognized this prayer book instantly. He had given it to Madeleine in exchange for the medal. On the fly leaf Madeleine had written, "Souvenir of Notre Dame de Fourvieres, 17 January, 1866."

"This book belongs to Madeleine!" he cried.

M. Verduret did not reply, but walked toward a young man dressed like a wine merchant, who ha[illegible] the room. He glanced at the note which this person handed to him and hastened back to the table.

"I think we have got them now!" he said excitedly.

Throwing a five franc piece on the table and without saying a word to Cavaillon, he hurried Prosper from the room.

"What fatality!" he said as he hastened along the street. "We may miss them. I fear we shall reach the St. Lazare station too late for the St. Germain train."

"For heaven's sake, where are you going?" asked Prosper.

"Come on. We can talk on the way."

"I don't know the road very well that way."

The name of Vesinet was enough for Prosper.

"I will point out the road," he interrupted quickly.

"Well," said the driver, "at this time of night in such dreadful weather it will be 25 francs."

"And how much for driving very rapidly?"

"I leave that to your generosity, but if you make it 35 francs I think"—

"You shall have a hundred," interrupted M. Verduret, "if you overtake a carriage which has half an hour's start of us."

"By thunder!" cried the delighted driver. "Jump in quick! We are losing time!"

CHAPTER X.

LEAVING the little station of Vesinet, we come upon two roads. One, to the left, macadamized and kept in perfect repair, leads to the village, of which there are glimpses here and there through the trees. The other, newly laid out and just covered with gravel, leads through the woods. At the junction of these two roads Prosper stopped the cab. The driver had gained his hundred francs. The horses were completely worn out, but before long M. Verduret could distinguish the lamps of a cab similar to the one he occupied about fifty yards ahead of him. Alighting from the cab, he handed the driver a bank note.

"Here," he said, "is what I promised you. Go to the first tavern you find on the right hand side of the road as you enter the village. If we are not there, you are at liberty to return to Paris."

The driver was profuse in his thanks, but neither Prosper nor his companion heard them. They had already started up the new road. The weather, which had been inclement when they set out, was now worse. The rain fell in torrents, and a furious wind howled dismally through the branches of the trees. M. Verduret and Prosper had been walking along the muddy road for about five minutes when suddenly the latter stopped.

"This is Raoul's house," he said.

Before the gate of an isolated house stood the cab which they had followed. Reclining on his seat, wrapped in a thick cloak, was the driver, who, in spite of the pouring rain, was already asleep, evidently waiting for the person whom he had brought to this house.

M. Verduret went to him, pulled his cloak and said in a low voice:

"Hello, my man."

The driver started and, mechanically gathering his reins, yawned out, "All right."

But when by the light of the carriage lamps he saw two men in this lonely spot he imagined that they wanted his purse and perhaps his life.

"I am engaged!" he cried out as he cracked his whip in the air. "I am waiting here for some one."

"I know that, you fool," replied M. Verduret, "and only wish to ask you a question which you can gain five francs by answering. Did you not bring a middle aged lady here?"

This question, this promise of five francs, instead of reassuring the coachman, increased his alarm.

"I have already told you I am waiting for some one," he said. "Move on or I will call for help."

M. Verduret drew back quickly.

"Come away," he whispered to Prosper. "The beast will do as he says and, the alarm once given, farewell to our projects. We must find some other entrance than by this gate."

They went along the wall surrounding the garden in search of a place where it was possible to climb.

This was difficult to discover in the dark, the wall being twelve feet high. Fortunately M. Verduret was very agile, and, having decided upon the spot to be scaled, he drew back and, making a sudden spring remarkable for so big a man, seized one of the projecting stones above him, drawing himself up by the aid of his hands and feet to the top of the wall. It was now Prosper's turn to climb up; but, though much younger than his companion, he had not his agility, and M. Verduret was obliged to pull him up, then helped him down on the other side. Once in the garden, M. Verduret took in the situation. The house occupied by M. de Lagors was built in the middle of a large garden. It was narrow, two stories high and with garrets.

Only one window, in the second story, was lighted.

"You have often been here and know the house?" said M. Verduret. "What room is that where we see the light?"

"Raoul's bedchamber."

"Very good. What rooms are on the first floor?"

"And on the floor above?"

"Two parlors, separated by folding doors, and a study."

"Where do the servants sleep?"

"Raoul has none now. He is served by a man and his wife, who come in the morning and go after dinner."

M. Verduret rubbed his hands gleefully.

"All right," he said. "There is nothing to prevent our hearing what Raoul has to say to this person who has come from Paris at 10 o'clock at night to see him. Let us go in."

But unfortunately the heavy oak door was locked. M. Verduret shook it in vain.

"What an oversight," he said, with vexation. "I ought to have brought my instruments with me. A common lock which could be opened with a nail, and I have not even a piece of wire!"

Recognizing the uselessness of an attempt to open the door, he tried successively every window on the ground floor. Alas, every blind was securely fastened on the inside.

M. Verduret was exasperated. He prowled around the house like a fox around a hen coop, seeking an entrance. Despairingly he came back to the place in front of the house whence he had the best view of the lighted window.

"If I could only look in!" he cried. "In there," pointing to the window, "is the solution of the mystery, and we are cut off from it by thirty or forty feet of these two stories. I must see, and I will see!"

Suddenly Prosper seemed to remember something.

"There is a ladder here!" he cried.

"Why didn't you tell me? Where is it?"

"At the end of the garden, under the trees."

They ran to the spot, and in a few minutes the ladder was up against the house. But to their chagrin they found that there were six good feet between the top of the ladder and the lighted window.

"We cannot reach it," exclaimed Prosper.

"We must reach it!" cried M. Verduret.

And he quickly placed himself a yard off from the house and, seizing the ladder, cautiously raised it, resting the bottom round on his shoulders, at the same time holding the two uprights firmly and steadily with his hands. The obstacle was overcome.

"Now mount," he said to his companion.

The situation was distressing for Prosper, but he did not hesitate. He made a sudden spring and, seizing the lower rounds, quickly climbed up the ladder, which swayed and trembled beneath his weight. But his head had scarcely passed above the lighted window when he uttered a cry which was drowned in the roaring tempest and dropped like a log down on the wet grass, crying:

"The villain! The villain!"

With wonderful promptness and vigor M. Verduret laid the ladder on the ground and ran toward Prosper, fearing he was dead or dangerously injured.

"What did you see? Are you hurt?" he whispered.

But Prosper had already risen. Although he had had a violent fall, he was unhurt.

"I saw," he answered in a hoarse voice—"I saw Madeleine—do you understand, Madeleine?—in that room alone with Raoul."

M. Verduret was confounded. Was it possible that he, the infallible expert, had been mistaken in his deductions?

He well knew that M. de Lagors' visitor was a woman, but his own conjectures and the note which Mme. Gipsy had sent to him at the tavern had fully assured him that this woman was Mme. Fauvel.

"You must be mistaken," he said to Prosper.

"No, monsieur; no. Never could I mistake another for Madeleine. Ah, you who heard what she said to me yesterday, answer me. Was I to expect this infamous treachery? You said to me then, 'She loves you, she loves you!'"

M. Verduret did not answer. He had first been stupefied by his mistake and was now racking his brain to discover the cause of it, which was soon discerned by his penetrating mind.

"This is the secret discovered by Ninn," continued Prosper. "Madeleine, this pure and noble Madeleine, whom I believed to be as immaculate as an angel, is alone with this thief who has even stolen the name he bears, and I, trusting fool that I was, made him my best friend. I confided to him all my hopes and fears, and he was her lover! Of course they ridiculed my absurd devotion and stupid confidence!"

"How do we know," said M. Verduret, "that Mlle. Madeleine is here on her own account? Did we not come to the conclusion that she was sacrificing herself for the benefit of some one? That superior will which compelled her to your dismissal may have brought about this step tonight."

That which coincides with our secret wishes is always eagerly welcomed. This supposition, apparently improbable, appealed to Prosper.

"That might be the case," he said. "Who knows?"

"I would soon know," said M. Verduret, "if I could see them together in that room."

Prosper thought a moment.

"Will you promise me, monsieur, to tell me the exact truth—all that you see and hear, no matter how painful it may be for me?"

"I swear it, upon my word of honor."

Then, with a strength of which a few minutes before he would not have believed himself possessed, Prosper raised the ladder and placed the last round on his shoulder.

"Mount," he said.

SUITABLE DRESS

For older women. Shortcomings of the too

GIRLISH DRESSERS.

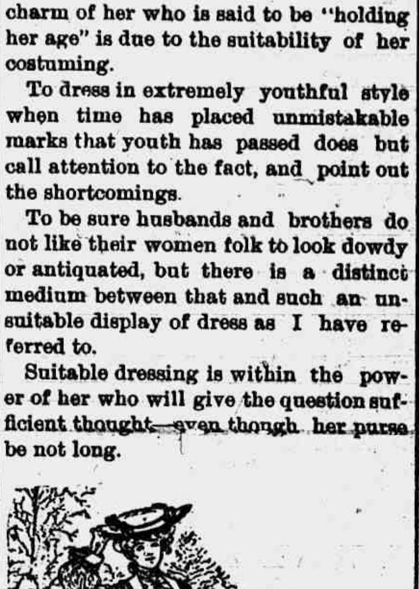
In these days of great variety in modes, no white haired woman need choose between grandmother capes and caps, and the fripperies of her granddaughter, as more and more time and thought is given to designing models for elder women, and not a little of the charm of her who is said to be "holding her age" is due to the suitability of her costuming.

To dress in extremely youthful style when time has placed unmistakable marks that youth has passed does but call attention to the fact, and point out the shortcomings.

To be sure husbands and brothers do not like their women folk to look dowdy or antiquated, but there is a distinct medium between that and such an unsuitable display of dress as I have referred to.

Suitable dressing is within the power of her who will give the question sufficient thought, even though her purse be not long.



For women of advanced years many loose cloth coats with matching skirts are seen, and for traveling as well as other general wear for the coming season, the model I have depicted for you will be especially popular.

Composed of champagne peau de crepe—a fabric that combines the two most essential qualities for the coming season's modes, softness to contribute to the much desired drooping effect, and at the same time sufficient "body" to keep the garment from the deplorably 'draggled" appearance so often seen—the coat is quite three-quarters in length, shirred to a belt at the waist line, and is handsomely trimmed with champagne colored lace, and worn over a skirt to match.

To "grow old gracefully" is the essence of refinement—and apropos of essence—a word here and now about scents. Let all women—and men, too, for that matter—who wish to class among the "well-groomed" avoid the vulgar perfume so commonly in evidence.

"The best or none" should be the motto of her who would be truly refined and she who choses, for example, the new and charming bouquet of the great Lubin of Paris, called Enigma, can rest assured that she is a delight to at least one of the senses.

Coming back to our muttons—the elderly lady's apparel—let her eschew the girlish scuttle—front hat, the exaggerated straight front corset, and the extremely high heels. Let her choose a sensible shaped shoe, a correct model corset, such as the C—B a la Spirite, and a conservative shape of bonnet with a narrow velvet ribbon tied in dainty fashion under the chin, and she may make a strikingly effective and, best of all, sensible appearance.

HELEN ADAIR.

Millionair's Poor Stomach.

The worn-out stomach of the over-fed millionaire is often paraded in the public prints as a horrible example of the evils attendant on the possession of great wealth. But millionaires are not the only ones who are afflicted with bad stomachs. The proportion is far greater among the toilers. Dyspepsia and indigestion are rampant among these people, and they suffer far worse tortures than the millionaire unless they avail themselves of a standard medicine like Green's August Flower, which has been a favorite household remedy for all stomach troubles for over thirty-five years. August Flower rouses the torpid liver, thus creating appetite and insuring perfect digestion. It tones and vitalizes the entire system and makes life worth living, no matter what your station. Trial bottles. 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. LITERARY NOTES.

Are we on the threshold of a war which will involve not only Russia and Japan but the whole world—a war beside which the barbarities of the past are slight in comparison? Alexander's ambition was to conquer the world as he then knew it, Napoleon's mind held a fixed plan equally vast, and today those who understand Russia's policy see in it far more than a contest over a strip of Chinese territory. No subject can have greater importance, and the analysis of the situation by John Brisben Walker in the February Cosmopolitan astounds the reader with the monstrous results predicted.

* * *

Prominent among the illustrated articles in the February Critic is a paper by Mable Osgood Wright, entitled "The Truce of the year," upon the leavening solace of dogs and books in the depth of winter. The essay conveys a most intimate and delightful appreciation of the season of which it treats, and the illustrations are quite worthy of the text.

The recent misfortune of Chicago has called forth in the pages of the Critic a timely and dispassionate essay on that city as a "Storm Center": the author, Mr. Alfred Hodder, reviews the city's misfortune with a spirit that is hopeful as well as unprejudiced.

* * *

The February Atlantic offers a group of leading articles which can be neglected by no person earnestly concerned about the urgent issues in America today. These papers, in which subjects of the first importance are treated by the men best qualified to discuss them with authority and vigor, are:

Wall Street and the Country, by Chas. A. Conant, a treatise on the uses and abuses of the money power, with which the number opens; followed by a sensible and dispassionate paper on Lynching: a Southern View, by Clarence H. Poe, and a thoughtful discussion of the question, Is Commercialism in Disgrace? by John Graham Brooks.

* * *

An exceptionally well-informed article on "Korea as the Prize of War" is contributed to the Review of Reviews for February by Hon. J. Sloat Fassett, of Elmira, N. Y., whose large business interests in the "hermit kingdom" have brought him into close touch with various phases of the far Eastern situation. Among the illustrations accompanying the article are portraits of the Emperor and Crown Prince of Korea, from photographs presented to Mr. Fassett by the Emperor himself.

Relief in one minute.

One Minute Cough Cure gives relief in one minute, because it kills the microbe which tickles the mucous membrane, causing the cough, and at the same time clears the phlegm, draws out the inflammation and heals and soothes the affected parts. A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs. P. The shouts and whoops of the belated dancers last Friday night were responsible for a little joke which we are relating here. An old gentleman of the village who is slightly deaf was awakened from soundest slumbers by the great uproar and supposing the good lady of the house had called him to breakfast he clambered from the feathery cot and after dressing carefully went down stairs. The expression he used, when he saw the hands of the grim old clock pointing solemnly at 3 a. m., can be used by us in stating that they began with d— and ended with !!*?—Onsted News.

There was a time when the scribes and punsters of the press could indulge in rhymes and poke fun at Mary's frisky little lamb or describe the beautiful snow, but it requires a brave spirit to tackle the job now. However, there occasionally is one who cannot restrain the irresistible impulse of the muse and bursts forth as follows: "It blows and it snows and it stings your nose, and it makes all creation shiver; it bites your toes, increases your woes and freezes up the river. The frost nips all, both great and small, this dismal dreary winter; it freezes types, it bursts the pipes and vexes sore the printer. So let her roll, we mean the coal, it takes the cash in winter, so please be kind and make up your mind to settle with the printer."—Ex.

A Cure for Eczema.

My baby had Eczema so badly that its head was a solid mass of scabs, and its hair all came out. I tried many remedies but none seemed to do any permanent good until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The Eczema is cured, the scabs are gone and the little one's scalp is perfectly clean and healthy, and its hair is growing beautifully again. I cannot give too much praise to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.—Frank Farmer, Bluff City, Ky. In buying Witch Hazel Salve look out for counterfeits. DeWitt's is the original and the only one containing pure Witch Hazel. The name E. C. DeWitt & Co. is on every box. Sold by C. A. Wright.

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

The

ELECTRIC ROAD.

The draft of a franchise, agreeable to the promoters of the electric road, was presented to the Common Council last evening by Mr. Foster, one of the gentlemen who has been securing right of way in this section.

In brief, this franchise provides that the road shall extend throughout the entire length of Chicago street, that the road-bed shall be filled with crushed stone, which shall extend sixteen inches outside of each rail, that iron poles shall be installed from Maumee street to Union street, that the motive power shall be some modern power aside from steam, that the speed shall not exceed eight miles an hour from Maumee street to Union street, that the fare shall not exceed one and one half cents per mile, and that no fare shall be less than five cents; these provisions, together with minor details regarding crossings, turnouts and switches, and the further fact that the road must be completed within two years, comprise the salient features of the proposed ordinance granting these privileges.

The Council has very wisely decided to delay the final consideration of this matter until the fifteenth instant, in order that the tax payers of the Village may know the conditions under which the road is acquired.

It is of the utmost importance that the community should thoroughly understand these conditions, for the granting of this franchise accords privileges which cannot be rescinded and which will remain in force for THIRTY years.

The sentiment of the people seems to distinctly favor an electric road, but those who have given the matter the closest attention and who have not been carried away by enthusiasm for "a street railway for Tecumseh," very properly contend that certain restrictions should be placed upon this enterprise.

Tecumseh is a village, and in all probability, will always remain a village. For transportation within the corporate limits, we therefore need an electric line little more than we need a ferry boat on the Globe pond.

Our village has long been noted for its broad, well kept, well shaded streets. Chicago street, the main artery of the town, is one of the finest of these streets, even though it is already defaced by two rows of unsightly telephone poles, poles which might far better have been placed in the rear of the business and residence structures. Why then should we complete the destruction of the beauty of this street by permitting the erection of two additional lines of unsightly poles to support a trolley wire?

Nor is this all. It is the avowed intention of the promoters of this road to make it a freight carrying road. Sites for stock yards and freight stations have already been secured along the line. There can be but one result; the citizens of Tecumseh will have the pleasure of seeing filthy stock cars and ungainly trains of coal and merchandise passing to and fro upon their chief residence street.

The promoters will tell you that these trains will be run at night. The HERALD tells you they will be run at night just so long as such a schedule will suit the owners of the road! Electricity is the coming motive power of the future. The great electric companies have just announced their ability to cheaply and efficiently convey current and propel trains of any WEIGHT to any distance. The day of light passenger cars and light package freight is just at an end The electric transportation companies will be compelled to compete with the older steam roads, and in order to do so with success will be compelled to operate high powered, heavy cars for both freight and passenger traffic. This proposed electric road will be no exception but it remains with us whether we shall insist that this road be placed where it belongs, or whether we shall, at the request of strangers, turn our main thoroughfare over to them for all time, to be used to THEIR profit and to OUR detriment.

The word "electricity" is one to conjure with! If the Michigan Central railroad wished to establish a branch line from Jackson to Britton, and by its right of eminent domain should determine to attempt to place its rails down Chicago street, the citizens of this village would rise en masse and resent it to their uttermost. Why then will they permit an electric roand this privilege, a road which will carry freight and passengers just as would a branch of the Michigan Central?

What difference does it make whether the sparks come out the stack of an engine or off an electric motor?

Let us look a few years into the future and not be dazzled by our enthusiasm to secure a modern method of interurban transportation. Instruct your councilmen to place this road where it belongs, on a street already devoted to railroads and railroad interests, in short, on Cummins street, where the least injury will be inflicted and where the most good will come.

Consider this matter carefully, look into the terms of the franchise, attend the meeting at which the council will render its final decision on February 15th, and forever bear in mind that the electric railway promoters are giving you nothing except the privilege of paying for everything you get from them, whilst they are soliciting an extremely valuable gift from you.

Escaped an awful Fate.

Mr. H. Haggins of Melbourne, Fla., writes, "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by C. A. Wright druggists. Price 50c & $1.00. Trial bottles free.

Stand behind the man behind the type case. If you said it, and are right, stick to it; if wrong, admit it with the same candor.

NARROW ESCAPE.

Just a Joke

ON ONE OF OUR Old-Time Residents.

Potee's camp is threatened with a shut down unless the man eating owls are exterminated. The camp boys are all becoming alarmed since the last attack. William Tucker left camp as he heard that there was another of the mammoth man eaters in the woods. He says that he has all the fame and notoriety that he cares for inasmuch as he has to stake his life to gain it. Ad. Burton is the last victim and he says he would not experience another encounter for all the cedar in Michigan. The owl attacked Burton one morning last week as he was going out to work and seizing him by the back he lifted him clean off his feet and started to soar away with him. As he was taking him over the tree tops Burton thought very unfair for the owl to take him off the face of the earth without a moment's notice.

Every misdeed in his whole past life flashed vividly to his mind in a second, from the time he wore knee pants and cooned watermelons up to the hour of his captivity which occurred so suddenly that it did not leave him time to make proper accounting and check up with St. Peter, and he knew that the charges on the book were many. Then he thought of his family at his home, of leaving them without a parting word and it added to the grief and feeling of horror

The last gleam of hope was fast fading which possessed the doomed Burton. One bright gleam of hope came to his mind and that was he was well insured but in another instant it flashed through his bewildered brain that no one would know of his disappearance hence no insurance.

when the owl dragged him through the top of a tamarack tree, and his eyes sparkled with a new light. He caught hold of the branches with a grip that would have pinched the horn off an anvil. The great speed at which the owl was cleaving the air and the sudden stop caused a button to snap off of Burton's mackinaw and this shot down like a bullet and killed a rabbit that was sitting by the roadside watching the aerial navigator and rejoicing that it [illegible]

Frank R. Page, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Page, was born July 17, 1856, in the state of New York, died at his home in Tecumseh Jan. 26, 1904, of celebralmeningitis, after a brief illness of 36 hours. Mr. Page was married to Miss Jennie L. Smith Oct. 6, 1887. Since residing in Tecumseh he has worked at the upholsterer's trade, building up a good business.

He united with the Baptist church Dec. 18, 1891, ever after living a consistent christian life. He leaves beside his wife, one brother, C. A. Page of this place, two sisters, Mrs. Richmond of Stockbridge, and Mrs. Alice Stubbs, who resides in the west, and a half brother, John Lewis of Ann Arbor.

The funeral was held from the house Jan. 28, Pastor Bower officiating. "Though I walk in the midst of trouble thou wilt revive me; And thy right hand will save me."

Mrs. Page is in very poor health and we bespeak for her the sympathy of the community, while she in turn wishes to thank the friends and neighbors for the many expressions of sympathy already shown.

Those attending the funeral from out of town were Mr. Page's sister, Mrs. Richmond, and his niece, Mrs. Hague and husband of Stockbridge; Mr. Charles Parker and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas of Macon, and a brother of Mrs. Page, Mr. A. B. Smith of Detroit.

Charles Burtless has a horse that is something of a joker. On Tuesday Charley called on a farmer to see about some stock and left the horse standing unhitched. When he was through his business but before he reached the cutter, the horse started off on a brisk trot. Charley ran after him calling "whoa! whoa!" but the horse let him get within about two rods of the cutter and then would trot along at too fast a gait for Charley to catch on. He kept this up until he reached town when a man stopped him.—Manchester Enterprise.

UNION SCHOOL

Friday afternoon. Judges appointed, who decided in favor of the Negative for Argument.

Friday afternoon an interesting program was given by the high school students.

Ten little pupils from the east branch primary room came to the union building and opened the exercises with a number of songs which were cheered enthusiastically.

Debate; Resolved, That the Signs of the Times point toward the Downfall of the Republic. The affirmative was lead by Finley DeSpelder, '04, the negative by Vernor Finch, '04. Genevieve Halliday, '04, gave the second oration of the affirmative, followed by Jennie Harris, '07, with the negative.

A violin solo was given by Kenneth Anderson. After a chorus, "Evening," by the ninth grade, the judges, Mr. J. H. Smith, Miss Helen Anderson and Mr. Charles Patterson, rendered the following decision, that the negative side excelled in argument, and the affirmative, in delivery.

Sherman Camburn, '04, was chairman for the afternoon.

ROUND ABOUT US.

The janitors in Tecumseh have neglected all winter to clean the snow from the walks in front of the churches. Consequently the soles of the people are so chilled that it is hard for even a red hot sermon to make an impression.—Hudson Post.

Matt Blosser and the Manchester Enterprise have gone over the river. It isn't the river Styx but the river Raisin that runs through Manchester. He now occupies a two story brick block of his own and the Enterprise office is located on the ground floor. Both Mr. Blosser and the Enterprise are very much alive.—Brooklyn Exponent.

A tip to farmers who have trouble with frozen chains on windmills is given by Robt. Compton. Owing to the icy condition of the ladder he deliberated long on how to reach the frozen chain. Ah! happy thought! A single charge from a shot gun shattered the ice and the wheel began immediately to revolve. Those wishing assistance in this line can, we presume, hire Mr. Compton for $5. per day with board and ammunition furnished gratis.—Onsted News.

Here's the way the Butler correspondent of the Litchfield Gazette describes the sinister experience of Eva Dexter: "Last Thursday was a sensational day for Eva Dexter. Her cat had a fit in the morning, and scared her most to death; at noon she cut her finger, and liked to died, and in the afternoon her horse ran away and nearly killed her. Three times in one day her husband came near being a widower; three times she stood near eternity's shore, three times we tho't we would see her no more; three times she fought fate in a way that was well; three times she came near going to — Litchfield."

Will Muck and Chas. Des Ermia of Onsted are not so enthusiastic as many on the subject of electric lines. They went over to Detroit last week on a business trip and started to return Saturday over the electric line to Jackson. When near Chelsea their car was stalled in a snowdrift and without any supper they were obliged to spend the night in the car. Along about 3:00 a. m. the supply of coal in the car gave out and the balance of the night was put in wrestling with each other to keep from freezing. A livery rig next morning took them to Jackson.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Mr. S. H. Leonard of Blissfield, has the distinction of growing the best field of beets for its size in Lenawee county and we believe the best in the state of Michigan. Mr. Leonard's field of forty-four acres brought $3082.39 or nearly $70 per acre at the Detroit Sugar company's factory at Rochester. After paying for seed, freight etc. he received a check for $2644.35. His average test was 15.9, which brought $5.80 per ton.

Mr. Leonard has a farm of 220 acres situated four miles from Blissfield, and is a thorough and progressive farmer. Mr. Leonard can attribute his success in a great measure to the able assistance of his faithful and industrious wife and his energetic and hard working sons. He is a thorough and up-to-date farmer and makes a specialty of feeding. At present he is feeding 41 head of steers besides his other stock. Mr. Leonard believes that the large yields come from the fact that his land is thoroughly under drained and that he covers his land every other year with fertilizer, either barnyard manure or a crop of clover. This with thorough cultivation makes his farm very profitable.—Blissfield Advance.

C. A. WRIGHT RELIES UPON HYOMEI

Hyomei is nature's own method for curing catarrh, colds, coughs and diseases of the respiratory organs. It is the only natural treatment for the cure of these troubles.

Breathe through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, the air that passes into the throat and lungs, is identical with that on the mountains, where it is laden with healing and health-given balsams. It searches out and kills disease germs in the most remote and minute air cells of the head, throat and lungs, it soothes and heals all irritation of the mucous membrane.

Hyomei is prescribed by physicians generally. Many of them use it themselves to break up a cold and prevent pneumonia.

The complete Hyomei outfit consists of a neat inhaler, that is so small and convenient that it can be carried in the pocket or purse, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. This costs but $1, and it will cure any ordinary case of catarrh. In chronic and deep seated conditions, longer use is necessary and extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c., making it a most economical treatment for this disease.

C. A. Wright has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh and other diseases of the throat and lungs that he sells it under his personal guarantee to refund the money to any purchaser in case it fails to give satisfaction. He takes all the risk himself, and Hyomei costs you absolutely nothing unless it does you good.

WHEN BABY IS COMING USE

Mother's Friend

Woman's greatest dream of beauty and glory is when nature has chosen her to become a mother. Every faculty is keenly alert as she foresees the joy, ambition, success and the life-long satisfaction coming nearer, day by day, in the dear and innocent being so soon to see light, and the uncertainty whether she shall see a sweet girl or a brave boy face beside her on the pillow adds zest to her expectancy. Mother's Friend applied externally throughout pregnancy will relieve the pain of parturition, and no mother and child can fail to be healthy, hearty, strong, clear complexioned, pure blooded and cheerful in disposition, who are mutually influenced by the continued use of this great liniment, MOTHER'S FRIEND.

Mr. W. C. Witherell, agent for buggies, harness and other machinery, place of business southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills highly enough for they have been a great friend to me. Some years ago I was an expert at sheep shearing and did a lot of that work. Everybody knows it is hard on the back and it finally brought on a severe pain across the loins. Nothing did any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box and the treatment gave immediate relief. When I finished the box the trouble was entirely removed. If I feel any symptoms of a return a resort to Doan's Kidney Pills quickly ward off an attack. They are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them." Just such emphatic endorsement is plentiful in Tecumseh. Call at C. A. Wright's drug store and ask him what his customers report.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

RELIEF TRAIN SENT.

Blockade in Thumb Will Be Raised Soon.

Harbor Beach, Mich., Jan. 30.—The outlook is better here for a raise in the blockade that has isolated this and other nearby towns for the last two weeks. Word was received Friday that a relief train with a snowplow is on its way here from Port Huron, and that the whole line will be cleared off within the next two days. It is expected that an opening will be made from Harbor Beach to the outer world by tonight. This will give two weeks to a day since freight or mail has been delivered here by the railroads.

The situation is becoming desperate and unless a way is cleared within the next two days so that coal can be delivered the big starch and macaroni factories will have to close down. This would mean that 150 persons would be thrown out of work. Provisions and all other necessaries of life are beginning to get low, and the inhabitants of all towns in the "thumb" district will hail with delight the sight of the snowplow.

Wanted to Start Life Anew.

Denver, Jan. 30.—W. T. Coolidge, a school teacher who was reported to have been drowned in San Francisco bay last fall, has been found alive at Sheridan, Wyo. This discovery saves benevolent orders and insurance companies $11,000, for which amount he was insured. Coolidge said he had caused the report of his drowning to be circulated because of estrangement from his wife and in order that he might start life anew under an assumed name. He denied any intention of enabling his relatives to collect insurance fraudulently.

Despondent Man Kills Himself.

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 30.—J. R. Williams, ex-trainmaster of the Grand Trunk railroad, committed suicide by the use of gas during the night. He was discharged from the road in November and had been despondent since, several times having threatened to take his life.

No One But Yourself if You Don't Get Well When Sick.

All we can do is give advice.
Of course that's easy.

But our advice is really worth a little more to you than most people's, for we offer to give you the first bottle of our medicine free, if it fails to help you.

We could not afford to do this unless our medicine was good. Such an offer, on the wrong kind of medicine, would put a merchant prince in the poor house.

Dr. Miles' Nervine, however, as years of experience have proved, is a medicine that cures the sick.

Those whom it cannot benefit—less than one in ten thousand—we prefer to refund their money.

All we ask of you is to try Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for your complaint. If you suffer from sleeplessness, nervous exhaustion, dizziness, headache, muscular twitchings, melancholy, loss of memory, weak stomach, poor blood, bilious troubles, epilepsy, St. Vitus' Dance, etc., we will guarantee to benefit you or refund your money.

You are the doctor.

"My son Bert, when in his 17th year, became subject to attacks of epilepsy, so serious that we were compelled to take him out of school. After several physicians had failed to relieve him, we gave Dr. Miles' Nervine a trial. Ten months treatment with Nervine and Liver Pills restored our boy to perfect health."—MR. JOHN S. TOWNS ARE SNOWED IN Suffering Will Follow If Relief Does Not Come Soon.

FOOD AND FUEL VERY SCARCE

Bad Axe Circuit Court Unable to Hold Session—Railroad Traffic Paralyzed—Conditions in Deckerville Serious.

Bad Axe, Mich., Feb. 4.—The snow blockade has finally reached Bad Ax and the town is completely shut in for the first time. There has been no train here since Tuesday night.

There is no scarcity of food supplies here, but coal cannot be bought for love nor money, as there is not a pound at any of the fuel dealers' yards. Wood cannot be secured either, as the roads are so bad the farmers cannot bring it into town.

If such a thing is possible, the storm and snow are in contempt of court, for they have prevented the circuit court holding its January session. The session was to have opened two weeks ago Monday, but the snow was so deep that Judge Beech, who lives at Lexington, wasn't able to get here, and he telephoned to the sheriff that he had sent an order adjourning court until he could be present.

Deckerville, Mich., Feb. 4.—Starvation and death from cold face the inhabitants of this village unless something is done soon to relieve the situation. All communication with the outside world is cut off, except by wire. The strong winds carry the snow into the roads as fast as they can be cleared out. The first train in two weeks passed through here Saturday, going northward. It left three carloads of soft coal, which was turned over to the merchants to be distributed to people who needed it. It was all gone in a short time and now the dealers are entirely cleaned out.

Carsonville, Mich., Feb. 4.—The snow plows went through here Wednesday at the rate of forty miles an hour, but the track was covered almost immediately afterward by the wind, which blew the snow and drifted it as high as before the plows passed. No trains have been in or out for the past week. There is no soft coal in sight, and but little hard coal. A small stock of the best flour is still in the grocery stores, but unless a change comes in the condition of the roads before long famine stares the inhabitants of this place in the face. No mail is being received, but an effort will be made to reach Yale, thirty-two miles away, by stage, where mail may be received and supplies secured.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 4.—Railway traffic is well-nigh paralyzed here. The G. R. & I. trains from the south have been from one to three hours behind time. The Michigan Central trains have been two hours behind, caused almost entirely by the deep drifts in the Grand River valley. The Grand Trunk trains have been an hour off their schedule, while the local service on the Lake Shore between this city and Elkhart, Ind., is so sadly handicapped by the storm to the south that no trains have mived.

Sanilac Center, Mich., Feb. 4.—No trains have left or entered Sanilac Center since Saturday noon, and present indications are that there will not be any for three or four more days. The coal situation is getting serious, as the supplies in the yards of all dealers are getting low.

Solve the Tramp Problem.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 4.—The board of auditors of Washtenew county think they have found a solution of the tramp problem, which has been vexing the citizens for so long. Some time ago the board of supervisors agreed by resolution to allow the sheriff 44 cents a day per capita for the maintenance of prisoners. Now the board of county auditors is trying to have this amount cut down until there is no profit in it for the officers. This, they think, will make it not worth while to arrest tramps and put them into the jail for the fee. The sheriff's bill for prisoners' board and turnkey fees for the past month was more than $1,000.

No More Prize Fights.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 4.—As the result of a conference between Police Commissioner Fowle and Mayor Maybury, as was expected, an announcement is made that all prize fights or boxing contests of any kind will hereafter be prohibited in Detroit. This move has been suggested not only by the Gans-Ward bout in the Light Guard armory Tuesday night, but by the affair at the D. A. C. last week, when Noah Brusso gave O'Grady such a licking that the defeated man is still in the hospital suffering with the injuries he received in the contest.

Hot at Medical Men.

Owosso, Mich., Feb. 4.—Many people here are very indignant at the Shiawassee County Medical society because of the action it has taken over the smallpox question. The bill for the care given smallpox patients was so large that at the recent board of supervisors' meeting it was decided that hereafter no doctor shall get more than $2 for calling on smallpox patients. The doctors have decided not to treat such patients for less than $5.

Aged Woman Frozen.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Garrison, an aged woman living in a one-room house alone, was found frozen to death. She had probably been dead two days. Sheriff Holliday impanelled a jury.

Mysterious Circumstance.

One was pale and sallow and the other fresh and rosy. Whence the difference? She who is blushing with health uses Dr. King's New Life Pills to maintain it. By gently arousing the lazy organs they compel good digestion and head off constipation. Try them. Only 25c, at C. A. Wright's, Druggist.

TRIBUTE TO THE G.A.R.

Paid by President in Address at Banquet.

ONE OF GUESTS OF HONOR

At Spread Given by Department of Potomac—Drew Valuable Lessons From Example Set by Veterans and Civil War.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 4.—President Roosevelt, General John C. Black, the commander-in-chief of the grand army, Secretary Taft, General Nelson A. Miles and other well-known officials were guests of honor at the banquet last night to the department of the Potomac of the G. A. R.

The president arrived at the banquet hall shortly after 10 o'clock and was given a cordial reception. He listened to a patriotic speech by General Black and then was introduced to the large assemblage by Thomas S. Hopkins, toastmaster of the evening. The president spoke for about a half hour. He paid a tribute to the grand army and its work and in a general way spoke of the duties of citizenship and of the lessons taught by the civil war. He always felt, he said, that the veterans of the war taught the remainder of us as important lessons for peace as for war. It made no difference to the veteran whether a man occupied a high position in the army or whether he served as a private. All you asked, he said, was whether he did his duty. If he did, you hold up your right hand of fellowship to him.

The president spoke of the lessons taught us by the war and declared that in the army after all the great vital point was the fact of the high average of individual worth in the rank and the file. It was just the same thing with our citizenship. It is the high quality of the average citizenship which establishes the standard of the republic in peace. Each citizen must be able to carry his own weight, and in addition must have the power of acting in cooperation with his fellows to the common end. Further on in his remarks the president spoke substantially as follows:

"I wish to say in closing, on behalf of the younger men, that we would indeed be pretty poor characters if we did not feel it obligatory on us in peace, and if need should arise in war, to try in some degree to rise towards the standard which you the men of the great civil war have established for us alike in peace and in war."

LONG'S BOOK BARRED.

It Criticized Roosevelt and Dewey For Certain Actions.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Because, so it is understood, of implied criticisms of President Roosevelt when he was assistant secretary of the navy just prior to the Spanish war, orders were issued today barring from the libraries of all warships a book written by the late secretary of the navy, John D. Long, entitled "The American Navy."

It is customary for books written by naval officers and ex-officials of the department to be bought for distribution among the vessels. Long in his book reviews his own administration of the navy department, and besides criticising Roosevelt for "impetuosity" treats with sharpness the minority report made by Admiral Dewey in the famous Schley court of inquiry which was in favor of Schley.

POSSES IN PURSUIT.

Serious Shooting Affray Between Negroes and Whites in South.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 4.—A special to the Commercial Appeal from Doddsville, Miss., says:

John Eastland, a wealthy plantation owner, and Albert Carr, a negro tenant, were killed by Luther Holbert, a negro, in a shooting scrape. The tragedy occurred on Eastland's plantation and when the news of it reached Doddsville a posse was immediately organized. When the posse arrived at the plantation further shooting occurred, and John Winters, a negro, was killed.

Holbert escaped and posses from Greenville, Indanola, Cleveland and other points are searching for him and two other negroes, who, it is charged, were implicated with him in the killing of Eastland. The negroes probably will be lynched if captured.

Rockefeller Does Not Dictate.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Members of the University of Chicago faculty may criticise at will, favorably or otherwise, the actions of John D. Rockefeller, the institution's most liberal benefactor, without fear of dismissal. This announcement was made by President Harper to the senior class at the university today, in response to a question. It was asked by one student: "Would any professor be dismissed for criticising John D. Rockefeller in relation to the Standard Oil Co. and public affairs?" President Harper replied: "The members of the faculty have a right to say as they please. The university stands for free speech. No professor has ever been dismissed for expressing his opinion on any subject."

Admiral Schley Ill.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Admiral W. S. Schley is confined to his home by an attack of grip, but expects to be out in a few days.

Two Men Were Killed.

Chicago, Feb. 3.—In a collision last night between a crowded suburban train on the Chicago Terminal railway and a switch engine two men were killed and a score of others slightly hurt. The accident occurred just as the train was leaving the station at Ashland avenue, with the car platforms crowded with people. The force of the collision hurled the water tank on the passenger engine from its fastenings and it came down on the front platform of the car directly behind the engine. The two men killed, both of them Bohemian laborers, were standing on the platform and were crushed by the tank as it fell.

COLOMBIANS MAKING WAR.

Reported They Are Fighting With San Blas Indians.

Panama, Feb. 3.—A report has reached the isthmus that Colombian troops are fighting with the Indians on the San Blas coast, which is in Panamanian territory. It is impossible, however, to obtain reliable confirmation of this.

The United States gunboat Bancroft was to have sailed Sunday from Colon to Bocas del Toro, but the orders were countermanded at the last moment because of the report of fighting on the coast. A letter was received here some time ago from Captain Torres, commanding the Panamanian troops at Chepo (on the south side of the isthmus and directly south of the San Blas country), saying he had decided to cross over to the Atlantic side. There is a possibility that the Indians are fighting with Captain Torres' command, mistaking them for Colombians.

LARGE FIGURES.

Michigan's Production of Sugar, Butter and Cheese.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 3.—The labor commissioner has been canvassing the beet sugar and butter and cheese industries throughout the state and has some interesting figures.

They show that there are twenty-one beet sugar factories representing an investment of $12,000,000, whose output for the past year was 150,000,000 pounds of sugar.

There are 350 butter and cheese factories scattered through thirty-six counties. These consumed during 1903 an aggregate of over 665,000,000 pounds of milk, from which was produced 15,124,119 pounds of butter and 33,374,381 pounds of cheese, valued at $36,000,000.

Supreme Court Opinions.

Affirmed: Campau vs. Detroit Driving club; Bates vs. Boyce estate; People vs. Gray; Schneider vs. City of Detroit; Horn vs. Supervisors of Livingston county; Ninde vs. Union Trust Co. Reversed: Rouse vs. Detroit Electric railway; Jackson vs. Jackson; Supervisors of Kent county vs. Loomis. In Harmon vs. Metcalfe motion to dismiss appeal granted. Orders to show cause were granted in Burr's Damascus Tool Words vs. Fraser, circuit judge, and in Monaghan vs. Auditor general. Benjamin P. Merrick, a member of the Massachusetts bar, was admitted to practice on motion by Deputy Attorney-General Chase.

Declare Law Is No Good.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 3.—The supreme court has knocked out the Kent board of auditors. At the last session of the legislature that body submitted an amendment to the constitution providing for a board of auditors for Kent, and it was ratified. They then passed a law in compliance with the constitution. The court finds that the bill was originally introduced for Jackson county and that it was changed to Kent county. For that reason they declare it unconstitutional and for the further reason that it doesn't relate to the subject matter. This leaves the supervisors still the kings of the county.

Mail Carrier Accused of Theft.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 3.—Richard Jewell, who has been a mail carrier here for twenty-five years, is under arrest charged with stealing money from the mails. The cash was placed in letters and the man watched. The letters failed to reach their destination, and the officers claim the case against him is clear.

Inquest Feb. 9.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 3.—Tuesday, Feb. 9, has been set by Coroner Hilliker as the date for the inquest into the Pere Marquette catastrophe at East Paris on Dec. 26. The delay has been occasioned by the slow recovery of Engineer Frank Waterman.

MICHIGAN BRIEFS.

Robert Howard, the veteran janitor of the U. of M., is dead. The deceased had been employed in the university for thirty years.

The governor has received the general government's contribution to the support of the Michigan Soldiers' home for the last quarter of 1903, in the shape of a draft for $19,332.

The Ann Arbor railroad's bridge, where last Wednesday's wreck occurred, has been replaced by a temporary wooden structure. A new span for the steel bridge will be ready in a few weeks.

Mrs. Merritt Walker, 92, is dead at her home in Perry. Her husband, several years deceased, was a former member of the Michigan legislature. She leaves five children, thre of whom are grandparents.

William Blair, a brakeman on the Pere Marquette, fell between the cars at Claire and his head was severed from his body. The rest of the train crew knew nothing of the accident until the train arrived at Claire.

State Oil Inspector Benjamin's report of the financial condition of his office shows that the belance for the last five months of 1903 was $7,770. This makes the balance for the year over $12,000, an increase over 1902.

Joseph Menuier, alias Miller, the slayer of Mrs. James T. Seville of Detroit is now No. 7976 in the state penitentiary at Jackson. The officials, however, have not decided what he is to do, but it is quite possible that he will be assigned to work on the broom contract.

Niles Jeweler a Bankrupt.

Niles, Mich., Feb. 4.—L. F. Chase, a local jeweler, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in Grand Rapids yesterday. Assets $4,700; liabilities, $3,700.

A Mother's Recommendation.

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy.—Mrs. J. A. Moore, North Star, Mich. For sale by all druggists.

MOL ON TRIAL.

Salsbury Swore He Had Paid Alderman Money.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 4.—A jury was secured in the Mol case Wednesday. Salsbury was the first witness for the people. He swore that he had asked Corey P. Bissell to see Mol, but before Bissell did so Salsbury himself talked with the alderman. Salsbury could not fix the date of the talk definitely, saying that it was between June 15 and September. Salsbury said:

"I told Mol that there were parties here to get through a water deal, and there was money in it and he could have some of it. He agreed to go in and I promised him $1,000, telling him that he could have it later. I asked him to keep quiet, but assured him that there were other members of the council in it."

Salsbury told of the work and report of the special water committee, the report being read into the record.

The line of the cross-examination was directed to show that Salsbury lost the most of his "boodle" in speculation and riotous living, instead of giving as much to bribe aldermen and others as he claims in his statement to the prosecution.

Big Fire in Cadillac.

Cadillac, Mich., Feb. 4.—Thirty thousand dollars was the loss to the Cobbs & Mitchell Co. Wednesday by the destruction of its dry-kiln containing over 100,000 feet of hardwood lumber, by fire. The damage to the mill is slight and only by water. The brilliant work of the fire department and employes were responsible for saving the mill. A fierce wind was blowing toward the mill and a bad snowstorm was raging. One hundred and twenty-five employes will be out of work for a short time. The work of rebuilding will start at once.

Attempted Suicide.

Ionia, Mich., Feb. 4.—Mrs. Charles King, the wife of an Ionia Pere Marquette employe, who is charged with shoplifting from T. A. Carten's store, took aconite poison with suicidal intent. The doctors supposed it was a case of nervous prostration until she rallied and told them what she had done. They worked over her for an hour, then pronounced her out of danger, the case being put over until her recovery.

KAISER WILLIAM'S VOICE

To Be Carried Down the Ages in Harvard's Phonetic Archives.

Berlin, Feb. 4.—A phonographic record of Emperor William's voice, on metal matrices, will be the first deposits made in the phonetic archives that are to be kept at Harvard university, and in the congressional lobby and National museum at Washington. The emperor upon the application of Dr. Edward W. Scripture, the psychologist of Yale university, through the United States ambassador here, has given two examples of his voice for permanent preservation.

Dr. Scripture, describing the meaning of his request, said:

"The phonetic archives are to include records from such persons as will presumably have permanent historical interest for America. The importance of the undertaking can be estimated by considering what would have been the present value of voice records by Demosthenes, Shakespeare or Emperor William the Great. An advisory committee of eminent Americans has prepared a list of ten living Americans of the first historical importance whose voices will be preserved. I wish to record his majesty's voice as the first European record deposited in the archives."

HAD A SETBACK.

Senator Hanna Seized With a Congestive Chill.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Senator M. A. Hanna had a setback late Wednesday afternoon, which for a time considerably alarmed his family, who had been encouraged to hope he was getting to himself again, but the congestive attack which they hoped was averted to some extent by promp action, and the senator, while now not so well, showed excellent rallying power and improvement over his condition.

The setback came in the form of an attack that resembled sick spells that have seized the senator on two or three occasions in the past few years. He was seized about 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon with a congestive chill, which heretofore has been marked by a rush of blood to the head and coldness of the extremeties. Members of the family were on hand at its first outbreak and by the prompt application of mustard plasters and hot water the attack was prevented from becoming so serious as it was feared it might become, and later in the evening it was stated that the senator's condition was again almost at his normal state of the past few weeks.

UPRISINGS IN KOREA.

Thousands Declare They Are Not Korean Subjects.

Seoul, Feb. 4.—Serious disturbances are reported in the country surrounding Tonghaik. Thousands of armed men have declared that they are not Korean subjects. The malcontents are divided into three separate organizations. It is thought that a general insurrection will occur next spring.

Foreign citizens at various stations in the country have confirmed the reports that the Korean officials are pro-Russian and have asked for the appointment of foreigners in order to insure their personal safety. It is stated that the Russians now claim that the Yalu river timber concessions cover all branches of the Yalu. Affairs in Seoul are quiet.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER X.

M. Verduret rapidly ascended the ladder without even shaking it till his head was on a level with the window. Prosper had seen but too well. There was Madeleine at this hour of the night alone with Raoul de Lagors. She still wore her wraps. She was standing in the middle of the room, talking with great animation. Her attitude, her look, her gestures, betrayed indignant scorn. Raoul was seated on a chair by the fire, stirring up the coals with a pair of tongs. Every now and then he would shrug his shoulders, like a man resigned to everything he heard and had no answer except, "I cannot help it."

M. Verduret would willingly have given the diamond ring he wore on his finger to be able to hear ten words of what was said, but the roaring wind completely drowned their voices, and he dared not place his ear too close, for fear of being seen.

"They are evidently quarreling," he thought, "but it is not a lover's quarrel."

Madeleine continued talking, and it was by closely watching the face of Lagors, clearly revealed by the lamp on the mantel, that M. Verduret hoped to discover the meaning of the scene. At times Lagors would start and tremble in spite of his apparent indifference; then he would strike at the fire with the tongs, doubtless giving vent to his rage at some reproach uttered by Madeleine. Finally Madeleine, clasping her hands, knelt before him. He turned away his head and refused to answer save in monosyllables. Several times she turned to leave, but each time returned, as if asking a favor and unable to go till she had obtained it. At last she seemed to have uttered something decisive, for Raoul suddenly rose and opened a desk near the fireplace, from which he took a bundle of papers and handed them to her.

"H'm!" thought M. Verduret. "What does it mean? Is it a compromising correspondence which she wants to reclaim?"

Madeleine took the papers, but did not appear satisfied. She again entreated him to give her something else. Raoul refused, and then she threw the papers on the table. The papers seemed to puzzle M. Verduret.

"I certainly am not mistaken. Those papers—red, green and yellow—are pawnbrokers' tickets."

Madeleine turned them over, as if looking for some particular ones. She took three, which she put in her pocket, pushing the others aside. She was evidently preparing to take her departure, for she said a few words to Raoul, who took up the lamp as if to light the way. There was nothing more for M. Verduret to see. He carefully descended the ladder, muttering to himself: "Pawnbrokers' tickets! What infamous mystery lies at the bottom of all this?" The first thing he did was to remove the ladder. Raoul, escorting Madeleine, might take it into his head to look around the garden, and if he did so the ladder might attract his attention. M. Verduret and Prosper hastily laid it on the ground, then concealed themselves among the trees, whence they could watch at once the front door and the outer gate.

At the same time Madeleine and Raoul appeared in the doorway. Raoul set the lamp on the bottom step and offered his hand to the girl, but she refused it with haughty contempt. This did not seem to move or surprise Raoul. He simply answered by an ironical gesture which implied, "As you please." He followed her to the gate, which he opened and closed after her; then he hurried back to the house, while Madeleine's carriage drove rapidly away.

"Now, monsieur," said Prosper, "you must tell me what you saw. Remember, you promised me the truth no matter what it might be. Speak; I can bear it."

"You will only have joy to bear, my friend. Within a month you will bitterly regret your suspicions of tonight. You will blush to think that you ever imagined Mlle. Madeleine to be intimate with a man like Lagors."

The drive back was silent and seemed interminably long. Prosper tried to draw his strange companion into conversation, but as he received nothing but monosyllables in reply he held his peace for the rest of the journey. He was again beginning to feel irritated at the absolute empire exercised over him by this man.

On their arrival at the city M. Verduret said:

"You will see me at your room about this time tomorrow night. Perhaps I shall discover what I am seeking at the Jandidiers' ball."

Prosper was dumb with astonishment. What! Would M. Verduret think of appearing at a ball given by the wealthiest and most fashionable bankers at the capital? This accounted for his sending to the costumer.

"Then you are invited?" he asked.

The expressive eyes of M. Verduret danced with amusement.

"Not yet," he said, "but I shall be."

Oh, the inconsistency of the human mind! Prosper was tormented by the most serious preoccupations. He looked sadly around his chamber and as he thought of M. Verduret's projected pleasure at the ball exclaimed:

"Ah, how fortunate he is! Tomorrow he will have the privilege of seeing Madeleine in her costume of maid of honor."

CHAPTER XI.

St. Lazare street was crowded by carriages, whose occupants were impatiently awaiting their turn to drive up to the door. Nearly all the costumes were rich. Some were original. Among the latter was a clown. His costume was in perfect keeping. Indeed, his whole makeup, his insolent eye, coarse lips, high cheek bones and a beard so red that it seemed to emit flames in the reflection of the dazzling lights were in accord. He carried in his left hand a canvas banner, upon which were painted six or eight pictures, coarsely designed like those found in strolling fairs. In his right he waved a little switch, with which he would every now and then strike his banner, like a quack retailing his medicines. A crowd surrounded this clown, hoping to hear some witty speeches and puns, but he kept near the door and remained silent. About half past 10 he quitted his post. M. and Mme. Fauvel, followed by their niece Madeleine, had just entered. A compact group immediately formed near the door. During the last ten days the affair of Provence street had been the universal topic of conversation, and friends and enemies were alike glad to seize this opportunity of approaching the banker, some to assure him of their sympathy, and others to offer equivocal condolence, which of all things is the most exasperating. Belonging to the body of elderly men, M. Fauvel had not assumed a fancy costume, but merely threw over his shoulders a short silk domino. On his arm leaned Mme. Fauvel, nee Valentine de la Verberie, who graciously greeted her friends. Her beauty had once been remarkable, and tonight the effect of the soft wax lights and her very becoming dress half restored the freshness of youth. No one would have supposed her to be forty-eight years old.

But Madeleine was the object of universal admiration, beautiful and queenly in her costume of maid of honor, which seemed to have been especially invented to set forth her superb figure.

Forgotten by the crowd, the clown had taken refuge in the embrasure of a window, where he kept his eyes upon a couple not far off. It was Madeleine, dancing with a splendidly dressed doge—the Marquis de Clameran. He appeared to be radiant, rejuvenated and to all appearances triumphant. At the end of a quadrille he leaned over his partner and whispered compliments with the most unbounded admiration. She seemed to listen, if not with pleasure, at least without repugnance, now smiling and now shrugging her shoulders.

"Evidently," muttered the clown, "this noble scoundrel is paying court to the banker's niece. So I was right yesterday. But how can Mlle. Madeleine listen so graciously to his flattery? Fortunately Prosper is not here."

He was interrupted by a distinguished looking elderly man in a Venetian mantle, who said to [illegible]

"You know, M. Verduret"—half seriously, half banteringly—"what you promised me?"

The clown bowed respectfully, but with not the slightest shade of humility.

"I remember," he replied.

"But do not be imprudent, I beg of you."

"Monsieur the count need not be uneasy; he has my promise."

"Very good. I know what that means."

The count walked off, but during his short colloquy the quadrille had ended, and the clown lost sight of M. de Clameran and Madeleine.

"I shall find them near Mme. Fauvel," thought he.

And he at once started to search among the throng for the banker's wife.

Incommoded by the stifling heat, Mme. Fauvel had sought a little fresh air in the grand picture gallery, which, thanks to the talisman called gold, had been transformed into a fairylike garden, filled with orange trees, japonicas, laurel and many rare plants. The clown saw her seated near a grove not far from the cardroom. Upon her right was Madeleine. On her left stood Raoul de Lagors, dressed in a costume of Henry III.

"I must confess," muttered the clown from his post of observation, "that the young scamp is very handsome."

Madeleine was very sad. She had plucked a camellia from a plant near by and was mechanically pulling it to pieces as she sat with her eyes downcast. Raoul and Mme. Fauvel were sitting together in conversation. Their faces were composed, but the gestures of one and the trembling of the other betrayed preoccupation and a serious discussion. In the cardroom sat the doge, M. de Clameran, so placed as to have full view of Mme. Fauvel and Madeleine, although himself concealed.

"It is the continuation of yesterday's scene," thought the clown. "If I could only get behind those camellias, I might hear what they are saying."

He pushed his way through the crowd, but as he reached the desired spot Madeleine arose and took the arm of a bejeweled Persian. At the same moment Raoul went into the cardroom and whispered a few words to De Clameran.

"There they are," muttered the clown. "The two rascals certainly hold these poor women in their toils. What can be the secret of their power?"

His attention was attracted by a commotion in the picture gallery. There was to be a wonderful minuet danced in the ballroom. The Countess de Commarin and the Princess Korasoff, with her superb emeralds, which were reported to be the finest in the world, had both arrived. In an instant the gallery became almost deserted. Only a few forlorn looking people remained. The clown thought it a favorable opportunity for carrying out his project. He abruptly left his position, flourishing his switch and beating his banner, and, crossing the gallery, seated himself in a chair between Mme. Fauvel and the door. As soon as the people had collected in a circle around him he struck a comical attitude, standing up with his body twisted sideways and his hat on one ear. With much buffoonery and volubility he made the following remarks:

"Ladies and gentlemen, this very morning I obtained a license from the authorities of this town. And what for? Why, gentlemen, for the purpose of exhibiting to you a spectacle which has already won the admiration of the four quarters of the globe. Inside of this booth, ladies, is about to commence the representation of a most remarkable drama, acted for the first time in Peking and translated by our most celebrated authors. Gentlemen, you can take your seats. The lamps are lighted, and the actors are changing their dress."

Here he stopped speaking and imitated to perfection the feats which mountebanks play upon horns and kettledrums.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," he resumed, "you wish to know what I am doing outside if the piece is to be performed under the tent. The fact is, gentlemen, that I wish to give you a foretaste of the entertainment which you may enjoy by paying the small sum of 10 cents. You see this superb picture? Very well. It represents eight of the most thrilling scenes in the drama. Ah, I see you begin to shudder. And yet this splendid picture gives you no more idea of the acting than a drop of water gives an idea of the sea or a ray of light of the sun."

"Do you know this clown?" asked an enormous Turk of a melancholy Punch.

"No, but he can imitate a trumpet splendidly."

"Oh, very well indeed! But what is he driving at?"

The clown was endeavoring to attract the attention of Mme. Fauvel, who since Raoul and Madeleine had left her had abandoned herself to a mournful reverie. He succeeded. The showman's shrill voice brought the banker's wife back to a sense of reality. She started and looked quickly about her, as if suddenly awakened from a troubled dream. Then she noticed the clown.

"Now, ladies, we are in China. The first picture on my canvas, here to the left"—he pointed to the top daub—"represents the celebrated Mandarin Li Fo in the bosom of his family. This pretty woman leaning over him is his wife, and these children playing on the carpet are the fruits of a happy marriage. Do you not inhale the odor of happiness emanating from this speaking picture, gentlemen? Mme. Li Fo is the most virtuous of women, adoring her husband and idolizing her children. Being virtuous, she is happy, for the wise Confucius says, 'Virtue is better than vice.'"

Relief in one minute.

One Minute Cough Cure gives relief in one minute, because it kills the microbe which tickles the mucous membrane, causing the cough, and at the same time clears the phlegm, draws out the inflammation and heals and soothes the affected parts. One Minute Cough Cure strengthens the lungs, wards off pneumonia and is a harmless and never failing cure in all curable cases of Coughs Colds and Croup. One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take, harmless and good alike for young and old. Sold by C. A. Wright.

To be idle and unemployed is a sign not only of a weak head but bad heart.

Words in season—sea and son.

A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs. P. Cordier, of Mannington, Ky., writes: "My three year old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life." Refuse substitutes. Sold by J. J. Orr.

Are you for or "agin" the colored supplements? Seems like they have about their day. Maybe so—maybe not!

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

A Cure for Eczema.

My baby had Eczema so badly that its head was a solid mass of scabs, and its hair all came out. I tried many remedies but none seemed to do any permanent good until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The Eczema is cured, the scabs are gone and the little one's scalp is perfectly clean and healthy, and its hair is growing beautifully again. I cannot give too much praise to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.—Frank Farmer, Bluff City, Ky. In buying Witch Hazel Salve look out for counterfeits. DeWitt's is the original and the only one containing pure Witch Hazel. The name E. C. DeWitt & Co. is on every box. Sold by C. A. Wright.

WEEDS

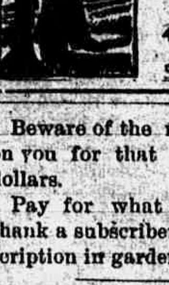
Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.



We will send you a little of the Emulsion free.

The eye, when properly cared for affords the keenest delight because of the pleasures we are able to enjoy through its medium. When not cared for and its warnings are unheeded, it becomes an instrument of torture. THE ELECTRIC ROAD.

It has been assumed by some that the HERALD is opposed to an electric road. Nothing could be farther from the truth. It is not opposed to the road, but it is opposed to placing the rights of the people secondary to the desires of an outside corporation.

By all means let the road come to Tecumseh, but let it cease masquerading as a street car line, place it in its proper place amongst the list of common carriers, and compel it to build its lines where, in after years it will not be an eye-sore and a nuisance to the community.

The HERALD is not looking to the immediate future: it is looking five, even ten years, in advance of the present. It is looking to the time when interurban and interstate traffic will be propelled by some form of energy distributed from central stations. It is looking to the time when this electric road, in company with other short lines, will be combined in one extensive system.

These things are all a matter of evolution. When Henry Keyser drove a span of horses on the strap rails of the old Palmyra and Jacksonburgh railway, neither he nor his associates could forsee that those strap rails, would be superseded by ninety pound steel rails, that those horses would be superseded by powerful locomotives, and that instead of being an unimportant bit of "street car" track, it would become an integral part of one of the greatest railway systems on earth!

History repeats itself, Progress is eternal and History and Progress will continue to be in active operation long after the supporters of a Chicago street franchise have passed to their reward.

Even at the present time a consolidation of electric lines is in progress in many parts of the country. Through sleepers from points in Indiana and Ohio are running into Cincinnati, and, as electrical knowledge becomes greater and electrical appliances become more efficient and economical, heavier and faster trains for both freight and passenger traffic will become the standard for electric lines. Eventually these lines will consolidate, and conditions similar to those under which the present steam roads are operated will be universal.

Tecumseh is indeed proud of her well kept streets, her parks, her homes and public buildings, but Chicago street is not a Woodward avenue; a stroll of twenty minutes being sufficient to see every beauty spot on the whole extent of this thoroughfare.

Noise, dust and heavy freight may be an evidence of progress and power, but noise, dust and heavy freight should be put where they belong and not permitted to despoil the very things which we value most. Men do not willingly erect their homes where noise and dust and danger are always present, and those "who have traveled to any extent and been at all observant," know full well that where the interurban road is given the use of a residence street, these disagreeable features are ever in evidence.

The promotion of an electric road is not a disguised philanthropy; it is a business proposition; a business proposition which will continue for thirty years without the possibility of a change derogatory to its franchise.

Let us strip it of its halo and START RIGHT in the matter. Apples and cattle and hogs and cement and hay and celery and grain will not be carried in "varnish" cars which will give "added beauty to the street;" they will be carried in cars appropriate to the service.

No road can live on passenger traffic alone. Freight is the back-bone of every transportation company and forever will remain so. Consider all of these FACTS and do not allow the glittering generalities of prejudiced promoters and their agents to impress you too strongly. Merely because Hudson and Blissfield have failed to look sufficiently far into the future, is no reason why Tecumseh should commit the same mistake.

The community want this road, the HERALD wants it, but we wish to go on record to the effect that it should be compelled to go where it belongs, and that an electric road, which is to be engaged in the same business as a steam road should be given no greater privileges and should be treated in precisely the same manner.

GROUND HOG FORETELLS AN EARLY SPRINGTIME.

Rejoice all ye frost-bitten! There will be an early spring.

Mr. Arctomys Monax, better known to his intimate friends at Mr. Ground Hog, advance agent of Mile, Flora, arrived in this city yesterday, and gave positive assurance that the incomparable diva would bring her troupe of Zephyrs to this latitude at the date set in the almanac for an unlimited engagement.

Signor Ground Hog bases his assertion upon meteorological observations made yesterday. As soon as he left his cozy abode and reached these parts he noticed that he had left his shadow behind him. This is always a good omen, for Flora never missed a train when Mr. G. Hog forgot his shadow in the olden days. After frisking around in the snow for a few minutes and getting his nose frost-bitten the ground hog decided to take a light nap until his roof begins to leak. That is another omen, meaning that Flora has at last come to town to stay.

The ground hog's calculations are based on the conditions he finds on his arrival. Scientists who have studied his capers say he appears with the first peep of day and does not wait for a propitious moment when the sun is shining. That being true, he found the sun clouded yesterday and while this must foretell an early spring, the weather man says it will be colder today and for several days to follow.—Chicago Record Herald.

AROUND TOWN

Talks about

TECUMSEH MEN.

Who were Boys here Years ago.

"To him that hath it shall be given."

It is not my purpose to write a sermon with the above for a text, but in thinking about Doctor Reed the other day, and his going to Ann Arbor, this quotation popped into my mind, for in many cases this is a true saying.

Dr W. D Reed is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Lately in the Dental department of the University there has been quite a talk about this new porcelain filling for teeth, and the college having secured the service of the most celebrated expert in this country to teach the new process, advertised that among the old graduates the first fourteen who applied for instruction should receive it free. Our friend, Dr. Reed, who is always up with the times, was one of the first fourteen and is now in Ann Arbor receiving the benefit. Dr. Reed is a well to do citizen of Tecumseh, who has made his money and reputation here and every one wishes him more good luck, which, however, is obtained from his good management.

Speaking about good luck or good management makes me think of Frank Frary, who as a boy and young man lived in Tecumseh, but a number of years ago moved away and finally landed at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Last Christmas I went up to Flint to spend the holidays with Mrs. Frank Turner, nee Bigelow. It will be remembered that about that time the weather was very stormy and the day before Christmas was very bad. To take the Pere Marquette road we were obliged to wait about three hours in Detroit. While in the Union station waiting for the train a man tapped me on the shoulder and said, "It is fully 30 years since I saw you, but if I mistake not you came from Tecumseh and we were boys there together." He was Frank Frary, son of Fred Frary, who used to live here and it had been at least 25 years since I had seen him. He used to work in Brewer's foundry inquired after Hub Stout, Robert Stretch and others here. Moved first to Saginaw, then to Fort Wayne, bought a little piece of land there and soon after two electric roads came in touching either side of it. He sold off the land keeping the balance for which he now has an offer of $30,000.

In looking around we can see a number of old Tecumseh boys who have been favored with good strikes and news of them is always pleasant to read about.

* * *

Talking of men who were old Tecumseh boys makes me think of Geo. Monaghan, who was down from Owosso the other day and stopped off at Tecumseh to sell a seeder or so. "Puss" Monaghan, who was a boy in Tecumseh, is now traveler for a farm seeder company, he lives at Owosso but travels under state agent Collins, who works from Jackson.

He married a Buffalo girl and now has two children, a boy aged nine and a girl aged seven years. George is as full of stories as the average agricultural implement man is full of wind and never tires telling about his boy, who is also called George. Now it is an old saying of George Monaghan's, that if a man would go out on the street and call George, every old spavined white horse would answer and what under heavens he punished the boy with this name for surprises me.

Young George looks like his father but in many ways is wholly unlike him. Think of it he is nine years old and never swears or chews tobacco. When his father was nine years old he could swear to a "stand still" and was old in the tobacco chewing habit.

But George Monaghan has turned out to be a fine young man. He was born near Sand Lake and raised until quite a lad in the shallow waters of Monaghan's cove. His father bought stock around the Lakes for a number of years and then moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and at the time of his death had about the largest stock business in East Buffalo. Both father and mother died within a few weeks of each other, and the children were brought back to Tecumseh. When I was at the lake this summer a number of people asked me about the Monaghan girls, where they were.

Lulu, the oldest, is in Los Angeles, Cal., principal of one of the schools there her name is Walcott. Mana is with Lulu. Janie died in California a number of years ago. Lola is Mrs. Collins and lives in Jackson, Mich., and Clarence died three years ago in Los Angeles, California, having become a lawyer of some note and collected together what was said to be the best law library in California.

GEO. N. STACY.

Escaped an awful Fate.

Mr. H. Haggins of Melbourne, Fla., writes, "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. The offer of a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, induced me to try it. Results were startling. I am now on the road to recovery and owe all to Dr. King's New Discovery. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by C. A. Wright druggists. Price 50c & $1.00. Trial bottles free

MUCH BELOW AVERAGE.

Is daily cost per capita at Industrial Home.

Adrian, Mich., February 3.—(Special.)—Dispatches from Lansing show the labor commissioner reports the average daily per capita cost of the state institution to be 13 cents, but does not give individual reports. The cost at the Industrial Home for Girls here was much short of the average, and its rate is probably the lowest in the state. The average for years has been 9 1-2 cents, but last year, owing to the increase in prices, the cost was 1 cent higher. This includes not only the cost of 365 inmates, but forty officers and all extras furnished to state officials who visited the home during the year.—Detroit Free Press.

Which will probably result in the death of

FRANK DUNHAM AND MRS. DUNN.

Shooting which occurred in the Streets of Adrian Yesterday.

Frank Dunham, a resident of Adrian, shot a Mrs. Dunn, who was supposed to be his wife, and then shot and instantly killed himself. It seems that several years ago Dunham met the woman in New York, induced her to leave her husband, and come to Adrian. This she did and spent considerable money for a home, which Mr. Dunham had her deed over to him.

They had lived together for over eight years but he finally grew so abusive that two months ago she left him, and yesterday meeting her on the street, he shot her in the back between the shoulders. She was taken to the sanitarium and there are no hopes for her recovery. Mr. Dunham was about 45 years of age and Mrs. Dunn considerable younger.

Yesterday Mrs. Dunn had succeeded in getting back the deed of her property.

C. A. WRIGHT RELIES UPON HYOMEI

Hyomei is nature's own method for curing catarrh, colds, coughs and diseases of the respiratory organs. It is the only natural treatment for the cure of these troubles.

Breathe through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, the air that passes into the throat and lungs, is identical with that on the mountains, where it is laden with healing and health-given balsams. It searches out and kills disease germs in the most remote and minute air cells of the head, throat and lungs, it soothes and heals all irritation of the mucous membrane.

Hyomei is prescribed by physicians generally. Many of them use it themselves to break up a cold and prevent pneumonia.

The complete Hyomei outfit consists of a neat inhaler, that is so small and convenient that it can be carried in the pocket or purse, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. This costs but $1, and it will cure any ordinary case of catarrh. In chronic and deep seated conditions, longer use is necessary and extra bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c., making it a most economical treatment for this disease.

C. A. Wright has so much confidence in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh and other diseases of the throat and lungs that he sells it under his personal guarantee to refund the money to any purchaser in case it fails to give satisfaction. He takes all the risk himself, and Hyomei costs you absolutely nothing unless it does you good.

Mr. W. C. Witherell, agent for buggies, harness and other machinery, place of business southwestern section of Tecumseh, says: "I cannot praise Doan's Kidney Pills highly enough for they have been a great friend to me. Some years ago I was an expert at sheep shearing and did a lot of that work. Everybody knows it is hard on the back and it finally brought on a severe pain across the loins. Nothing did any good until a friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box and the treatment gave immediate relief. When I finished the box the trouble was entirely removed. If I feel any symptoms of a return a resort to Doan's Kidney Pills quickly ward off an attack. They are a reliable remedy and I consistently recommend them." Just such emphatic endorsement is plentiful in Tecumseh. Call at C. A. Wright's drug store and ask him what his customers report.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Because of the precedent established by meeting Governor Taft with a troop of cavalry and accorded to Mr. Root, the retiring secretary, the same honor when he left Washington, it is learned that the same courtesy will be requested of this government when the next ambassador is received in audience for the first time by the president.

LED HIM INTO A TRAP

WALKED INTO POLICE STATION

Went For Funds He Though Belonged to Him, but Was Locked in Cell Instead—Wanted For Robbery in Birmingham.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—Thomas W. Davis, a bill poster living at 227 Twenty-fourth street, walked into police headquarters presumably to collect $8 50, which was taken away from him several days ago while under arrest on suspicion. Davis, who had fallen into a trap expressly prepared for him, was promptly placed in a cell. He is said to be one of two men who cracked the safe in H. W. Bagster's store in Birmingham a week ago last Saturday night.

On Wednesday last Detectives Kane and Clare, who watch the pawnshops, found several articles pawned for $8 50 at a Monroe avenue store. Suspecting that all was not right, they arrested Davis at that time on a charge of suspicion and caused his detention at the central station until Friday noon, when he was set at liberty.

Not two hours later a letter was received from Birmingham, stating that the jewelry had been stolen from that place. Detectives Kane and Clare tore their hair at the thought that the man had just been released, but started out to find him.

For hours they wandered around looking for Davis. Finally Kane conceived a brilliant idea. He with Clare went to Davis' home on Twenty-fourth street and proceeded to work a grand coup.

"You know," said Kane to the mother of the much desired man, "that when Tom was released we had over $8 of his money. Now, we don't want to get into trouble by having him accuse us of keeping the money. Tell him to come to headquarters and get it."

Davis evidently thought he had a soft thing and started for his money. At the station he was received with open arms. The $8 50 will go back to the pawnbroker; the jewelry will be returned to Bagster.

The robbery at Birmingham resulted in the disappearance of over $200 worth of jewelry, a large quantity of which has been recovered in local pawnshops.

Supreme "Bee" Tent Convention.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—Deputy Supreme Commander F. W. Budrow of the supreme tent, Maccabees of the World, has issued a call for the first state convention to be held in Flint, on Wednesday, February 10, at which time a representative to the national convention to be held in Detroit in July, and also a full set of state officers will be elected.

Sorrowful Home Coming.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 8.—When Herman Gorges, an electrician living at 526 Cavalry avenue, returned home from Ann Arbor after a week's absence, he was startled to find his wife dead. She was fully dressed and appeared to have been dead for many hours. It is believed that Mrs. Gorges lay down to rest at that time and never awoke.

Attorney Is Adjudged Insane.

Bellaire, Mich., Feb. 8.—Milton W. Newkirk has been adjudged insane by the probate court of Antrim county. His conduct has seemed strange for some time, but his case did not attract special attention until some time ago he suddenly attempted to kill his stepdaughter. Since then he has been constantly in the care of attendants.

Another Grand Rapids Conviction.

Grand Rapids, Feb. 8.—The jury in the water deal case of Alderman James Mol returned a verdict of guilty as charged, with a recommendation of mercy, precisely twenty-four hours after it went out. His attorney asked for a stay of proceedings to file a bill of exceptions, and sentence was deferred to March 1 on his motion.

Went Back Too Soon.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 8.—Joseph Martin, 42 years old, a miner employed in the Pittsburg mine, was killed by the unexpected explosion of a mining blast. The blast had failed to explode and he went back to investigate. The shot went off after he entered his room.

Dropped Dead at His Work.

Stanton, Mich., Feb. 8.—Sampson Powell, aged 30 years, of the firm of Powell & McAllister, butchers of this city, while cutting off a steak in his market fell to the floor dead. The cause was heart failure.

Will Live Down His Troubles.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 8.—Dr. Roy W. Griswold, recently pardoned by Governor Bliss after serving about a year of his sentence at Ionia for causing the death of Agnes Eberstein of Battle Creek by a criminal operation, has returned to the city. He announces that he will resume practice here and will live down his troubles.

Cut Her Throat While Ill.

Albion, Mich., Feb. 8.—Mrs. Anna Potter, who has been ill for several weeks with the grip, attempted to commit suicide by slashing her throat with a razor. During her illness she has been delirious at times, but at no time had her condition been considered as dangerous. Her recovery is doubtful.

A Mother's Recommendation.

I have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for a number of years and have no hesitancy in saying that it is the best remedy for coughs, colds and croup I have ever used in my family. I have not words to express my confidence in this remedy.—Mrs. J. A. Moore, North Star, Mich. For sale by all druggists

FIRE! FIRE!

Fire Sweeps Over Business Portion of Baltimore.

LOSS WILL TOTAL MILLIONS

Firemen Powerless—Buildings Dynamited to Prevent Spreading of Flames—Newssenders Driven From Their Posts—Over 20 Blocks Burned.

Baltimore, Feb. 8.—At 3 o'clock this morning the fire was still raging fiercely. So far as known at that hour no serious casualties had been reported to the police. Telegraph, telephone and electric wires of all kinds are prostracted. Express wagons have been kept busy all night removing furniture and fixtures from the counting rooms and warehouses in the threatened district. The fire has now covered an area of three-quarters of a mile in length by nearly a quarter of a mile in width, taking in many of the most important buildings in the city. No one will venture an estimate of the monetary loss.

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 8.—The most destructive conflagration in the history of Baltimore occurred here Sunday, raging practically unchecked during many hours, completely destroying scores of the largest business houses in the wholesale district, involving losses which cannot yet be estimated, as the fire was still burning fiercely at an early hour this morning. Owing to the wide extent of the calamity it will be many hours before even an approximate estimate can be made, though it is certain that it has already exceeded $40,000,000.

The fire broke out in the wholesale dry goods store of John E. Hurst & Co., on Hopkins place, in the heart of the business district, with a series of loud explosions.

In a half hour there were a dozen big warehouses in the wholesale dry goods and notions district burning fiercely. The entire city fire department was called out, but was utterly powerless to check the spread of the flames, which were aided by high winds, and in a short time there were savage fires in at least thirty big warehouses, and the conflagration was steadily eating its way into successive blocks east, north, west and south.

Building after building fell a prey to the flames, and apparently there was no check to the onward sweep of destruction.

The flames, still unchecked, are steadily eating their way eastward on Baltimore street, after having destroyed almost all of the large stores and warehouses in the wholesale district around Hopkins place and all the buildings on both sides of Baltimore street from Howard to Holliday streets, from Charles and Baltimore to Charles and Lexington, and on Fayette street from Charles to Holliday, including a total of about twenty blocks of the most modern and substantial buildings in Baltimore.

Firemen Are Powerless.

The fire department, although aided by engines from Washington, Philadelphia, Wilmington and the surrounding counties and suburbs, has been utterly powerless to make any effective resistance to the consuming element, though for hours as many as 400 streams of water were thrown into the flames.

Following the rapid destruction of the palatial commercial buildings in the wholesale district, the cyclone of roaring flames burst into Baltimore street, licking up within a few minutes the seven-story Mullins hotel and rapidly rolling, with irresistible force, both eastward and westward, cutting down in its wrathful wake wholesale and retail houses, manufactories, shops, jewelry stores, furniture emporiums and restaurants. At Charles street the remorseless tide swept on down Baltimore street and turned into Charles street, where it quickly engulfed the eleven-story Union Trust building. By 8 o'clock the publishers and other occupants of the Daily Herald building, at Fayette and St. Paul streets and of the Record building opposite, were compelled to vacate by the on-rushing flames, as were the occupants of the Calvert and Equitable structures, two of the most massive office buildings in Baltimore.

At 7 o'clock the situation was so desperate that Chief Horton decided that the only thing left to do was to dynamite buildings at threatened points and thus prevent, as far as possible, a further spread of the flames. In pursuance of this plan, a number of buildings on South Charles street, between German and Lombard, were blown up. Subsequently the structure of J. W. Putts & Co., notion dealers at Charles and Fayette streets, was dynamited, and then the Daily Record building, Ross drug store and others. But this heroic remedy merely delayed but did not seriously impede the onward march of the conflagration, and for two hours or more the fire department has stopped, practically helpless and resourceless.

Camden Station, Baltimore, Feb. 8.—At 2:30 this morning the Western Union telegraph operators, who abandoned their burning building to go to the Baltimore & Ohio depot office at Camden Station to resume their work, had not been heard from. The corps of Associated Press operators, who had twice been burned out during the night and had also started for the same destination to resume sending press dispatches, taking with them their "copy," had failed to appear. It seems probable from this fact that all of the telegraphers have been hemmed in by the fire in such manner that it was impossible for them to reach their destination owing to an easterly wind, thus making it necessary for them to take a roundabout course of several miles.

Any man who disregards the regulations for the prevention of lead poisoning in the mines of New South Wales is liable to a fine not exceeding $100.

MINISTERS RECALLED

Diplomatic Relations Severed and War Seems Inevitable.

JAPAN'S PATIENCE EXHAUSTED

Recalled Her Minister Only Two Hours Before Russian Reply Would Have Been Received—Japs Will Seize Korea at Once.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 8.—It is officially announced that Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister, has informed Russian representatives abroad that Japan has decided to break off diplomatic relations with Russia and to withdraw her minister and the entire legation staff from St. Petersburg and that on the receipt of a note to this effect from the Japanese minister Russia had ordered her minister, Baron de Rosen, and the legation to leave Tokio.

Although the fear has been general here that the presentation of the Russian note to Japan might be followed by an act on the part of the Japanese government which would plunge two countries into war, the startling action of Japan in severing diplomatic relations with Russia before the actual delivery of the Russian note, came like a bolt from a clear sky. It was believed that the receipt of the note might have unmasked an ultimatum, but that Japan should sever diplomatic relations, a step little short of a blow in the face under the present circumstances, and it is resented here accordingly. The authorities believe this action places Japan distinctly in the wrong before the world, and moreover, after such a "piece of impudence," as it is dominated here, makes easy an appeal to the patriotism of the Russian people.

The news that at any moment Japan had drawn the sword and that the clash had occurred would not be surprising.

Asked For Passports.

The events leading to Japan's abrupt action have marched with great rapidity. The Russian note was already in the hands of Baron de Rosen, Russian minister at Tokio, for delivery to Baron Komura, the Japanese foreign minister, when quite suddenly M. Kurino, the Japanese minister here, presented himself at the foreign office and informed Foreign Minister Lamsdorff that his government, in view of the delays in connection with the Russian answer and the futility hitherto of the negotiations, considered it useless to continue diplomatic relations and would take such steps as it deemed proper for the protection of Japan's interests. In obedience to instructions, therefore, he asked for his passport. M. Kurino received his passports and after consulting with Sir C. S. Scott, the British ambassador here, he returned to the legation, where the preparations for his departure had already commenced.

Upon the disclosure of Japan's position the Russian authorities met the situation with great promptness. Instructions recalling Baron de Rosen were forthwith telegraphed, and he was directed to leave Tokio immediately.

M. Kurino is extremely reticent and declines to offer an explanation of the course of Japan, saying the authorities at Tokio would doubtless give the world their side of the story. He ventuerd, however, to point out that the irritation created by the delay in the Russian response postponed from day to day, together with the forecasts of what it contained, might have convinced his government that it was futile to proceed further with diplomacy. He said, rather sadly, that the rupture of diplomatic relations did not necessarily mean war.

M. Kurino will leave at the earliest possible moment. The current business of the Japanese legation, it is believed, will be turned over to the British embassy. Russia, in her reply to Japan, while making concessions, declined to yield on the four following points:

1. Japan's right to ask for a treaty covering the sovereignty of Manchuria.
2. She insisted upon mutual recognition of the independence of Korea.
3. That there should be no fortification of southern Korea, which might threaten Russian communications with Port Arthur and Vladivostock, and
4. She declined to meet Japan's wishes with regard to a neutral zone on both sides of the Yalu river.

It is the general opinion of military men here that Japan will immediately land troops in Korea, whence will come the first news of fighting, unless there should be an accidental encounter at sea.

Tokio, Feb. 8.—The severance of diplomatic relations between Russia and Japan appears to be only a step towards war, although when the ministers of Russia and Japan withdraw from their respective posts quick and decisive action is expected. When Minister of Foreign Affairs Qomura notified Baron de Rosen, the Russian minister, of Japan's determination to sever diplomatic relations, he is reported to have declared to him that Japan is tired of Russia's delays, evasions and insincerity and has decided to take independent action for the conservation of Japan's oriental interests. During the final negotiations Japan's repeated requests for an answer were treated in a most unsatisfactory manner. Japan waited until convinced that it was useless to wait longer, and has now ended the discussion.

The indications are that there will be no formal declaration of war. Japan will publicly define its position and purposes and the foreign office has prepared a new statement which will probably be announced later. Today Japan will unquestionably seize Korea, and although Russia has previously intimated that it would not interfere, in view of that country's present attitude, developments are eagerly awaited.

Washington, Feb. 8.—All hope of averting war now, it is frankly admitted, has been abandoned by the Russian government. Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, has received a cablegram from St. Petersburg, called upon Acting Secretary of State Loomis and informed him of the interruption of relations.

TO PROTECT AMERICANS.

Rear Admiral Wise and Battleship Sent to Domnican Waters.

Washington, Feb. 8.—Announcement has been made at the state and navy departments that a serious state of affairs is prevalent in San Domingo. Complaint has been made to the state department by the owners of the San Isidro plantation that their property has been besieged and an appeal is made for immediate relief. Other Americans having interests in San Domingo have made similar complaints. Mr. Moody, the secretary of the navy, and Mr. Loomis, the acting secretary of state, had long conferences with the president on the subject, and as a result a cablegram was dispatched to Rear Admiral Wise, commanding the training squadron now at Guantanamo, instructing that officer to take immediate and effective steps for the adequate protection of American life and property in the Dominican republic, limiting his course of action at all times to the recognized tenets of international law.

Upon receipt of this dispatch Rear Admiral Wise is expected to proceed at once with his flagship, the Minneapolis, to Dominican waters, and make a personal investigation.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER XI.

"Do you see anything on the banner like what he is describing?" asked the melancholy Punch of his neighbor.

"No. Do you?"

The fact is that the daubs of paint on the canvas represented one thing as well as another, and the clown could call them whatever he pleased.

"Picture No. 2!" he cried after a rolling of drums. "This old lady seated before a mirror tearing out her hair, especially the gray ones—do you recognize her? No, you do not. She is the fair mandarine of the first picture. I see tears in your eyes, ladies and gentlemen. Ah, you have cause to weep, for she is no longer virtuous, and her happiness has departed with her virtue. Alas, it is a sad story! One fatal day she met on the streets of Peking a young ruffian, fiendish, but beautiful as an angel, and she loved him—the unfortunate woman loved him!"

During this tirade he had turned about till he faced the banker's wife, whose countenance he closely watched while he was speaking.

"You are surprised, gentlemen," he continued. "I am not. The heart never grows old, and the most vigorous wallflowers flourish on old ruins. This unhappy woman is nearly fifty years old—and in love with a youth! Hence this heartrending scene, which should serve as a warning to us all."

"Really," grumbled a cook dressed in white satin, who had passed the evening in carrying around menus which no one read, "I thought he was going to amuse us."

"But," continued the clown, "you must go inside of the booth to witness the effects of the mandarine's folly. At times a ray of reason penetrates her diseased brain, and then the sight of her anguish would soften the most unpitying. Enter, and for the small sum of 10 cents you shall hear sobs such as the Odeon never echoed in its halcyon days. The unhappy woman realizes the absurdity and inanity of her blind passion. She confesses to herself that she is madly pursuing a phantom. She knows but too well that he in the vigor and beauty of youth cannot love a faded old woman like herself, who vainly makes pitiable efforts to retain the last remains of her once enchanting beauty. She feels that the sweet words he once whispered in her charmed ear were false. She knows that the day is near when she will be left alone, with nothing save his mantle in her hand."

As the clown addressed this voluble description to the crowd before him he narrowly watched the countenance of the banker's wife. But nothing he had said seemed to affect her. She leaned back in her armchair perfectly calm and occasionally smiled.

"Can I be on the wrong track?" muttered the clown uneasily.

M. de Clameran joined the circle.

"The third picture," the clown continued, "depicts the old mandarine after she has dismissed that most annoying of guests—remorse—from her bosom. She promises herself that interest shall supply the place of love in holding the seductive youth. It is with this object that she invests him with false honors and dignity and introduces him to the chief mandarins of the capital of the Celestial empire. Then, since so handsome a youth must cut a fine figure in society, the lady must needs to sacrifice all of her possessions for his sake—necklaces, rings, bracelets, diamonds and pearls—every jewel she possesses. The monster carries all these to the pawnbrokers on Tientsi street and then has the cruelty to refuse her the tickets, so that she may have a chance of redeeming her treasures."

The clown thought that at last he had fulfilled the conditions. Mme. Fauvel began to betray signs of uneasiness. Once she made an attempt to rise from the chair, but it seemed as if her strength failed her, and she sank back, forced to listen.

"Finally, ladies and gentlemen," continued the clown, "the richly stored jewel cases were emptied. The day came when the mandarine had nothing more to give. It was then that the young scoundrel conceived the project of carrying off the jasper button belonging to the Mandarine Li Fo, a splendid jewel of incalculable value, a badge of dignity. It was kept in a granite chest and guarded by three soldiers night and day. Ah, the mandarine resisted a long time. She knew the innocent soldiers would be accused and crucified, as is the custom in Peking, and this thought restrained her. But her lover besought her so tenderly that she finally yielded to his entreaties, and the jasper button was stolen. The fourth picture represents the guilty couple stealthily creeping down the private stairway. See their frightened look—see"—

He abruptly stopped. Three or four of his auditors rushed to the assistance of Mme. Fauvel, who seemed about to faint. The clown felt his arm roughly seized by some one behind him. He turned and faced De Clameran and Lagors, both of whom were pale with anger.

"What do you want, gentlemen?" he asked, with his most gracious air.

"To speak to you," they both answered.

"I am at your service."

He followed them to the end of the picture gallery, near a window opening on a balcony. Here they were unobserved except by the man in the Venetian cloak, whom the clown had addressed as "monsieur the count." The minuet having ended, the orchestras were taking a brief rest, and, the company pouring into the gallery, it became very crowded. The sudden faintness of Mme. Fauvel had passed off unnoticed save by a few, who attributed it to the heat of the room. M. Fauvel had been sent for, but when he came hurrying in he found his wife composedly talking to Madeleine. Not having as much control over his temper as Raoul, M. de Clameran angrily said:

"In the first place, monsieur, I would like to know who you are."

The clown determined to answer as if he thought the question were a jest.

"You want my license, do you, my lord doge? I left it in the hands of the city authorities. It contains my name, age, profession, domicile and every detail"—

With an angry gesture M. de Clameran interrupted him.

"You have committed a gross insult!"

"I, my lord doge?"

"Yes, you! What do you mean by telling this abominable story?"

"Abominable! You may call it abominable, but I, who composed it"—

"Enough, monsieur. You will at least have the courage to acknowledge that your performance was a vile insinuation against Mme. Fauvel?"

The clown stood with his head thrown back and mouth wide open, as if astounded at what he heard. But any one who knew him would have seen his bright black eyes sparkling with malicious satisfaction.

"Upon my word," he said as if speaking to himself, "this is the strangest thing I ever heard of! How can my drama of the Mandarine Li Fo have any allusion to Mme. Fauvel, whom I don't know from Adam or Eve?"

"Do you pretend," said M. de Clameran, "to be ignorant of M. Fauvel's misfortune?"

"A misfortune?"

"I refer, monsieur, to the robbery of which M. Fauvel was the victim and which has been in every one's mouth."

"Ah, yes, yes, I know. His cashier decamped with 350,000 francs. It is a thing that almost daily happens. But as to discovering any connection between this robbery and my play, that is another matter."

M. de Clameran made no reply. A nudge from Lagors had calmed him as if by enchantment. He seemed to regret having uttered the significant words drawn from him by excitement.

"Very well," he finally said in his usual haughty tone. "I must have been mistaken. I accept your explanation."

But the clown, so humble a moment before, said:

"I have not made nor do I intend making any explanation."

"Monsieur"— began De Clameran.

"Allow me to finish, if you please. If unintentionally I have offended the wife of a man whom I highly esteem, he is her protector; not you. Perhaps you will tell me he is too old to demand satisfaction. If so, let him send one of his sons. One of them is here. You asked me who I am. In return I ask you who are you—you who constitute yourself Mme. Fauvel's champion? Are you her relative, friend or ally? What right have you to insult her by pretending to discover an allusion to her in a play invented for amusement?"

There was nothing to be said in reply to this. M. de Clameran sought a means of escape.

"I am a friend of M. Fauvel," he said, "and this title gives me the right to be as jealous of his reputation as if it were my own. If this is not a sufficient reason for my interference, I must inform you that his family will shortly be mine."

"Ah!"

"Next week, monsieur, my marriage with Mlle. Madeleine will be publicly announced."

This news was so unexpected, so startling, that for a moment the clown was discomfited. But it was only for a second, and, bowing with deference, he said, with covert irony:

"Permit me to offer my congratulations, monsieur. Besides being queen of the ball tonight, Mlle. Madeleine will have a dowry of half a million, I hear."

Raoul de Lagors had listened anxiously, watching the people near them, to see if they overheard this conversation.

"We have had enough of this gossip," he said in a disdainful tone. "I will only say one thing more, Master Clown, and that is that your tongue is too long."

"Perhaps, my pretty boy, perhaps, but my arm is still longer."

De Clameran hastened to end the matter.

"It is impossible for one to seek an explanation from a man who conceals his identity under the guise of a fool."

"You are at liberty, my lord doge, to ask the master of the house who I am —if you dare."

"You are," cried Clameran—"you are"—

A warning look from Raoul checked the forgemaster from using an epithet which would have led to an affray or at least a scandalous scene.

The clown stood with a sardonic smile and after a moment's silence stared M. de Clameran steadily in the face and said coolly:

"I was the best friend, monsieur, of your brother Gaston. I was his adviser and the confidant of his last wishes."

These few words fell like a clap of thunder upon De Clameran. He turned deadly pale and recoiled with his hands stretched out before him, as if shrinking from a specter. He tried to answer, to protest, but the words froze on his lips.

"Come, let us go," said Lagors, who retained his equanimity.

And he dragged Clameran away, supporting him, for he staggered like a drunken man and clung to the walls to prevent falling.

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed the clown.

He himself was almost as much astonished as the forgemaster and stood stock still, watching the latter as he slowly left the room. It was with no decided object in view that he had ventured to use the last mysteriously threatening words, but he had been inspired to do so by his wonderful instinct, which with him was like the scent of a bloodhound.

"What can this mean?" he muttered. "Why was he so frightened? What terrible memory have I awakened? I need not boast of my penetration or the subtlety of my plans. There is a great master, who without any effort in an instant destroys all my chimeras. He is called chance."

His mind had wandered far from the present scene when some one touched him on the shoulder, recalling him. It was the man in the Venetian cloak.

"Are you satisfied, M. Verduret?" he inquired.

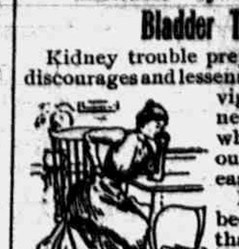
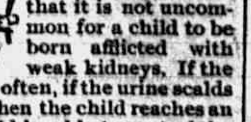
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.



Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.



Home of Swamp-Root.

Washington, Jan. 30, 1904.

A close student of congress must be convinced that the commercial interests of the nation control legislation, and that politics, even in a Presidential campaign year, are but incidental. Both republicans and democrats protest that they are not swayed in the least by partisan motives, but seek only the good, glory and prosperity of the country. This is a very gratifying situation, and as long as the public funds hold out, so long will the various enterprises which depend upon governmental aid prosper. Recent reports show that the new navy is making satisfactory progress; our foreign commerce is rapidly increasing; our insular possessions are fairly prosperous; and great internal improvements for the benefit of the American people at home are contemplated, such as good roads, forest reserves, irrigation, canals, destruction of noxious insects, and the general advance of agriculture. A higher moral tone in the government departments may be expected as a result of the vigorous weeding out of corrupt and incompetent employes. As soon as a vote is reached upon the Panama treaty, legislation will progress with more rapidity and political discussions will be largely eliminated from the senate.

The question of the presidency is quite warm. In Washington it looks as if Roosevelt would certainly be the candidate of the Republican party, for Senator Hanna's repeated protestations are taken at par and there is nobody else in sight. The woods are full of Democratic candidates. General Miles' friends have brought him forward this week in a "respective" attitude, and Grand Army men have largely enlisted under his banner. As he has never entered into any partisan disputes or differences, it is thought he may be Bryan's "dark horse." The very latest suggestion is that of General John C. Black by General Sickles. The one-legged horo of Gettysburg is stumping round the lobbies of the Capitol on crutches today setting forth Black's high availability to everybody he meets. This would be going to Chicago for a candidate, but he has lived many years in the East, and General Sickles declares him strong in New York.

Congress is all worked up over the horse-and-carriage scandal and the investigation goes on. It is believed that there are fifty or sixty carriages and as many pairs of horses in use by subordinate officers in the different departments that were bought with government money and are used altogether for private purposes, going to receptions, returning calls, etc. They are driven by coachmen who are borne on the rolls as messengers and are paid from the public funds. It is now proposed to have an auction, and it is not believed that the horses which cost $800 apiece and the carriages which cost $500 can be sold for more than a third of that amount.

General Reyes, the Colombian minister, expects to sail for home today. He has been elected to the presidency of that republic and he hurries southward to restrain the war feeling. The amendments which the committee voted to add to the Panama treaty before sending it to Panama to be acted on the second time, have all been withdrawn suddenly and the treaty is to be ratified as it stands, as soon as a vote can be had. But the democrats are still loud and long in protest.

The new Secretary of War, arrived from the Phillipines Wednesday. His predecessor took great pains to receive him with all honors and a troop of calvary met him at the depot and accompanied by Secretary Root, escorted him to his hotel. It was a very unusual and perhaps unprecedented attention, and the cavalcade was much applauded by citizens as it made its way up Pennsylvania Avenue.

The good road movement is daily gaining strength in Congress. The state supervisors of New York, in convention urge the passage of the Brownlow bill which appropriates $24,000,000 to be distributed among the states according to the population. The New Yorkers want $6,000,000 for their own state.—The Senate Committee on elections will send for persons and papers in the Smoot case. This means a thorough investigation of Mormonism. Mr. Ridgely, Comptroller of the Currency, has prepared a bill authorizing national banks to lend money on farm lands to the amount of one-third of their paid-up capital and surplus. The lands must be under cultivation and must be thrice the value of the loan. Senator Nelson is the father of the bill. A large number of irrigation engineers are in Washington giving directions to the immence irrigation projects before Congress. The government owns 58 reservations, and has difficulty in preserving the preserves.

THE WOMAN WHO HOLDS HER OWN

She does not try to lead the Procession, but to keep her place, mentally, morally and physically. Avoids extremes. Practices system and moderation, keeps up with the times.

By CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Terhune Herrick.)

INTRODUCTION TO THE SERIES.

From all over the country enquiries have been pouring in upon me for advice upon various topics of interest to women. They have asked me about housekeeping and home-making, how to keep one's good looks, how to keep young, how to preserve the figure, what to wear, how to exercise, how to keep the husband good natured, and how properly to train the children.

The rapidity with which the number of these requests has increased, and the wide spread territory represented, have proved to me the impossibility of meeting these requests by individual letters, and have so impressed upon me the universal demand for information along these lines, that I have been persuaded to write a series of articles, of which this is the first.

C. T. H.

The woman who attempts to hold her own has her work cut out for her. A man, may, if he is in luck, have a certain unity about his occupations. A woman who tries to keep up with the times is a Pooh Bah in petticoats. She is a number of things in succession and never any one thing long. She fills a position on one side of the stage and then goes to the other side in a fresh capacity. Unlike the original Pooh Bah, she does not draw a salary for each pursuit. Instead of this, she usually has the privilege of finding virtue its own and only reward.

The woman who does not keep up with the times, drifts easily into monotony. This is a blunder.

Never should you let yourself get into a rut, my friend the housekeeper. It does not pay. Perhaps it may seem to lighten labor to have the wheels run in a groove but in the long run,—and often in the short run, too,—it will be found to be a mistake. If it is your sense of duty that puts you and keeps you there, go to work to try to remodel your preception of what constitutes your duty. If you have a New England conscience of the virulent type, take chloroform and have it extracted. Sometimes the roots go too deep for this, and then the only thing that will help is constant treatment.

The woman who means to hold her own should consider seriously what her own is. First and foremost, she will probably tell you, are those who belong to her household. They must be cared for, fed and clothed. Granted. But men—likewise women and children—do not live by bread alone, and the life is more than raiment. We all of us know homes where the bodies of the inmates are fed and the souls and spirits starve.

Once upon a time I knew a home where the everyone was happy. It was a badly kept house —from one point of view. The mother was no housekeeper and she knew it. There were holes in the linen, slits in the window shades, frayed spots in the carpets. The service of the table could only be described as higgledy-piggledy. Yet I have never known a more united family. There may have been cracks in the china, but there was none in the domestic unity.

The children were loving and obedient the father and mother were companionable and charming.

Of course, it was not because the house was in rags and splinters. It might have been patched and the family peace still unbroken. But anyone who had to choose between living in such a home and in a domain presided over by the kind of a gorgon known as a "nasty-particular" housekeeper would not have hesitated for a moment. He would have preferred godliness to cleanliness and taken it at the first offer.

Either of these illustrations is an extreme and this is what the woman who holds her own tries to avoid. The middle course that has been described as golden is the end of her efforts.

In order to win this she should lay to heart the truth that something must be crowded out. One woman with one head, one back, one set of nerves, hands and feet, cannot accomplish everything. If she does, there is very little left of the woman but a lot of assorted fragments and the memory of a strenuous life. There are far better things than these to put into the family collection. When modern surgery reaches the point where it is possible to insert new backs and replace defective nerves, a woman may accomplish all she wishes she could do and all a mere man thinks she might do. Until then she must be contented to be as the Creator made her.

There is a choice in what may be crowded out. I have spoken of the advantage of diversity of occupation. A woman must not be all housekeeper lest she neglect the weightier matters of the law. She must not be all wife, for fear her children should suffer, nor should she be all mother, under penalty of causing her husband to feel like an imposed upon boarder in his own home. Still less should she, in her desire to keep step with the march of events outside, devote herself so unreservedly to Women's Clubs, Mother's Meetings and Cooking Classes that her children bring themselves up by hand and her husband finds his only satisfactory gastronomic greeting at the club or the restaurant. In the ghoulish phrase of a sprightly young man, she does not wish either to keep in front with the hearse or come trailing along at the back with the buggies.

It is no small thing to be a wife and mother and the fools who yearly rush into a relation where angels might well fear to tread open a terrifying prospect for the future of the race. Still, the fools are not in the majority, and the greater part of the women who make mistakes do it through ignorance and false sense of proportion. When we start classes in girls' schools for the study of a perspective that is not that of drawing and a proportion that is not to be found in the arithmetics we may hope better things for the future of the nation.

In the meantime, — "don't throw things at the performers,—they are doing their best." Their very best, poor things! It is not the fault of the young girl that she has not been trained for the great career of wifehood and motherhood that, if God is good to her, lies ahead of her. As it is, she can only do her possible.

It is a big thing when a woman has learned how to make a man happy, though married, how to bring up children so that they will be as much comfort as possible to their families and as little nuisance as feasible to the neighbours, to keep house so that no one but the house would suspect it did not keep itself, to manage a servant so that she will not look upon the mistress as her natural enemy, to be ready in hospitality without making it a burden, to be on good terms with the neighbors, near or far, without condescending to pettiness, to be a member of a Woman's Club without leaving the stockings undarned, to attend church without losing her temper on Sunday morning, to post herself upon current events without taking the paper from her husband at the breakfast table, to read a new book occasionally, to practise outdoor exercise enough to keep herself in good bodily trim, to dress herself tastefully without forming colossal bills, to bestow sufficient attention upon her figure and face to preserve her good looks, and having done all this, to save herself from nervous prostration by the system and moderation she brings to them all.

And yet there are women who maintain that the domestic career does not give full scope to their powers! In the name of the great Goddess Common Sense, what more do they want?

We heard a man say the other morning that the abbreviation for February-Feb.—means Freeze every body, and that man looked frozen in his ulster. It was apparent that he needed the kind of warmth that stays, the warmth that reaches from head to foot, all over the body. We could have told him from personal knowledge that Hood's Sarsaparilla gives permanent warmth, it invigorates the blood and speeds it along through artery and vein, and really fits men and women, boys and girls to enjoy cold weather and resist the attacks of disease. It gives the right kind of warmth, stimulates and strengthens at the same time, and all its benefits are lasting. There may be a suggestion in this for you.

Good Spirits.

Good spirits don't all come from Kentucky. Their main source is the liver—and all the fine spirits ever made in the Blue Grass State could not remedy a bad liver or the hundred-and-one ill effects it produces. You can't have good spirits and a bad liver at the same time. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. You can put your liver in fine condition by using Green's August Flower—the greatest of all medicines for the liver and stomach and a certain cure for dyspepsia or indigestion. It has been a favorite household remedy for over thirty-five years. August Flower will make your liver healthy and active and thus insure you a liberal supply of "good spirits." Trial size, 25c; regular bottles, 75c. At all druggists.

Are you for or "agin" the colored supplements? Seems like they have about their day. Maybe so—maybe not!

One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take, harmless and good alike for young and old. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A Cure for Eczema.

My baby had Eczema so badly that its head was a solid mass of scabs, and its hair all came out. I tried many remedies but none seemed to do any permanent good until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The Eczema is cured, the scabs are gone and the little one's scalp is perfectly clean and healthy, and its hair is growing beautifully again. I cannot give too much praise to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.—Frank Farmer, Bluff City, Ky. Sick Blood

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

Longfellow Day.

This is an American year with the Monday club and Old Glory floated over the porch of Henry Wilson's hospitable home yesterday afternoon to welcome the club and their friends to a Longfellow Day. An invitation was extended to the lady teachers of the public schools and a goodly number of other guests assembled to commemorate the birth month of the beloved poet. The program was called at three o'clock by the president, Mrs. Howland, who asked the assembly to study for a brief hour the life and work of this greatest American writer.

Miss Helen Anderson gave the opening number, a whistling solo with her own accompaniment, Mrs. Huey followed with a biographical sketch of Longfellow. Miss Metta McKinney sang "The Rainy Day" with Mrs. Hayden at the piano, Mrs. Linton followed with a recitation "The Chamber over the gate." Mrs. Richard Mead sang, accompanying herself, Longfellow's poem "The Bridge." Mrs. Crosby was on the program for a paper on "Longfellow's Place in American Literature," but was unable to read.

Mrs. Anna B. Smith gave a five minute talk on "Evangeline" the scene of which was laid in a Nova Scotia village near Mrs. Smith's birth place. The talk was illustrated by views of that locality. Miss Majors sang charmingly an Indian song with Mrs. Hayden playing the accompaniment. This was followed by a piano solo by Mrs. Hayden. Mrs. Cleo Hall read "The Building of the Ship." Stella Zimmerman played an instrumental solo "Hiawatha."

The guests then adjourned to the dining room, where during the serving of refreshments, Mrs. E. C. Brown in Indian costume, read "Hiawatha's fishing" and Miss Jennie Gillespie, in the costume of Old Nokomis, fished out of a large fish globe, souvenir fish poles bearing a couplet of the poem from which Mrs. Brown was reading. Mrs. Hardenburg and Mrs. Abbie Fisher assisted Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Howland in receiving the guests at the door, where programs bearing Longfellow's portrait were given as souvenirs of the occasion.

Mrs. Eugene Camburn, Mrs. Frank Clarkson, Mrs. H. D. Hillman and Mrs. Horace Weller presided in turn at the two coffee urns. Mrs. Ricks, assisted by Miss Kate Anderson, Mrs. Dolph Heesen, Mrs. Louis Schneider, Mrs. R. B. Gillespie, Mrs. Linton and Mrs. Blanch Fisher, had the dining room and serving in charge. Miss Phelps, Mrs. Bawden and Mrs. Frazer were also assistance to the committee though unable to be present. The out of town [illegible] Mrs. Bailey of Boston, and Mrs. Chas. Fitzsimmons of Lansing. Old buildings, long unused, private residences near the business section in fact every available structure bear crudely lettered signs on board o cloth announcing that within is th temporary office of a firm.

Labor is in demand and the new papers already contain display adver tisements for men to begin the work of clearing the ruins.

But this does not mean that the great fire was a lesser calamity than has been pictured in these dispatches. The bald fact remains that 140 acres of business buildings, representing property to the approximate value o $125,000,000, was destroyed within th journey of a clock's hand.

Valuables Found Safe.

A great cloud was lifted when it wa discovered that practically all of th vaults and strong rooms and safes o the financial concerns whose building were destroyed are unhurt. A tre mendous loss in securities had been anticipated here and when vault after vault yielded up its treasures un harmed the joy of the guardians wa boundless.

Another surprise was the discovery that two financial concerns, whose homes were directly in the fiercest sweep of the flames, were practically unharmed. These were the Mercantile Trust Co. and Brown Bros. bank.

As yet no figures on loss and insur ance that can be regarded as officia are obtainable. A careful canvass o insurance experts, builders and busi ness men placed the loss in round fig ures at $125,000,000, and the insuranc at from eighty millions to ninety mi lions. It is probable that these est

THE ELECTRIC ROAD.

The subjoined article, culled from a late city paper, supports the contention made by the HERALD, that we are fast approaching a period when the electric railway will cease being considered as a "street railway" and will rank with the steam roads as a carrier of passengers and freight. The article is as follows:

ELECTRIC SLEEPERS

Novel idea for day and night Traveling.

Will be operated the same as the Pullman.

The great strides made by the electric lines in the matter of long distance traveling, is well illustrated by the completion recently of two new convertible parlor and sleeping cars built by the Holland Palace Car Co., of Indianapolis. The cars will be run on the roads adopting the idea, the same as the Pullman sleepers are run on steam roads. They will be owned and operated by the Holland Palace Car Co. The cars are sixty-five feet four inches over all and are furnished with their own motors, geared for sixty-five to seventy-five miles an hour.

It has been pointed out by some of the critics of the HERALD that the experience of Blissfield and Morenci refuted our arguments, that they were all right in theory but did not apply in actual practice. Now, what the HERALD wishes to impress upon its readers, is that it is not arguing for the immediate future, but is looking upon this electric traction situation as it will appear five or ten years hence. We are not vitally concerned with whatever mistakes Blissfield or Morenci may have made, and these mistakes may not even be apparent at the present time. The experience of these towns, and in fact any towns in this section of the country, is extremely limited.

Perhaps Adrian has had a greater experience than any other near-by municipality.

Only last week, in conversation with one of that city's most prominent business men, he told the HERALD that judging from Adrian's [illegible] would rue the day an electric line was laid on Chicago street.

He claimed that the farmers had virtually deserted Maumee street in his own city, because of the proximity of the electric cars, and that the merchants of that street had suffered accordingly, whilst those on Main street had been benefited in proportion.

He also stated that the advance guard of heavy freight traffic had already appeared and that when the new station was built, and when connections were secured with other lines, it was openly talked, that freight would become the mainstay of the road

Again, one of our own merchants, who is decidedly in favor of this line, admits that he is astonished at the amount of opposition encountered amongst the farmers concerning the operation of this road on Chicago street. They are willing to give right of way on their farms, but they are not willing to be driven off a street they have occupied from time immemorial.

Nor is this all. It seems a certainty that not many years will elapse before an electric line will be built between Adrian and Ann Arbor, which will, of necessity, enter our village. This line would really be of great convenience, but such a line would carry freight just as certainly as would the present proposed line and by the terms of the carefully worded franchise which is now being considered by the council, it too, would have the privilege of coming down Chicago street with its entire quota of freight and passenger traffic, using the lines of the road which is at present contemplated.

Now, if an electric road must enter Tecumseh under special conditions and with special privileges, the HERALD would suggest that it could do so with the greatest advantage to itself, and with the least detriment to the villagers by pursuing the following course, viz., from the Raisin river via the private road to the north side of Hayden's mill thence diagonally to the foot of Logan street, ascend the hill on this street back, of Fred Denel's, thence west to Wyandotte street, thence south to Cummins street and west on that street to the village limits.

Such a route would place the road in close touch with the Hayden mill, the creamery, the handle factory, Heesen's foundry and the village water-works, and at the same time would do as littl damage to the residence and mercantilee interests as possible.

Furthermore, as an additional advantage, we would secure an electric station in close proximity to the union station as now contemplated by the steam roads centering here. The fact that such a station is three blocks from the center of the village cannot successfully be used as an argument against such a location. Passengers who wish to trade in Tecumseh will not be deterred by a walk or ride of three blocks from giving their patronage to Tecumseh merchants.

The HERALD realizes that there are two sides to this question, just as there are to every question. There are two honest opinions as to the best course to pursue and these opinions are widely different. On the one hand there is a chance, even probability, that we may create that which, in after years, will become a detriment to our entire village. On the other hand, there is no such danger.

Is it not wise to "play safe" and not take the chance?

"Hoity Toity."

Weber & Fields never do things in a niggardly manner. Their productions are staged with an utter disregard of money. They are after results, and lovers of musical comedy and bright, clean burlesque, will admit, when they see "Hoity Toity," which comes to the New Bradley opera house Friday, Feb. 19, 1904, that these men, who stand alone in their class, have achieved remarkable results with this, the greatest and most popular of all their many beautiful and costly productions.

ROUND ABOUT US

Once a captain in the army was cornered by the enemy and he addressed his men as follows: "My men, fight like demons until your powder gives out then run. I'm a little lame. I'll start now".—Ex.

The son of a deputy sheriff living at a considerable distance from the city got to playing with his father's hand cuffs, Sunday, and succeeded in getting one of them fastened about his wrist. His father was unable to unlock it and as a result a drive to the city was necessary. Marshal Ulrich was the locksmith seen.—Adrian Telegram.

People who need religion: The man who left his horse standing out in the cold all day without a blanket on; the man who growls like a wild beast when his wife asks for money; the man who walks the street with his hands in his pockets while his wife carries the baby; the man who keeps a dog but says he can't afford to take the home paper.—Ex.

He was not accustomed to dining at hotels and the bill of fare perplexed him. However, he began bravely to call for and eat in the order placed. After a while a gentleman sitting opposite called for something near the bottom of the bill of fare. "My goodness!" he exclaimed. "Are you way there? Why I've only got to here (indicating the place with his finger) and I'm about busted already."—Ex.

Had not Donald, Billmeyer shown great presence of mind last Thursday when his clothing, saturated with gasoline, caught fire, some terrible results must have followed. In cleaning a gasoline stove, he forgot about a pail of gasoline, he had just drawn from the stove, and striking a match the gasoline caught fire. In removing the pail, it spilled on his clothing and he was soon all ablaze. Dashing from the building he buried himself in a snow bank and escaped with only a singeing.—Onsted News.

Miss Bertha Keusch was married to John F. Hieber by the Rev. Albert Schoen at St. Paul's parsonage Tuesday evening, February 2. This is a young couple of which The Standard made the prediction that they would nest in the spring, but instead they gave our prophecy the ha ha and went right over to their home on Taylor street and commenced wrestling with the problem of who is to build the fire in the deal of winter. We admire their pluck—good luck to them.—Chelsea Standard.

Willard Stearns started out from Adrian the other morning for Ann Arbor by car. Its about 30 miles. It took him [illegible] hours, three miles an hour—he could have walked it in that time. Dundee depot is delightfully quiet. Mr. Stearns spent a whole week there that afternoon. He describes the ceiling frescoing as something superb—having made a careful study of it. We earnestly hope that the spare hours which Mr. Stearns was forced to take were thoughtful ones—that his conscience pricked him for the wholesale "lambasting" he has given his neighbor editors in the past.—Onsted News.

George Oram is a rural man, from Adrian carries mail; one night last week when he came home, he told a curious tale. While driving near a rivulet whose waters were quite high, his wagon tipped into the drink, and Oram was not dry. His head stuck through one side window, his feet thrust through the other, made Oram wish he was at home, visiting his mother. The horse ran for a rod or two then men came to his aid, and helped him get down off his perch; placed him on level grade, 'Twas lucky that the mail escaped and none of it got wet, and Uncle Sam can still depend on George Oram you bet.—Hudson Post.

One day last week, a bashful young couple, between forty and fifty years of age, went into Chester Binns' store, and after standing around for a time, the gentleman shyly approached Mr. Binns, and in a whisper, asked him if he could find a Justice of the Peace near by. Mr. Binns took in the situation at a glance, and said, "Yes, indeed, my father-in-law is a Justice, and although he is a few miles out of town, just now, I can get him here in short order." The would be-groom allowed he'd wait, and immediately Mr. Binns 'phoned J. C. Rogers, who at once left off visiting, and hurried in to attend to his official duties, (with an eye to the fee of course.) When he reached the scene of action, he found the store filled with guests, self invited and otherwise, and proceeded, without delay to perform the ceremony. On being told to join hands, the groom raised his right hand high above his head, but the bride, having been there before, soon righted him, and the twain were made one, without further mishaps. L. W. Landon and E. C. Rogers affixed their signatures as chief witnesses, and the groom gave the justice $1.50, saying, that was all he had, but would send more, after next pay day. Mr. Binns made the bride a nice present, and everybody was happy.—Adrian Press.

THE GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE.

C. A. Wright will return money if Hyomei fails. No stomach dosing.

Hyomei has made so many cures of the most chronic and deep seated cases of catarrh, that C. A. Wright considers it a specific in this disease.

He extends an invitation to all catarrh sufferers to call at his store and purchase a Hyomei outfit with the distinct understanding that it will be absolutely free unless it effects a cure.

The chief reason for the unusual success of Hyomei in the treatment of catarrhal troubles and other diseases of the air passages, is the fact that it cures by a new principle, impregnating the air you breathe with healing and germ-killing balsams. On this account it reaches the seat of the disease in a way impossible to pills, drugs or other stomach dosing.

Many of C. A. Wright's customers, who have suffered with catarrh since childhood have been cured completely by this scientific remedy.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1, and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the purse or pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei. Extra bottles can be obtained for 50c, making it a most economical remedy for the cure of catarrh.

Do not suffer longer with catarrhal disorders, but get a Hyomei outfit from C. A. Wright, under his guarantee to return the money if it fails. You run no risk whatever. If it cures, the treatment is not expensive, while if it fails, C. A. Wright will refund your money and it costs you absolutely nothing.

HERE'S A BABY

Its Mother is Well.

The baby is healthy because during the period of gestation its mother used the popular and purely vegetable liniment,

Mother's Friend

Mother's Friend is a soothing, softening, relaxing liniment, a muscle maker, invigorator and freshener. It puts new power into the back and hips of a coming mother.

It is applied externally only, there is no dosing and swallowing of nasty drugs, no inward treatment at all.

The state of the mother during gestation may influence the disposition and future of the child; that is one reason why mothers should watch their condition and avoid pain. Her health, that of the child and their lives, depend on keeping free from pain, worry and melancholy. Be of good cheer, strong of heart and peaceful mind. Mother's Friend can and will make you so. Bearing down pains, morning sickness, sore breast and insomnia are all relieved by this wonderful remedy.

A HELPING HAND.

Is Gladly Extended by a Tecumseh Citizen.

There are many enthusiastic citizens in Tecumseh prepared to tell their experience of the public good. Testimony from such a source is the best of evidence, and will prove a "helping hand" to scores of readers. Read the following statement:

Mrs. J. H. Welch, who resides in the south western section of Tecumseh, says: "I wish to express my gratitude for the benefit derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back troubled me for a long time with a constant dull aching pain across my loins and when stooping or exerting myself it became very sharp. If I took cold it always settled in my kidneys and in the morning I was so lame and stiff that I could hardly attend to my work. I used several simple household remedies but they did not bring rleief, Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and spoken of so highly I concluded to test their merits and got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. They took right hold of the cause and in a short time the pain in my back was a thing of the past. I can now straighten after bending or stooping without any inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful remedy."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

"OH, MAMMA,
Something is Biting Me."

Mothers Read.

It is not itching piles that ails YOU or YOUR CHILD. It's the PIN or SEAT WORM that causes you or your child to have rectal trouble. Soon after retiring for the night the pin worm appears. It bites and stings and causes scratching and aching. The doctor and the man who has the dollar-a-box salve call it piles. Mothers know what it means when the child cries out: "Mamma, something is biting me." And sure enough, upon examining her child she finds the naughty white pin worm, sharp pointed at both ends, imbedded in the child's rectum. This worm causes more nervousness to young and old persons than any other disease, and the itching is not piles but pin worms. The only sure and harmless remedy for this is STEKETEE'S PIN WORM DESTROYER. Do not pay a dollar for a box of salve when 25 cents will cure you and your child. For sale by all druggists, or send 25c postage for 1 box, or 2 for 50c to GEO. G. STEKETEE, Grand Rapids, Mich., proprietor.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Tipton received no mail last Wednesday on account of the roads being blockaded with snow. It was the first time in fifteen years that we have been without the mail.

The Literary and Debating society will meet at S. N. Munger's, Feb. 13. Program will be presented and the question, "Resolved that the Negro should be disenfranchised," will be discussed. Leaders the Misses Helen Beebe and Nora Hardy.

About fifty of the North Adrian Grangers visited the Tipton Grange last Saturday night. After a short business meeting we listened to an excellent program carried out by the visiting Grange. An oyster supper was served to about one hundred fifty.

Mr. Horace Wilcox left for Lansing from Clinton last week Monday, expecting to return to the same place. The tracks were blockaded by snow, trains were running on any old time or no time at all. Wednesday he found himself at Devils Lake, whence he returned home on the noon train. While in Lansing he purchased a complete set of tools for working in three inch pipe and is now prepared to put down wells of either two or three inch pipe.

A letter to Miss Alma Whelan from Mrs. Philene Hunsacker, says that Mr. and Mrs. Hunsacker are now located in Dublin, Chihuahua, Mexico, and are the only gentiles in the town, the population being strictly mormons of the polygamist brand. Mr. and Mrs. H— went to this place in search of health about a year ago. As they have not found it, they expect ere long to journey on their long quest, probably to Calafornia or Florida. Mr. H— is an asthmatic, Mrs. H— who was formerly Miss Philene Knight, has rheumatism.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

"I was afflicted with heart trouble for three years. I would be apparently all right, and without a moment's warning would fall as though shot. The attacks were frequent, and a terrible dread possessed me, as I never knew when or where, nor under what conditions I would be attacked, and whether I would survive them. I consulted and was treated by some of the most eminent physicians of the state. Not finding relief from this source, I began taking Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, and began to improve at once. WITHOUT OTHERS' AID

Baltimore Will Endeavor to Meet Appalling Conditions.

BURNED DISTRICT GUARDED

Valuables in Vaults Found to Be in Good Condition—Institutions Preparing to Rebuild—Loss Now Estimated at $125,000,000.

Baltimore, Feb. 10.—Amid ruins still hot and smoking, Baltimore has begun its resurrection. Apathy has given way to energy, and from the governor of the state to the least private citizen the people of this distressed city have aroused themselves to meet the appalling conditions that confront them.

The governor, the mayor and various municipal officials have met and threshed out the problems that are theirs by virtue of public office. From this conference came a decision that Baltimore for the present needs no outside help, but will endeavor with her own resources and those of the state to meet the emergency. At this conference also was developed the machinery for an advisory executive committee to meet in conjunction with the legislature. The military officials had unusual problems to decide and solved them in a military manner, for every pass that has been issued giving entrance to the fire lines has been revoked. No civilian now passes the cordon of citizen soldiers, which stretches around the fire swept district where lay safes and vaults containing untold treasure.

Evidence of Recuperation.

With equal promptness the chamber of commerce held a general meeting and issued a formal announcement that reflected the prevailing hope of the fulness, declaring "there are already such evidences of recuperation that all are encouraged in the hope of the early restoration of every branch of trade."

The Stock Exchange members met and decided to rebuild as soon as possible. The same story can be told of practically every commercial body, while on every hand is evidence of private effort toward rehabilitation.

Old buildings, long unused, private residences near the business section, in fact every available structure bears crudely lettered signs on board or cloth announcing that within is the temporary office of a firm.

Labor is in demand and the newspapers already contain display advertisements for men to begin the work of clearing the ruins.

But this does not mean that the great fire was a lesser calamity than has been pictured in these dispatches. The bald fact remains that 140 acres of business buildings, representing property to the approximate value of $125,000,000, was destroyed within the journey of a clock's hand.

Valuables Found Safe.

A great cloud was lifted when it was discovered that practically all of the vaults and strong rooms and safes of the financial concerns whose buildings were destroyed are unhurt. A tremendous loss in securities had been anticipated here and when vault after vault yielded up its treasures unharmed the joy of theguardians was boundless.

Another surprise was the discovery that two financial concerns, whose homes were directly in the fiercest sweep of the flames, were practically unharmed. These were the Mercantile Trust Co. and Brown Bros. bank.

As yet no figures on loss and insurance that can be regarded as official are obtainable. A careful canvass of insurance experts, builders and business men placed the loss in round figures at $125,000,000, and the insurance at from eighty millions to ninety millions. It is probable that these estimates will stand with slight change when final figures are written. Much property was saved by the prompt efforts of merchants.

Jumped For Their Lives.

New York, Feb. 10.—More than a dozen employes, among them several women, were compelled to jump from the second story windows by a sudden outbreak of fire in the Brooklyn Chair Co.'s factory in Waverley avenue, Brooklyn. Several were overtaken by the flames and severely burned before they could make their escape, and it is feared that two will die. The factory was entirely destroyed, involving a loss of about $100,000.

Cole Younger Wants More Liberty.

St. Paul, Feb. 10.—Congressman J. Adam Bede has filed a formal application with the state pardon board for a full pardon for Cole Younger, the ex-bandit, now out on parole. The purpose of the pardon is to give Younger greater liberty, as he is now prohibited from exhibiting himself in public exhibitions. Younger is desirous of operating a show at the St. Louis exposition.

Losers in Baltimore Fire.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 10.—Parke, Davis & Co. have received advices from Baltimore that the building at 103 East German street, occupied by the firm as a branch office, was totally destroyed in the big fire, together with a $50,000 stock of goods, which was covered by insurance. Aside from the books nothing was saved.

Crushed to Death Between Cars.

Amada, Mich., Feb. 10.—While loading cars for the Modern Match Co. Charles Fillmore, aged 50, was caught between cars and crushed. He died in a few minutes. He leaves a widow.

A Mother's Recommendation.

STATE NOW ORGANIZED

Modern Maccabees of the World Meet at Flint.

EVERY TENT WAS REPRESENTED

Officers Elected—F. H. Budrow of Detroit Lands Commandership—Half Hundred Candidates Initiated and Banquet Held.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 11.—The state organization of Maccabees of the World was formed in this city Wednesday afternoon, delegates being present from practically every tent in the state and also the supreme officers. Supreme Commander Markey called the session to order in the morning.

Considerable wire-pulling was done for the office of state commander, but F. H. Budrow of Detroit won out over David B. Duford of Bay City by about 2,000 delegates voting the whole strength of their tents. Earl F. Johnson of Flint was elected past commander; F. W. Full of Battle Creek, lieutenant-commander; Fred J. Cutler of Ionia, record keeper; D. E. Keyes of Grand Rapids, finance keeper; Joseph Baker of Port Huron, chaplain; George W. Morton of Belding, master-at-arms; E. O. Dewey of Owosso, sergeant-at-arms; D. E. Murray of Jackson, first master of guards; D. W. Phillipy of Kalamazoo, second master of guards; Thomas R. Kelly of Bay City, sentinel; William Ellree of Benton Harbor, picket; Earl F. Johnson of Flint, representative of the state convention to be held in Detroit next July; Dr. J. H. Dancy of Capac, physician.

A class of fifty-two candidates was initiated, Detroit degree team doing the work. The meeting closed with a banquet.

Many Injured While Coasting.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 11.—While coasting down Barbour street hill at night a bobsled on which were fourteen young west end people ran into a tree, and every one in the party was more or less injured. The most seriously injured were: Vera Smith, aged 12, leg and arm broken and face and head badly cut; Walter Smith, aged 19, compound fracture of the leg two inches below the hip; Cora Dennis, a nurse at the sanitarium, sprained back and ankle and head injured. The hill is a favorite place for the young people to coast in winter, and for years there has been one or more accidents during the season.

Will Dive For Saw Logs.

West Branch, Mich., Feb. 11.—Diving for sawlogs is a new industry to be engaged in at Clear lake next summer by Messrs. J. W. McCausey and A. J. Boyer of Union City and Henry Dodge of Caro. They have just secured the title to the land on which this lake is located by purchase. It was the property formerly owned by Frank Thompson, now of Detroit, who conducted large lumbering operations on this lake twenty years ago. About 1,400 logs of the best timber are in shallow water, and it is estimated that at least 400,000 feet can be recovered by employing divers in the deeper parts.

McKinley Club Banquet.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 11.—Five hundred Republicans, mostly farmers from the four corners of Lenawee county, held the third annual love feast of the McKinley club at the armory last night. Six o'clock dinner was served by the ladies of the Baptist church, after which speechmaking lasted till near midnight. Prosecuting Attorney Theodore Joslin acted as toastmaster. The speakers' list included such names as G. K. Diekema, Homer Warren, Hon. Charles E. Townsend, Congressman James T. McCleary of Minnesota, Senator Simons and Congressman Edward Hamilton.

Stood It Twenty-eight Years.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 11.—After twenty-eight years of married life the wife of Charles Griswold of Pine Run wants a divorce. The couple have seven children, the eldest of whom is 25 and the youngest 12. The wife alleges that during the past few years her husband has acted cruelly towards her, alleging among other things that he threw the ax at her, tried to drive her from home with a stove poker, locked her out nights and hid the burners on the gasoline stove to prevent her getting meals for the family.

Met a Violent Death.

Saginaw, Mich., Feb. 11.—Clyde Vergeson, a machinist employed by the Morse Cedar Co., met a violent death. He was at work when in some way he was caught in the machinery and whirled around the shafting. His arm was torn from its socket and he sustained other injuries. Death was almost instantaneous. He was a married man, 24 years old, and lived at 1494 Holland avenue.

Gets 10 to 14 Years in Marquette.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 11.—Albert S. Monsam Deporzia, artist and forger, has been sentenced by Judge Newnham to spend not less than ten years and not more than fourteen years in Marquette prison. He pleaded guilty to a charge of forging a check for $62 25 and attempting to pass it last Sunday upon John Gullani a Canal street merchant.

Wasn't His Wife at All.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 10.—Henry Stever, formerly of Owosso, separated from his wife last summer and came to this city, where he has since resided. Some months ago his wife also came here. Despite the fact that they were separated, Stever kept watch of her, and on Sunday he secured the services of the sheriff and went to the woman's rooms to get evidence that she was unfaithful. He was greatly surprised when the woman showed him a divorce decree which had been granted to her last fall without his knowledge.

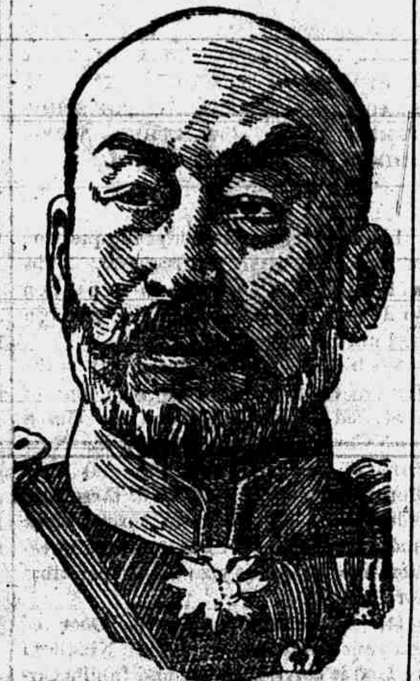
SEOUL AND MASAMPHO TAKEN

Latter an Important Stronghold—Russian Railway Bridge Blown Up—Five Russian Commercial Steamers Seized—Alexieff Mobilizing Troops.

London, Feb. 11.—The Shanghai correspondent of the Daily Mail says an important bridge on the Manchurian railroad has been blown up and thirty men have been killed.

Special dispatches from Tokio this morning announce the arrival of Japanese troops at Seoul. The Tientsin correspondent of the Standard sends in a report that the Russians have massacred 100 Chinese at Liao Yang, in consequence of which the officials at Shanhaikwan are greatly alarmed and appealing to Pekin for protection.

Tokio, Feb. 11.—The Japanese have captured at least five Russian commercial steamers, including the Ekaterintoslav, Moukden, Russia, Argun and Alexander. They were captured by the Japanese in Korean and adjacent waters at various times since Saturday by small cruisers. Some of the steamers are rich prizes. The small steamer Koeik is detained at Yokohama, its status not being clear.



GEN. MASATAKE TERANGHI, Japanese Minister of War.

Japan seized Masampho Sunday and dispatched a heavy force there. Japan will fortify the port and establish a naval and military base there.

"Masampho is an exceedingly important point, as it controls the Korean channel and is an excellent base for future operations.

Chefoo, Feb. 11.—Upon the withdrawal of the Japanese minister from St. Petersburg the Japanese fleet and transports proceeded to Masampho, which was occupied, and the fleet then sailed for Port Arthur. The rest of the Japanese ships are guarding northern Japan, fearing that Russia might land a force from Vladivostock, and for the further purpose of preventing four Russian cruisers from joining the Russian fleet at Port Arthur. Other Japanese war vessels are cruising to intercept Russian vessels coming from Singapore.

San Francisco, Feb. 11.—A cablegram to the Associated Press from Nagasaki states that the Russian cruiser Variag, which was reported to have been sunk at Shemulpo by the Japanese fleet, was captured and arrived at Sasebo. The dispatch also states that in addition to the Russian vessels damaged in the torpedo attack at Port Arthur that seven other vessels were captured. It is also reported at Nagasaki that General Kuropatkin has arrived at Harbin to take command of the Russian land forces.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—Viceroy Alexieff has begun the mobilization of the army reserves in eastern Asia.

The publication of extra editions of the newspapers containing accounts of the reported injuries to Japanese ships during the Port Arthur engagements, and the sinking of the Japanese battleship Shikishima led to a demand upon the editors for the source of their information. They replied "it came from the British embassy."

These reports were received everywhere with manifestations of joy, but nothing confirming them has come from Viceroy Alexieff.

DECLARATION OF WAR.

Czar of Russia Issues the Formal Announcement.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 11.—The czar has issued the formal edict declaring war against Japan. After stating the reasons for differences between the two nations the edict closes with the following:

"We made every exertion to consolidate tranquility in the far east. In these peaceful aims we signified assent to the proposals of the Japanese government to revise agreements regarding Korean affairs existing between the two governments. However, the negotiations begun upon this subject were not brought to a conclusion and Japan, without awaiting the receipt of the last responsive proposals of our government, declared the negotiations broken off and diplomatic relations with Russia dissolved.

"Without advising us of the fact that the breach of such relations would in itself mean an opening of warlike operations, the Japanese government gave orders to its torpedo boats to suddenly attack our squadron standing in the outer harbor of the fortress of Port Arthur. Upon receiving reports from the viceroy in the far east about this we immediately commanded him to answer the Japanese challenge with armed force."

U. S. TO BE NEUTRAL.

Proclamation Formed—Russia and Japan Favor It.

Washington, Feb. 11.—The president has decided to issue a proclamation of neutrality. It probably will make its appearance today sometime. The proclamation is in stereotype form and simply recites and deplores the existence of hostilities between Japan and Russia and enjoins upon citizens of the United States a strict regard and observance of the neutrality laws.

Secretary Hay last night sent the draft of the declaration of our neutrality to the president for his signature. Having received enough favorable replies to insure the concurrent action of European powers in his endeavor "to localize within as small an area as possible, the hostilities in the fareast and to insure over as much of China as possible her neutrality," Secretary Hay last night addressed notes to Russia and Japan inviting their cooperation in this endeavor and announcing that the United States stood stalwartly for this principle. It was known in advance that both the combatant powers desire the localization of the war.

After addressing Germany, Great Britain and France, Secretary Hay sent the same note to the other powers signatory to the peace protocol of 1900, including Austria-Hungary, Italy, Netherlands, Belgium and Spain, and finally he addressed the combatants, Russia and Japan, inviting their cooperation in the support of the principal for which this government stood.

In diplomatic circles the feeling is strong that Russia will acquiesce in the suggestion, both as to limiting of hostilities and the neutralization of China, when she has assured herself that there is no ulterior purpose involved.

It has been decided that the cruiser squadron of the Asiatic fleet with propriety could go as far north as Shanghai and orders will be sent northward to Chemulpo, Korea, to maintain communication with the American legation at Seoul.

WAR NOTES.

The Red Cross executive committee authorizes call for donations to be sent to treasurer American National Red Cross, Washington, D. C., for relief work Russo-Japanese war.

Orders have been received at Cardiff, Wales, suspending all shipments of coal for the Russian government and cancelling the chartering on its behalf.

Mr. George W. Stewart, manager of the bureau of music of the world's fair, has received a cablegram from Russia stating, that owing to the war between Russia and Japan the band of the imperial guard would not be sent to the fair.

The steamship Gaelic has sailed for the orient from San Francisco with 1,100 tons of flour for Japan, 1,200 bales of cotton, 400 tons of lead and five tons of shoe nails for use in the manufacture of footwear for the Japanese army.

An Example For Chicago.

Boston, Feb. 11.—Dr. Samuel Abbott of the state board of health announced today that by manufacturing its own anti-toxine, the commonwealth has saved the people $405,000 in four years. The actual expense during that time, when 190,000 bottles of toxin were distributed free, was $31,500. These statistics have been forwarded to Chicago, where it is proposed to adopt the Massachusetts idea instead of purchasing supplies.

Korean Minister to Leave.

Washington, Feb. 11.—President Roosevelt received at the White House Mr. Minhui Cho, the minister of Korea, who called to pay his respects and to present formally his letters of recall from Washington. The minister has been transferred to Tokio. He presented to the president Mr. Teh Moo Sin, second secretary of the legation, who will act as charge d'affaires of Korea until the designation of another minister.

Actor Killed Himself.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 11.—George A. Yielding, an actor, killed himself in a sensational manner in a hall of the Hotel Spokane last night. He placed the muzzle of a revolver in his mouth, fired the weapon and fell dying at the door of Florence Roberts, an actress. Inability to obtain employment is believed to have caused the act. Yielding was 31 years of age and leaves a divorced wife and child in Rochester, N. Y., and a brother in Detroit.

Row May Result in Murder.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Mich., Feb. 11.—Joseph Geno of New Baltimore is in the county jail awaiting the result of injuries which, it is alleged, he inflicted on Joseph Hiser. During a row at the powerhouse Geno hit Hiser with a shovel, it is claimed, and the injured man has since been unconscious. The doctors do not think he can recover.

Terrible Results From Snowslide.

Jackson's Hole, Wyo., Feb. 10.—A snowslide has occurred on this side of the mountain pass, burying many sheep and cattle on the ranch of Gus Goener. It is believed Koener perished, but his body cannot be recovered until spring, as the ranch is under a heavy weight of snow and rock. The slide was over a mile in width.

Pains in the Back

Are symptoms of a weak, torpid or stagnant condition of the kidneys or liver, and are a warning it is extremely hazardous to neglect, so important is a healthy action of these organs.

They are commonly attended by loss of energy, lack of courage, and sometimes by gloomy foreboding and despondency.

"I had pains in my back, could not sleep and when I got up in the morning felt worse than the night before. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and now I can sleep and get up feeling rested and able to do my work. I attribute my cure entirely to Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. J. N. PERRY, care H. S. CASE 113,

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER XI.

"Yes and no, monsieur the count—no, because I have not completely achieved the object I had in view when I asked you to be admitted here tonight; yes, because these two rascals behaved in a manner which dispels all doubt."

"And yet you complain"—

"I do not complain, monsieur the count. On the contrary, I bless chance, or, rather, Providence, which has just revealed to me the existence of a secret that I did not before even suspect."

Five or six guests approached the count, interrupting the speakers. He went off with them after giving the clown a friendly nod. The latter instantly threw aside his banner and started through the crowd in pursuit of Mme. Fauvel. She had left the gallery. He found her sitting on a sofa in the large salon, engaged in an animated conversation with Madeleine.

"Of course," muttered the clown, "they are talking over the scene. But what has become of Lagors and De Clameran?"

He soon saw them wandering among the groups scattered about the room and eagerly asking questions.

"These honorable gentlemen are trying to find out who I am. Keep it up, my friends. Ask everybody."

They soon gave it up, but were so preoccupied and anxious to be alone in order to reflect and deliberate that, without waiting for supper, they took leave of Mme. Fauvel and her niece, saying they were going. The clown saw them go up to the dressing room, take their cloaks, descend the grand staircase and depart.

"I have nothing more to do here," he said.

And, completely covering his dress with a domino, he started for home. He lit a cigar and, walking up St. Lazare street, crossed the Notre Dame de Loretto and made for the Faubourg Montmartre. Suddenly as he entered Ollivier street a man emerged from a place of concealment and rushed upon him with raised arm. Fortunately the clown had a catlike instinct, which enabled him to protect himself against immediate danger and keep a sharp watch about him. He had seen, or, rather, divined, the man crouching in the dark shadow of a house and had put himself on guard, spreading out his arms. This movement certainly saved his life. Anger more than pain made him cry out:

"Ah, you villain!"

Seeing his blow miss, the assassin did not return to the attack, but made rapidly off and disappeared in the Faubourg Montmartre.

"That was certainly Lagors," said the clown, "and Clameran must be somewhere near."

He began to suffer from his wound. He stood under a gas lamp to examine it. It did not appear to be dangerous, but the arm was cut through to the bone. He took his handkerchief from his pocket and tore it into four bands and tied his arm up with the dexterity of a surgeon.

"I must be on the track of some great crime, since these villains are resolved upon murder. When such men are only in danger of the police court they do not gratuitously risk the chance of being tried for murder."

He could not stay where he was. By enduring a great deal of pain he might still use his arm, so he started after his enemy, taking care to keep in the middle of the road and avoid all dark corners. Although he saw no one, he was convinced that he was being followed. When he reached the Boulevard Montmartre, he crossed it and as he did so distinguished two shadows which he recognized. They crossed the same street when he crossed, a little higher up.

"I have to deal with desperate men," he muttered. "They do not even take the pains to conceal their pursuit of me."

He continued his way up the boulevard and, without turning his head, was sure that his enemies were thirty feet behind him.

"I must get rid of them somehow," he said to himself. "I can neither return home nor to the Archangel with these devils at my heels. They are following me to find out where I live and who I am. If they discover that the clown is M. Verduret and that M. Verduret is M. Lecoq, there is an end to my plans. They will escape abroad with the money, and I shall be left to console myself with a wounded arm."

The idea of Raoul and Clameran escaping so exasperated him that for an instant he thought of having them arrested at once. This was easy, for he only had to rush upon them, cry for help, and they would all three be arrested and taken to the station. The police often resort to this ingenious and simple means of arresting a malefactor for whom they are on the lookout and whom they cannot seize without a warrant. The next day there is a general explanation, and the parties, if innocent, are dismissed. The clown had sufficient proof to sustain him in the arrest of Lagors. He could show the letter and the mutilated prayer book, he could reveal the existence of the pawnbrokers' tickets in the house at Vesinet, he could display his wounded arm. Raoul would be compelled to confess how and why he had assumed the name of Lagors and to what end he was passing himself off for a relative of M. Fauvel.

On the other hand, in acting thus hastily he was insuring the safety of the principal villain, De Clameran. What proofs had he against him? Not one. He had strong suspicions, but no facts. On reflection he decided that he would act alone, as he had thus far done, and would discover the truth of his suspicions. Having reached this decision, the first step to be taken was to get rid of his shadowers. He walked rapidly up Sebastopol, stepping out boldly, and, reaching the square, he abruptly stopped. Meeting two sergeants of police, he asked some insignificant questions. The maneuver had the result he expected. Raoul and Clameran stood perfectly still about twenty steps off, not daring to advance. Twenty steps! That was as much start as the clown wanted. While talking with the sergeants he had pulled the bell of the door before which they were standing, and its sound apprised him that the door was open. He stepped into the house. A minute later the sergeants had passed on, and Lagors and Clameran in their turn rang the bell. When the porter appeared, they asked who it was that had just gone in disguised as a clown. They were told that no masked person had entered and that none of the lodgers had gone out disguised that night.

"However," added the concierge, "I am not very sure, for this house has a back door which opens on St. Denis street."

"We are fooled," interrupted Lagors, "and will never know who the clown is."

"Unless we learn it too soon for our own good," said Clameran musingly.

While Lagors and the forgemaster were full of anxiety the clown hurried up the back street and reached the Archangel hotel as the clock struck 3. Prosper, who was watching from his window, saw him in the distance and ran down to open the door for him and led him up stairs impatiently.

"What have you learned?" he said. "What did you find out? Did you see Madeleine? Were Raoul and Clameran at the ball?"

But M. Verduret was not in the habit of discussing private affairs where he might be overheard.

"First of all let us go into your room and get some water to wash this cut, which burns like fire."

"Heavens! Are you wounded?"

"Yes; it is a little souvenir of your friend Raoul. Ah, I will soon teach him better manners!"

Prosper was surprised at the look of merciless rage on his friend's face as he calmly washed and dressed his arm.

"Now, Prosper, we will talk. Our enemies are warned, and we must crush them with the rapidity of lightning."

M. Verduret expressed himself in a quick, imperious tone, which Prosper did not understand.

"I have made a mistake. I have been on the wrong track. It is an accident liable to happen to any man, no matter how intelligent he may be. I have taken the effect for the cause. The day I was convinced that culpable relations existed between Raoul and Mme. Fauvel I thought I held the end of the thread that must lead us to the truth. I should have been more doubtful. It was too simple, too natural."

"Do you suppose Mme. Fauvel to be innocent?"

"Certainly not, but her guilt is not such as I supposed. I imagined that, infatuated with a seductive adventurer, Mme. Fauvel had first bestowed upon him the name of one of her relatives and then introduced him as her nephew. This was an adroit stratagem to gain him admission to her husband's house. She began by giving him all the money she could dispose of, later her jewels, which he pawned. Finally, having nothing more to give, she allowed him to steal the money from her husband's safe. That is what I thought."

"And in this way everything was explained?"

"No, this did not explain everything, as I well knew at the time. How is Clameran's position to be accounted for under my first theory?"

"Clameran is Lagors' accomplice."

"Ah, there is the mistake! I for a long time believed Lagors to be the principal person when, in fact, he is nothing. Yesterday in a dispute between them the forgemaster said to his friend, 'And, above all things, my friend, I would advise you not to resist me, for if you do I will crush you.' That explains all. The elegant Lagors is not the lover of Mme. Fauvel, but the tool of Clameran. Besides, did our first suppositions account for the resigned obedience of Madeleine? It is Clameran, and not Lagors, whom Madeleine obeys."

Prosper began to remonstrate.

M. Verduret shrugged his shoulders. To convince Prosper he had only to utter one word. He had simply to say that three hours ago Clameran had announced his coming marriage with Madeleine. But he did not.

"Clameran," he continued—"Clameran alone has Mme. Fauvel in his power. Now the question is what terrible secret is the basis of his mysterious power? I have positive proof that they have not met since their early youth until fifteen months ago, and Mme. Fauvel's reputation has always been above the reach of slander. Therefore we shall not know all till we know Clameran's past. Ah, tonight when I mentioned his brother Gaston's name he turned as white as if he had seen a ghost. And then I remembered that Gaston died suddenly while his brother Louis was making him a visit."

"Do you think he was murdered?"

"I think the men who tried to assassinate me would do anything. The robbery, my friend, has now become a secondary detail. It is easily explained, and if that were all to be accounted for I would say to you: 'My task is finished. Let us go ask the judge of instruction for a warrant of arrest.'"

Prosper started up with swelling breast and sparkling eyes.

"Oh, you know—is it possible?"

"Yes, I know who gave the key, and I know who told the secret word."

"The key might have been M. Fauvel's. But the word"—

"The word you gave. You have forgotten, I suppose. But Gipsy remembered. You know that two days before the robbery you took Lagors and two other friends to sup with Mme. Gipsy. Nina was sad and reproached you for not being more devoted to her."

"Yes, I remember that."

"But do you remember what you replied to her?"

Prosper thought a moment.

"No."

"Well, you said to Nina, 'You are unjust in reproaching me with not thinking constantly of you, for at this very moment your dear name guards my chief's safe.'"

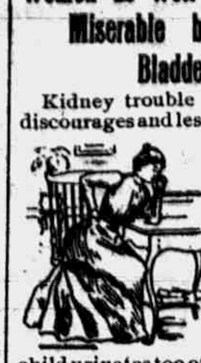
Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.



Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

2 Tim. 4:2

THY KINGDOM COME

Cor. 1 9:16

IX

Let us proceed to consider the question of the proper time for Baptism. This, as I have said we are in a position to do now that we know the purpose and nature of that rite.

We have seen that Baptism (1) is the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God; and thus (2) admits us into Union with Christ; and thus (3) unto the New Birth of the Spirit; and thus (4) unto Forgiveness of Sins. Each of these considerations will be seen to throw clear and unmistakeable light upon the question now before us viz., the proper time for Baptism.

(1). Since Baptism is the Door of Entrance unto the Spiritual Kingdom of God it corresponds to and fulfills Circumcision which was the Door of Entrance into the Earthly Kingdom of God. Now Circumcision was commanded to be preformed in Infancy (Gen. 17:12) Thus the "Law of the Type" would seem to indicate clearly enough that IN FANCY is the proper time for Baptism.

But to this Law we can add our Blessed Lord's command viz. in Mark 10:14; "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the Kingdom of God." Here we have a twofold declaration that little children are to be baptized. In the first place our Lord practically commands little children to be brought unto him. But He is now reigning as King in the Kingdom of God. Accordingly, if children are to be brought unto Him they must be brought into the Kingdom of God. And that, we know, can only be through the Door of Baptism. Then in the second place, our Blessed Lord says explicitly "for of such is the Kingdom of God"—thereby expressly declaring that they are to be admitted into the Kingdom of God (which must be by Baptism—the one only Door). At the same time these words show most plainly that we were not mistaken in interpreting the words "come unto me" as equivalent to "Come into the Kingdom of God."

(2). Baptism being the Door of Entrance into the Kingdom of God admits into Union with Christ. Our Lord's illustration is (John 15:5) "I am the vine, ye are the branches." Now the natural time to graft branches into a vine is when they are young and tender. Hence the natural time for persons to be grafted into Christ by Baptism is in INFANCY. Of course, if one has not been baptized in Infancy he may be baptized as an adult but then our Lord tells us he must become as a little child (Matt. 18:3; Mark 10:15) thereby again plainly indicating that Infancy is the proper time for Baptism.

(3). Baptism by admitting into Union with Christ admits unto the New Birth of the Spirit. Now the natural time to be born is as an infant; hence the natural time for Baptism is in INFANCY. Of course, if one has not been born again until "he is old" (John 3:4) he may still be "born of Water and of the Spirit" by Baptism—but for this, as before, he must become as a little child.

(4). Baptism, admitting into the Kingdom of God, into Union with Christ, unto the New Birth of the Spirit, admits unto Forgiveness of Sins. This means more than is usually understood by Forgiveness of Sins. We can understand that the Father in the parable had forgiven the Prodigal Son when he was still in the Far Country feeding swine. The Forgiveness of Sins which accompanies Baptism (Acts 2:38; 22:16) is the full restoration to the Father's House as (a member of Christ, the child of God, an inheritor of the Kingdom of Heaven"). That is to say Every child born into the world is born outside of the Kingdom of God (that is what is meant by being by nature a "child of wrath"—Eph. 2:3). Now if sin had not passed upon the human race every child born into the world would have been by nature a child of (the Kingdom of) God. Therefore clearly it is God's will that little children should be born into the Kingdom of God, i. e. into that state of full acceptance which is meant by Forgiveness of Sins. Thus again it is plain that the natural time for Baptism is INFANCY.

We are now in a position to estimate the value of the objection that there is no Scriptural authority for the Baptism of Infants. The fact is the WHOLE TEACHING OF SCRIPTURE is that Baptism should be preformed in Infancy, and that those who have not been baptized in Infancy must "become as little children"—viz. by repentance—before they are fitted to receive the rite.

CALLED BY DEATH.

Old Settler, a Veteran and Good Man Departs This Life

Levi Martin died at his home in Dodge City at 4 o'clock last Saturday morning, January 23, at the age of 62 years. The funeral was held from the Methodist church on the following Sunday afternoon, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. B. Barton and was attended by many sorrowing comrades and friends. Mr. Martin first settled in Ford county in 1885, on a farm in Wilburn township. During the past several years he made his home in Dodge City.

Mr. Martin under any and all circumstances was one of the most cheerful of men, and in this particular his life is a lesson to all who have known him. He was industrious, honest and had many admirable traits of character, but his uniform cheerfulness was the trait that first attracted the attention of new acquaintances. There will be universal regret caused in Ford county by his death.

Levi Martin was born in Orville, Wayne county, Ohio, November 19th, 1841. When Lincoln made the call for three month volunteers, he enlisted, and at the expiration of his enlistment he again enlisted in Co. F 55 Regiment O., Volunteer infantry at Sandusky September 20th, for 3 years. His regiment was engaged in many of the battles of Virginia, was in the Bull Run disaster to our arms, was in the battle of Chancellorville and shot through his right arm and right thigh and the pit of his stomach. His wounds were not dressed for 40 hours after; the reason for no care, he was reported among the dead. When able to be sent north was taken to the government hospital at Indianapolis Ind:, and when convalescent was transferred to Company F 17th veteran reserve corps, October 31, 1863.

He was married to Helen McCord in Bettsville, Ohio, Feb. 24, 1866, who survives him. Two children were born to them, the oldest, a daughter, Nora, was married to Horace Thorpe now living in Pratt, Kansas, Milo, their son, lives in Dodge.

Comrade Martin was a member of Lewis Post G. A. R. of this city and was beloved of all his comrades for his amiable disposition and jovial companionship. He answered the last roll call at 3:45 a. m. Jan. 23.—The Globe-Republican.

Mr. Martin will be remembered by many of the older ones, as he once resided here.

Feed pale girls on Scott's Emulsion.

We do not need to give all the reasons why Scott's Emulsion restores the strength and flesh and color of good health to those who suffer from sick blood.

The fact that it is the best preparation of Cod Liver Oil, rich in nutrition, full of healthy stimulation is a suggestion as to why it does what it does.

It is a true blood food and is naturally adapted to the cure of the blood sickness from which so many young women suffer.

We will be glad to send a sample to any sufferer.

A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's d[illegible] and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs. P. Cordier, of Mannington, Ky., writes: "My three year old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life." Refuse substitutes. Sold by J. J. Orr.

Good Spirits.

Good spirits don't all come from Kentucky. Their main source is the liver—and all the fine spirits ever made in the Blue Grass State could not remedy a bad liver or the hundred-and-one ill effects it produces. You can't have good spirits and a bad liver at the same time. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. You can put your liver in fine condition by using Green's August Flower—the greatest of all medicines for the liver and stomach and a certain cure for dyspepsia or indigestion. It has been a favorite household remedy for over thirty-five years. August Flower will make your liver healthy and active and thus insure you a liberal supply of "good spirits." Trial size, 25c; regular bottles, 75c. At all druggists.

Are you for or "agin" the colored supplements? Seems like they have about their day. Maybe so—maybe not!

Relief in one minute.

One Minute Cough Cure gives relief in one minute, because it kills the microbe which tickles the mucous membrane, causing the cough, and at the same time clears the phlegm, draws out the inflammation and heals and soothes the affected parts. One Minute Cough Cure strengthens the lungs, wards off pneumonia and is a harmless and never failing cure in all curable cases of Coughs Colds and Croup. One Minute Cough Cure is pleasant to take, harmless and good alike for young and old. Sold by C. A. Wright.

"A man ought to talk only as loud as he lives.

A dark horse—a nightmare.

"Do it Today."

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TODAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

LENAWEE PRODUCE CO.

"Hoity Toity"

It will be pleasant news to the theatregoers of this city, to read the announcement of the early engagement of Weber and Fields' celebrated success "Hoity Toity" which will open for an engagement of one night only Feb. 19, 1904, at the New Bradley opera house.

A Weber and Fields production can always be counted on as being a good show, and what is more, it is always a high class entertainment, and "Hoity Toity" is conceded to be by far the best thing these clever people have ever produced. The book is by Edgar Smith and the music by John Stromberg. One scene gives a view of the campus of Yale University, where all the characters meet, and a boat crew appears to take Lady Grafter on a trial spin. The scene changes to a river view, where a shell is seen with the rowers and Lady Grafter as the coxswain; stereoptican slides depicting perfectly the moonlit waters and the panorama of the river bank beyond. A beautiful boating song is sung, and the effect proves one of the prettiest imaginable. The chorus girls cut no small figure in this scene, as well as throughout the entire performance. Their rare beauty and charms, together with the dazzling stage business and pictures originally taught by that marvelous stage director, Julian Mitchell, which has all been retained, makes this alone worth the price of admission.

The original scenery and light effects used in the New York production at Weber and Fields' own Broadway theatre, are used in this production, and an entirely new and altogether gorgeous set of costumes have been provided. In all, it will be a delightful treat, not only from a musical and comedy point of view, but as a real beauty show.

THE ELECTRIC ROAD.

At no time has the HERALD entered into a discussion as to whether this road will be of benefit to the merchants of the village. Nor do we feel competent to do so. Each retail establishment is confronted with its own peculiar conditions, and what may be a benefit to one, may be a detriment to another. We believe that each individual merchant must decide for himself whether or no his trade will be increased by the entry of an interurban road.

In all of our arguments we have assumed that the people want this road, as do we, ourselves; but we are absolutely unshaken in the belief that the road should not be permitted throughout the length of Chicago street. Should such a thing be permitted the entire town would suffer and the merchants would suffer with it.

This matter is a serious one. A franchise is not granted for an hour, a day, or a year; it is granted, for three decades,—three decades of progress and of increasing business, both freight and passenger, for every transportation company. Why then, should we make a railroad yard of our main thoroughfare merely to satisfy the request of strangers?

Delta, Ohio, which has been used as an example of the benefits to be derived from an electric line, is a little village of half the population of Tecumseh, located twenty-five miles from Toledo on the "air-line" of the Lake Shore. Its people have always used this latter route in frequenting Toledo, which is but forty-five minutes away, and, in consequence, the merchants have felt no additional ill effects upon their trade by the advent of the interurban. But, according to their own statements they have felt no beneficial effects. In fact, isn't it a little presumptious for a person who knows little of Tecumseh, and cares less, to prescribe a route through OUR town and up a street devoted to OUR business establishments and OUR homes?

What an inspiring sight to stand upon the hallowed ground of Delta and see the round-eyed wonder of the populace as the electric cars go speeding by! And what a delectable sight to see the farmer maidens alight from these selfsame cars, groaning beneath the weight of their baskets of eggs and butter! And because of this we are invited to alienate our rights in the most valuable municipal privilege of Tecumseh!

On the other hand, there is the little village of Mt. Healthy, Ohio. A village of similar size to Delta and a similar distance from a city, the city of Cincinnati. The merchants of this town, which were prosperous before the interurban arrived, claim now that their business has been ruined by it.

As we have stated, this is a most serious matter and it should be given the serious consideration of every resident in Tecumseh. Do not say, "The road is not going up my street what do I care how many freight cars they have on Chicago street," and do not say, "I'm not engaged in any retail business in the old town any how, it can't hurt me; put the road wherever they want it." The interest of one is the interest of all and we must not shrink the responsibilities of our citizenship.

Alfred James and C. A. Wright and Charles Heck are the committee who have this matter in charge and there are not three more conscientious men or better citizens in the town. They are loyal to Tecumseh and will do nothing which they do not think is for her best interests, when once they have determined what will best conserve those interests.

They have not yet determined and the HERALD does not think that they have had a fair opportunity to determine.

Before entering into a long time contract with a railroad company, other towns have expended some money in investigating the matter by personal contract with those communities which have had the longest experience. Would it not be wise in this instance to do the same thing? To not go into it blindly but have this committee visit and inspect towns and conditions which are as nearly similar to our town and our conditions as may be; and in order that the responsibility for the decision may be better divided, why should not a committee of business men, not members of the council, be asked to add their inspection and their judgment to aid in the final inspection?

Some of us want this road on certain streets; some of us wish it laid on other streets, and many of us "don't care." Some of us are prejudiced and some of us are not. Some of us are giving this subject earnest thought and some of us are letting others do the thinking for us. In the end, the majority should rule, but the Council should throw every safeguard around that majority and guide their decision so that it may not be regretted when once too late.

Whatever the street ultimately occupied by this or other electric lines, we should not commit the indiscretion, so common to American communities, of making an absolute gift of a valuable commercial privilege. We should drive the best possible, reasonable, bargain. A street which was created by the people, which is maintained by the people and which belongs to the people, when surrendered to the purposes of a private corporation should at least be maintained by that corporation in all reasonable ways.

The City of Hudson surrenders its main street, but not without compelling the transportation company to pave, not sixteen inches each side of the rails, but FIVE FEET, and with whatever substance the balance of the street may have for pavement. Neither does Hudson propose to be to the expense of lighting the tracks of this company, but it demands and secures from them, sufficient electric current to light fifteen arc lamps. This latter provision, alone if incorporated in our proposed franchise, would result in a direct saving to the tax payers of Tecumseh of not less than $900.00 per annum. Nor is this all. The merchants and the owners of residences, of necessity, are to the expense of sprinkling the streets on which they do business or on which they reside. The electric car, with its accompaniment of swirling dust, will not diminish this nuisance, and why should not the railroad company be compelled to allay it? A sprinkling car is compulsory in many places; why not in Tecumseh?

Again, if iron poles are desirable from Maumee street to Union street, why are they not desirable from corporation line to corporation line? Are the beauties of the village, or the rights of its inhabitants gauged by these boundaries?

Reasonable demands, such as these, must be made now or they will never be secured. Now is the time to act in these matters, but let us not act too hastily and repent at leisure and in sorrow. Let us rather formulate just and reasonable demands, coupled with just and reasonable restrictions, and then stand by those demands and restrictions, come what may.

The Union Meetings.

The interest in the union meetings is increasing daily. Much good work is being done. Mr. Rees presents the truth in a very forceful and attractive manner. Every christian man and woman in the town ought to show their colors and rally to the support of this movement. There is no time for delay. Now is the time. Union services will be held next Sunday as follows:

In the morning at the Presbyterian church, subject—"Profit and Loss."

Following the morning service there will be a union Sunday school service, when Mr. Rees will give an "Illustrated address."

At three p. m. there will be a mass meeting for men in the Methodist church. Subject—"Twentieth Century Sodom."

In the evening the service will be in the Presbyterian church. Subject—"Where will I spend eternity?"

The evening services next week will be for men only. The afternoon services for women only. Mr. Rees will preach on the following subjects:

Evenings, 7:00 o'clock, men only.
Monday—"In a Dungeon."
Tuesday—"Man's greatest problem."
Wednesday—"Lessons from the slums of Paris, London and New York."
Thursday—"Sold Out."
Friday—"The unanswered question."
Afternoon, 3:00 o'clock, women only.
Tuesday—"Twentieth Century Sodom revised."
Wednesday—"Lessons from the slums."
Thursday—"Some things that keep women from becoming christians."
Friday—"How shall we escape?"

The business men have all kindly and gladly decided to close their places of business at 7:00 o'clock, except Saturday, during these union services so that all may have an opportunity to attend. A cordial invitation is extended to everybody.

Escaped an awful Fate.

Mr. H. Haggins of Melbourne, Fla., writes, "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. The offer of a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, induced me to try it. Results were startling. I am now on the road to recovery and owe all to Dr. King's New Discovery. It surely saved my life." This great cure is guaranteed for all throat and lung diseases by C. A. Wright druggists. Price 50c & $1.00. Trial bottles free.

McKinley Club.

The third annual banquet of the Lenawee County McKinley club at Light Guard Armory, on Wednesday, Feb. 10, was a great success in every way. About 40 from Clinton and Tecumseh went over on the regular, a special train bringing them back.

A meeting was held in the afternoon at Hotel Gregg, where the annual election of officers took place.

President—Dr. J. H. Reynolds.
Secretary—Theodore M. Joslin.
Treasurer—Fred Kline.

A vice president was appointed for every ward and town in the county. C. A. Bidwell will act as such for Tecumseh.

The banquet hall was beautifully decorated with palms, and the picture of William McKinley was draped with American flags. The long tables presented a beautiful sight, they were decorated with choice cut flowers.

The serving of the banquet was in the hands of the ladies of the Baptist church. Following is the menu:

Sugar cured ham, boiled tongue, escalloped oysters, cold slaw, pickles, hot French rolls, olives, escalloped potatoes, Boston brown bread, orange jelly, assorted cake, vanilla ice cream, bananas, apples, coffee and cigars.

At 6 o'clock the banqueters marched from the Hotel Gregg to the Armory Hall where covers were laid for 550 and every chair was taken. Rev. McMillan gave the invocation and following this came the serving.

T. M. Joslin was toastmaster and he was extremely jolly. Those at the speakers table with him were Hon. G. Diekema, Hon. Chas. E. Townsend, Hon. J. T. McCleary, Dr. J. H. Reynolds, Hon. Chas. C. Simmons, D. B. Morgan, C. E. Weaver, Hon. Edward Hamilton, Homer Warren, Rev. E. M. McMillan, Hon. Geo. Horton, Hon. Alvah Stone, and Judge H. L. Larwill. Beside the speeches and toasts there was much singing and music by the orchestra.

The banquet was a decided success in every way and it was at a late hour when the banqueters returned home.

The February Everybody's has another first-class "scoop"—nothing less than a statement of what the democratic party now stands for, by the new leader of the democracy in the House—Congressman John Sharp Williams. There could be no more valuable contribution to the approaching presidential controversy than this definite avowal of principles by the distinguished leader whose clever work in Congress has attracted so much attention. Another competent feature is Emory R. Johnson's explanation of "What the Panama Canal will do for the Country." The author is a member of the Isthmian Canal Commission who devoted his attention to collecting the statistics which should demonstrate the economical value of the great waterway, and he is the chief expert in America on his subject. If excellence in magazine-making consists in combining authority with entertainment, this February Everybody's should find even greater favor than its predecessors.

An editor, who was courting a woman of uncertain age, but positive bank account, was cut out by a gentleman from a neighboring town, who married her and took her home. Whereupon the editor sought a mean revenge by heading an account of her wedding, "Another Old Resident Gone."

THE GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE.

C. A. Wright will return money if Hyomei fails. No stomach dosing.

Hyomei has made so many cures of the most chronic and deep seated cases of catarrh, that C. A. Wright considers it a specific in this disease.

He extends an invitation to all catarrh sufferers to call at his store and purchase a Hyomei outfit with the distinct understanding that it will be absolutely free unless it effects a cure.

The chief reason for the unusual success of Hyomei in the treatment of catarrhal troubles and other diseases of the air passages, is the fact that it cures by a new principle, impregnating the air you breathe with healing and germ-killing balsams. On this account it reaches the seat of the disease in a way impossible to pills, drugs or other stomach dosing.

Many of C. A. Wright's customers who have suffered with catarrh since childhood have been cured completely by this scientific remedy.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1, and consists of an inhaler that can be carried in the purse or pocket, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei, Extra bottles can be obtained for 50c, making it a most economical remedy for the cure of catarrh.

Do not suffer longer with catarrhal disorders, but get a Hyomei outfit from C. A. Wright, under his guarantee to return the money if it fails. You run no risk whatever. If it cures, the treatment is not expensive, while if it fails, C. A. Wright will refund your money and it costs you absolutely nothing.

A HELPING HAND.

Is Gladly Extended by a Tecumseh Citizen.

There are many enthusiastic citizens in Tecumseh prepared to tell their experience of the public good Testimony from such a source is the best of evidence, and will prove a "helping hand" to scores of readers. Read the following statement:

Mrs. J. H. Welch, who resides in the south western section of Tecumseh, says: "I wish to express my gratitude for the benefit derived from the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. My back troubled me for a long time with a constant dull aching pain across my loins and when stooping or exerting myself it became very sharp. If I took cold it always settled in my kidneys and in the morning I was so lame and stiff that I could hardly attend to my work. I used several simple household remedies, but they did not bring rleief. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills recommended and spoken of so highly I concluded to test their merits and got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store. They took right hold of the cause and in a short time the pain in my back was a thing of the past. I can now straighten after bending or stooping without any inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful remedy."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

A strong, healthy, active constitution depends largely on the condition of the liver. Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

ICE IN YOUR RIVERS

Ice Congests and Stops Commerce—So Uric Acid Makes Rheumatic Pains.

Imagine how your bones would feel if they were bumped and buffeted by a river of floating ice. If you have Rheumatism you know the twinges and spasms of pain in your body.

Uric acid is the cause of it—it floats in your blood like ice in a river, clogging and poisoning your entire system. You cannot be freed from Rheumatism until you dispel the Uric acid. Athlophoros will dissolve it, and you will note immediate lessening of pain.

Your entire system will feel better, and if you have had kidney trouble or any organic difficulty you will note a marked improvement at once—one bottle will prove if it is helping you, and you will find the dollar to be your best investment if Athlophoros works on you as it does on others. If your druggist doesn't keep it send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. If your case is peculiar, write us about it.

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased. Mr. D. Kauble, of Nevada, O., says: I had stomach trouble and was in a bad state as I had heart trouble with it. I took Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for about four months and it cured me.

NEW WAR PRINCIPLES

Element of Destruction Is Ceasing to Be.

DETROIT PREACHER OPTIMISTIC

"Idea That Right Must Be Behind Might if Real Advancement Is to Be Made Is Steadily Gaining Ground"—Paid Tribute to U. S. Diplomacy.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—In an optimistic spirit, Rev. Samuel S. Marquis of St. Joseph's Memorial Episcopal church, in his sermon last night scanned the international horizon and noted a star, which presages the dawn of a brighter day for the nations of the earth. Despite the war cloud which has settled over Russia and Japan, Rev. Marquis is quite certain he can detect an undercurrent of righteousness beneath it all.

"Russia and Japan, while they have gone to war with each other, are both, nevertheless, anxious to appear before [illegible] justified in their actions," said the speaker, "and the idea that right must be behind might if real advancement is steadily to be made by either country is steadily gaining ground over the old brute force of the past. This latter element of destruction, which has been a characteristic of the past history in the world's conquest, is gradually losing its grip and a spirit, or a desire to be right, has began to assert itself in the relations between the various countries of the world."

Rev. Marquis paid an eloquent tribute to what he called "the American standard of telling the nations what we want and going after it because of the justice in our demands, and now recognized as such by the other powers of the earth.

It is because of this high standard of national diplomacy, in the opinion of Rev. Marquis, that the other nations are anxious to imitate the laudable example set by Uncle Sam in adjusting their differences with each other.

Where Is Julius?

Albion, Mich., Feb. 15.—Albion has another mystery. B. Julius, a prominent business man of this city, left for Chicago on a business trip over a week ago and has not been heard from. He was expected home Wednesday, and when he failed to appear Thursday his family, fearing foul play had befallen him, began a search. Every effort has been made to locate him, but no clue can be obtained of his whereabouts. He was last seen by his friends at Battle Creek, where he stopped on his way to Chicago. His family are anxiously awaiting the reports of the detectives at work in this city.

Coasters Struck Street Car.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 15.—The first serious coasting accident of the season here occurred Sunday afternoon. Three boys from 10 to 12 years old were coasting down hill when they were struck by a street car and all thrown into the air. Will Brush, aged 12, the only son of a widowed mother, was thrown so his hand fell on the rail and the car crushed off four fingers and part of the left hand.

Death Rate in State Increases.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 15.—There were 3,126 deaths reported to the secretary of state for the month of January, corresponding to a death rate of 14.7 per 1,000 population. The number was 184 larger than that registered for the preceding month, and is also greater than the number for January, 1903. One death from smallpox occurred in Kalkaska county.

Dunham's Victim Dead.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 15.—Apparently on the road to recovery, Mrs. Lillian Dunn, the victim of Frank R. Dunham, suffered a stroke of paralysis on Saturday and died an hour later. It will be recalled that Mrs. Dunn was shot in the back a week ago Thursday by Frank R. Dunham, who then killed himself. The three children will probably be sent to the Coldwater school.

Knocking the Alibi.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—The prosecution is still introducing evidence in the trial of Emil Waltz for the killing of little Alphonse Wilmes, to show that the defendant was in Detroit on the day of the murder. Waltz keeps pretty cool under the circumstances.

Polish Boy Shot.

Kept Marriage a Secret.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 13.—Because they feared parental opposition, Miss Pearl Dorothy Dunkley, daughter of Samuel J. Dunkley, and Harry B. Parker, connected with the editorial department of the Kalamazoo Telegraph, were secretly married last August and kept the secret faithfully for six months. Now the affair has become known and they are receiving many congratulations.

Beanpickers on Strike.

Laingsburg, Mich., Feb. 13.—The twenty-five beanpickers at Lockwood's elevator have struck. The elevator people wanted to pay them by the bushel instead of by the pound. The management would not agree to this, so the girls promptly went out.

A Mother's Recommendation.

BACK INTO BUSINESS

Majority of Victims of Baltimore Fire Have Resumed.

RISING FROM THE RUINS

Baltimore, Feb. 15.—Just one week ago Sunday the great fire which destroyed 80 blocks and 2,500 houses in the business center of this city broke out, and seven days thereafter it may be truthfully said that the city has shown a recuperative power which must be accounted extraordinary.

The energy used by Mayor McLane and the whole city government in bringing order out of chaos, and the spirit of resolution shown by the merchants whose stores are now shapeless piles of debris has justly excited admiration on all sides. That the business community is sternly bent upon the rapid rebuilding of the devastated district has been made plainly manifest by the emergency committee which the mayor has appointed as an advisory board to himself and which, though without legal power, will practically exercise a potent jurisdiction in regulating the height and character of buildings, the opening of streets, the creation of small parks on ground heretofore occupied by houses, and in other matters related to the building upon a thorough modern city.

Though only five week days have elapsed since the fire was checked, the great majority of merchants burned out have found locations and have resumed business.

Terminals Were O. K.

Baltimore's greatest good fortune was in the exemption of its terminal facilities from the destroying blast, a circumstance which has enabled the Chamber of Commerce to notify the world that it is ready for business at the old stand and which furnishes the guarantee that there will be no interruption to the vast exporting and importing business and the great coast line trade of this seaport.

The restoration of almost the whole of the city's street car line service is one of the agreeable surprises of the week, as the inhabitants feared that the period of walking would be extended indefinitely.

Several hundred people came here yesterday from Philadelphia, Washington and other nearby points to view the ruins of the fire, though the crowd of sightseers was not nearly so large [illegible] walls were pulled down with ropes and pulleys operated by gangs of men, and the fire area was strictly one of danger during the entire day. The policing of the district was performed almost entirely by state infantry and cavalry.

ANOTHER SINKING SPELL

Left Senator Hanna Noticeably Weaker—Hope Still Entertained.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Sunday Senator Hanna again experienced one of those sinking spells, and were it not for his indomitable will power he no doubt would have passed away.—As it was, he was left notably weaker, and the feeling is that he can last but a short time, though so long as there is life there is hope.

The last reports from the sick room just previous to sending this dispatch, early this morning, stated that the distinguished patient was resting quietly and that there was absolutely no change.

Union Leaders Assaulted.

Trinidad, Col., Feb. 15.—William Fairly and James Moony, members of the national board of the United Mineworkers of America, from Alabama and Missouri respectively, were waylaid Sunday on the road between Majestic and Bowen, dragged from their buggy and beaten by eight men with stones and revolvers and left lying in the road. After a while they were able to get into their buggy and drive to Bowen. Subsequently they were brought to Trinidad. Mooney [illegible] seriously injured and had to be taken to a hospital. No arrests have yet been made. This is the first time since the coal mine strike was inaugurated, on Nov. 9, that any of the officials of the United Mineworkers have been assaulted. It is reported that the men were attacked by guards at the coal mines.

Car Ran Away; Two Killed.

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 15.—Two persons were killed and about 75 injured, 25 of whom were seriously hurt, in a trolley car accident in Frostburg Sunday. The car ran away on a steep grade on Grant street, and upon reaching a sharp curve jumped the track and crashed into a telegraph pole. The car was smashed to splinters and scarcely one of the eighty passengers escaped injury of some sort. The dead. John Cough of Midland; J. J. Ross Lonaconing.

Ran Upon Jagged Reef.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 15.—The Canadian Pacific steamer Tees was hauled off Trial island rocks at high tide Sunday and taken to Esquimault marine ways for repairs. She escaped with marvelously slight damage considering the circumstances, the vessel having run upon a jagged reef almost at full speed.

Fire Drill For Schools.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 15.—Superintendent J. A. Stewart has instituted a school of instruction for pupils attending the public school so that in case of fire there will be no stampede. In one test 500 children were taken from a building in just three minutes.

Cold Up North.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 15.—The wind is blowing a gale from the northwest and the mercury registers 2 degrees below zero. Snow is drifting badly and trains are expected to be blocked tonight.

HELGE NELSON IN JAIL

Religious Fanatic and Followers Reached Battle Creek.

SAYS WORLD WILL SOON END

Predicts Coming of Christ in Two Years—He Will Be Examined as to His Sanity—Adventists Were Much Alarmed.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 13.—There was great excitement all through the Adventist section of this city when it became known that Helge P. Nelson and his followers, who have been publishing circulars in which they declared it was their intention to destroy some big building in this city, presumably the Sanitarium, with dynamite, had arrived in the city.

A grocer in the west end telephoned the police the news. Police were sent to all parts of the city to round up the gang and bring them to headquarters. Nelson, the [illegible], was found with G. G. Lungburg, a high official in the ranks of the fanatic, and protested vigorously against arrest. He and others refused to go to the station, and commenced praying in the streets until they were toted off in the wagon.

Chief Farrington found F. O. Hudlund, "vice king" of the sect, in the Grand Trunk depot with his wife. She is the "dreamer" who said she had a vision, in which the Lord called upon the sect to come to Battle Creek and destroy one of the big buildings with dynamite. When the officer attempted to arrest them they set up an outcry which attracted a great throng of people. On the way to the station they kept up the cry: "Praise the Lord!"

Nelson was arrested on the charge of jumping his bond for a former offense. His followers were taken to the lockup on the charge of disorderly and resisting arrest. The party besides Nelson consists of F. O. Hedlund and wife and H. E. Lundberg.

Two big satchels were carried by each of the party, full of clothing and tracts, the latter being for general distribution for the purpose of securing converts and knocking Adventists. Nelson is firm in the belief that the managers of the Battle Creek Sanitarium are evil angels in disguise.

When asked regarding Mrs. White, the prophetess of the denomination, he said there is still hope for her, as she is a woman of more than ordinary intelligence. One of the statements Nelson says he is called by the Lord to make is that Christ will appear upon the earth the second time just two and a half years from today. Then Nelson and his followers will be allowed to live a thousand years to gather the elect from the four corners of the earth. At the end of this period all the faithful will be taken to heaven and the earth burned up with heavenly fire.

It is thought that Nelson will be taken before Judge Lane at Marshall to be examined as to his sanity. If adjudged insane he will be taken to Kalamazoo asylum and his followers treated in the same way if they persist in disturbing the peace of the city with their efforts to break up the Adventist ranks.

Favor Primary Reform.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 13.—A discussion fertile in new ideas on civil government and reassertive of the doctrines of municipal home rule civil service reform was carried out at Friday's session of the League of Michigan Municipalities and the Michigan Political Science association. An innovation was made by the league in having the committee on resolutions bring in a report advocating primary election reform, municipal ownership and the 30-day limit on the passage of franchise-bearing ordinances in city councils.

Struck His Son in Court.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 13.—Joseph Stachowicz, whose son was in police court Friday charged with stealing lead pipe, walked behind the railing and struck the lad a powerful blow in the face with his first. Justice Kelley witnessed the outrage, but allowed the affair to pass without uttering a word of protest. The court officer interfered and the irate father was ejected.

"J" Hop a Success.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 13.—Five hundred merry dancers and superb decorations have contributed to make this year's big junior hop, which began at 9:30 o'clock last night, the most successful affair in the history of the famous function. The merry-making continued until 3 a. m., the board of regents having decreed that the dancing shall stop this year at that hour.

Drank Chloroform.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 13.—Earl Harrison, aged 22, attempted suicide by drinking two ounces of chloroform. He has been out of work for some time and despondent in consequence. Physicians were called as soon as his condition was discovered, and later he was pronounced out of danger.

Died of Her Injuries.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 13.—Vera Smith, the 12-year-old girl who was one of the victims of the coasting accident in this city a few evenings since, is dead as the result of her injuries. She sustained a broken leg and arm and was injured internally.

Died of Apoplexy.

Manchester, Mich., Feb. 15.—Miss Bertha Hegge, daughter of Mrs. Jacob Lutz, is dead of apoplexy. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning, with burial at Freedom, Mich.

FIGHTING ON LAND

Reported Japanese Have Met Serious Defeats.

MEN KILLED BY COSSACKS

Over Four Hundred Cut Down—Japs Whipped at Pigeon Bay—Railroads Behind Port Arthur Reported Blown Up.

London, Feb. 15.—The Daily Mail's Port Arthur correspondent, under date of Feb. 12, says:

"Official advices state that the Japanese landed 600 soldiers near Talien Wen with disastrous results, 410 being sabred by Cossacks. The remainder escaped to their ships. It is further stated that the Japanese landed at Dove bay, where thirty of them were killed and the remainder retreated."

The Daily Mail's New Chwang correspondent, under date of Feb. 11, cables: "According to official Port Arthur telegrams, the Japanese landed a force yesterday at Pigeon bay, West Port Arthur. They were then attacked by troops and by the batteries and were defeated with heavy loss."

London, Feb. 15.—The correspondent of the Daily Express at Pekin, in a cablegram dated Feb. 12, reports that Viceroy Alexieff is practically isolated, direct communication between Port Arthur and Vladivostock being suspended. He adds that the railroad behind Port Arthur has been blown up and that 6,000 Japanese troops have landed near Dalny.

The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent, under date of Feb. 12, says that the Japanese warship Amaki has captured the German steamer Yokohama, which had a cargo, including dynamite, for Port Arthur.

The Nagasaki correspondent of the Daily Telegraph expresses the conviction that Russia is quite unable to hold the Lia Tung peninsula and that Port Arthur is bound to fall by the efflux of time, even without an assault.

The Tokio correspondent of the Times, cabling under date of Feb. 12, says: "It is said that the Japanese squadron has sealed Port Arthur."

Chefoo, Feb. 15.—It is stated that eleven Russian ships were damaged in the recent engagement at Port Arthur. The whole fleet has moved into the inner harbor. Torpedo boats remain outside on scouting duty.

Five extra big guns have been mounted on the forts and they are firing at every object suspected of being part of the enemy's fleet.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Japan will appeal to the United States to prevail on the Russian goverament to release the 100 Japanese subjects reported detained at Port Arthur. Mr. Takahira, the Japanese minister, it is expected will present the appeal to Secretary Hay today. In a cablegram received from Tokio the minister was informed that according to news brought to Cheefoo by a British steamer from Port Arthur, 100 Japanese refugees had been taken from the steamer by the Russian authorities just before the vessel sailed, in spite of the protest of the Japanese.

McCormick to Inquire.

Having agreed to look out for Japanese citizens in Russian territory during the war, this government will instruct Mr. McCormick, the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, to inquire of the Russian government on the subject as to the Japanese in question. The opinion here is to the effect that the detention of these Japanese at Port Arthur is a strategical necessity to prevent the Japanese gaining information as to fortifications, troops, etc. An official said:

"During the siege of Paris, in the Franco-Prussian war, Representative Hitt, who was then in charge of the American legation there, looked after the large number of Germans who were detained at Paris by the French government."

Although Russia's answer to Secretary Hay's note asking her to respect the neutrality of China and localize hostilities as much as possible, has not yet been received, the state department knows indirectly from London and Paris that Russia will reply favorably. It then will remain for the powers to fix the scope of their note and to draft a more definite proposition for acceptance by the two combatants.

Satisfaction is expressed in administration circles that Great Britain, as well as Russia, has decided to waive objection to the note.

It is expected that all the formal answers to the Secretary's note will reach here early this week.

SIX SHIPS CAPTURED.

Japs Capture Cargoes of Coal in Norwegian Ships.

Nagasaki, Feb. 15.—Six Norwegian steamers chartered by a Russian naval contractor have been captured. The vessels are the Lena, Activ, Seatis, Seirstadt, Argo and Hermis. They carried coal cargoes. The Hermis arrived here today under convoy of a cruiser. It is rumored that 1,800 Japanese soldiers have been killed, presumably by the sinking of a transport. Disturbances are reported proceeding in Seoul.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. CASE 113,

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER XI.

The truth suddenly burst upon Prosper.

"Yes, oh, yes, I remember now!" he cried.

"Then you can easily understand the rest. One of the scoundrels went to Mme. Fauvel and compelled her to give up her husband's key. At a venture he placed the movable buttons on the name of Gipsy and stole the 350,000 francs. And Mme. Fauvel must have yielded to the most terrible threats. The day after the robbery the poor woman was near dying, and it was she who, at the risk of being involved, sent you the 10,000 francs."

"But which was the thief, Raoul or Clameran? What enables them to thus tyrannize over Mme. Fauvel? And how does Madeleine come to be mixed up in the affair?"

"These questions, my dear Prosper, I cannot yet answer, therefore I am not yet ready to report on the case. I only ask you to wait ten days, and if I cannot in that time discover the solution of the mystery I will return and go with you to tell M. Patrigent all that we know."

"Are you going away?"

"In an hour I shall be on the road to [illegible]. It was from [illegible]borhood that Clameran came as well as Mme. Fauvel, who was a Mlle. de la Verberie."

"Yes; I knew their families."

"I must go there to study them. Neither Raoul nor Clameran can escape police surveillance during my absence. But you, Prosper, must be prudent. Promise me to remain a prisoner here during my trip."

All that M. Verduret asked Prosper willingly promised.

And he had the good sense to follow the recommendations of his mentor. During M. Verduret's absence he remained shut up in the Archangel, not even appearing at the windows.

On the ninth day of his voluntary seclusion Prosper began to feel restless and at 10 o'clock at night set forth to take a walk. He had a headache and thought the air would do him good.

Mme. Alexandre, who seemed to have some knowledge of M. Verduret's affairs, begged Prosper to remain at home.

"What can I risk by taking a walk at this time in a quiet part of the city?" he asked. "I can certainly stroll as far as the botanical gardens without meeting any one."

Unfortunately he did not strictly follow this programme, for, having reached the Orleans railway station, he went into a cafe near by and called for a glass of beer.

He picked up a daily paper, The Sun, and under the head of "Fashionable Gossip," signed Jacques Durand, read the following:

"It is announced that the niece of one of our most prominent bankers, M. Andre Fauvel, will be shortly married to M. le Marquis Louis de Clameran."

This news, coming upon him so unexpectedly, proved to Prosper the justness of M. Verduret's calculations. Alas! Why did not this certainty inspire him with absolute faith? Why did it not give him courage to wait, to do nothing? Frenzied by distress of mind, he already saw Madeleine indissolubly united to this villain and, thinking that M. Verduret would perhaps arrive too late to prevent it, determined at all risks to throw an obstacle in the way of the marriage. He called for pen and paper, and, forgetting that no situation can excuse the mean cowardice of an anonymous letter, disguising his hand, he wrote to M. Fauvel:

> Dear Sir—You consigned your cashier to prison. You did well, since you were convinced of his dishonesty and faithlessness. But even if he stole 350,000 francs from your safe, does it follow that he also stole Mme. Fauvel's diamonds and pawned them at the Mont-de-Piete, where they now are? Warned as you are, in your place, I would not be the subject of public scandal. I would watch my wife and would be distrustful of handsome cousins. Moreover, I would before signing the marriage contract of Mlle. Madeleine, request the prefecture of police to give me some information concerning the noble Marquis de Clameran.
> A FRIEND.

Prosper hastened off to post his letter. Fearing that it would not reach M. Fauvel in time, he walked up to Cardinal Lemoine street and put it in the main postoffice, so as to be certain of its speedy delivery.

Until then he had not doubted the propriety of his action. But now he had dropped the letter, when he heard it fall into the box a thousand scruples came to him. Was it not wrong to act thus hurriedly? Would not this letter interfere with M. Verduret's plans? Upon reaching the hotel his doubts were changed into bitter regrets. Joseph Dubois was waiting for him. He had received a dispatch from his patron saying that his business was finished and that he would return the next evening at 9 o'clock by the Lyons route. Prosper was in despair. He would have given the world to recover the anonymous letter. And he had cause for regret.

At that very hour M. Verduret was taking the train at Tarascon, meditating upon the most advantageous plan to be adopted in pursuance of his discoveries, for he had discovered everything. Adding to what he already knew the story of an old nurse of Mlle. de la Verberie, the affidavit of an old servant who had always lived in the Clameran family and the depositions of the Vesinet husband and wife, who attended M. Lagors at his country house—depositions sent him by Dubois (Fanferlot)—with a good deal of information obtained from the prefecture of police, he had worked up a complete case. As he had predicted, he had been compelled to search into the distant past for the causes of the crime of which Prosper had been the victim.

CHAPTER XII.

THE following is the statement as he wrote it out for the benefit of the judge of instruction, knowing that it would doubtless secure an indictment against the accused:

"Two leagues from Tarascon, on the left bank of the Rhone, stood the Chateau of Clameran. Here lived in 1841 the old marquis and his two sons, Gaston and Louis. A near neighbor was the Countess de la Verberie, with one daughter, Valentine, a lovely girl of eighteen. M. de Clameran detested the countess, and Mme. de la Verberie execrated the marquis. It was said that under the reign of Henry IV. a La Verberie had betrayed the affection of a fair daughter of the Clamerans. This misdeed led to a duel, which in turn led to bitter hatred between the two houses.

"Gaston de Clameran met Valentine de la Verberie at an evening entertainment, and the two fell desperately in love. Gaston would often plunge into the Rhone at Clameran and rise out of the water at Verberie, where he would have a secret meeting with Valentine. In order to facilitate these meetings Gaston would place a light in his window immediately before starting which could be seen by Valentine at her home. The two lovers, despairing of permission to marry, kept up a secret intimacy, which led to Valentine's becoming a wife without the sanction of the church or the law.

"One evening Gaston went into a cafe for a cup of coffee. Later, while playing billiards, hearing Valentine's name coupled with his own to her dishonor, he demanded a retraction, became embroiled and killed two men. He fled to the chateau, where he confessed to his father his intimacy with Valentine, declaring that he wished to marry her. His father urged him to fly from the consequences of the murders he had committed and, having no money to give him, supplied him with the family jewels. Meanwhile the police were coming to arrest him, and it was arranged that the gates should be suddenly opened, a servant should flee in one direction, Louis in another and thus misleading the police give Gaston an opportunity to escape. Gaston would have got away had not Louis purposely tripped and fallen. The police, thus discovering the ruse, pushed on after Gaston, who, to save himself, jumped into the Rhone. The current was at the time so swollen that his pursuers gave him up as drowned.

"Escaping almost certain death, Gaston, who before leaving the chateau had placed the signal for Valentine in his window, reached La Verberie and had an interview with his beloved. She informed him that she would soon become a mother. Before parting he left with her the jewels given him by his father, then fled the country, going to South America. That night the old marquis died. Louis, assuming that his elder brother had been drowned, took the title and the estate. He left Clameran immediately and began a life full of ignominy.

"Valentine confessed her condition to her mother, who took her to England, where she provided for her daughter's secret accouchement under the care of a physician and a maid, Mihonne. A son was born, which the countess immediately sent away to be adopted by a farmer. Subsequently Mme. de la Verberie pursuaded her daughter to attempt to forget the past, to consider it buried in oblivion and to marry. A young engineer, M. Andre Fauvel, spent some time at Beaucaire, where they lived, and fell in love with Valentine, who, urged by her mother, accepted his attentions and finally married him. M. Fauvel afterward became the famous Paris banker. The countess died in 1859.

"Louis de Clameran, after an absence from home of eighteen years, returned, and from Mihonne, the maid who had been with Valentine at the time of her confinement, learned that his brother had not been drowned, that Valentine had had a son by Gaston and that she had subsequently married M. Fauvel. Impoverished by his excesses and unable to find a living honestly, Louis determined to use this information for the purpose of extorting money from Mme. Fauvel. Going to Paris, he called upon her and gave her to understand that he knew of her past. In order to better serve his purpose he told her that her son by Gaston was living, that he had been brought up in London, that his father had been there and found him, that Gaston had died in poverty and had asked him (Louis) to apply to her for means for the maintenance of their son Raoul. Mme. Fauvel at once gave Louis the jewels Gaston had left with her at their last interview to be used for Raoul. Louis soon introduced a young man to her who personated her son and received from her large sums, which the two villains divided. All this Mme. Fauvel kept a secret from her husband. Finally Clameran, in order to facilitate his plans, demanded that she receive Raoul into her house. Mme. Fauvel had a cousin living at St. Remy of the name of Lagors, and Clameran, partly by persuasion, partly by intimidation, induced Mme. Fauvel to announce her supposed son as her nephew, Raoul de Lagors. This was done, and Raoul, having constant access to Mme. Fauvel, soon extorted a small fortune, which he squandered.

"Louis de Clameran now conceived the idea of marrying Madeleine, with whom he had fallen violently in love. To force her to break with Prosper he used the power he possessed over Mme. Fauvel. Madeleine discovered her aunt's situation and in order to avert a catastrophe consented to give up Prosper, whom she loved, and marry Clameran, whom she detested. Breaking her engagement with Prosper, she secured his promise to take upon himself the sole responsibility of the rupture.

"Meanwhile Gaston had made a fortune in South America and returned to France. To still the memory of his youthful misfortunes he resolved to engage in business and bought an iron mill at Oloron. Louis, hearing of his arrival, went to Oloron and greeted him with every pretense of affection. Louis took up his quarters with his brother, who soon sickened and died under very suspicious circumstances, leaving his fortune to Louis.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

(Signed) ALFRED JAMES,
C. A. WRIGHT,
C. H. HECK,
Committee.

The clerk read the following petition which was placed on file:

AN ORDINANCE GRANTING TO S. A. FOSTER, TRUSTEE, HIS ASSOCIATES, SUCCESSORS AND ASSIGNS, PERMISSION AND AUTHORITY TO CONSTRUCT AND MAINTAIN, OWN AND OPERATE, A TRAIN OR STREET RAILWAY IN THE VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH.

The Village of Tecumseh ordains:

Sec. 1. That S. A. Foster, trustee, his associates, successors and assigns, be and are hereby granted consent, permission, power and authority to construct, maintain and operate a street railway for the period of thirty years; the motive power of which shall be compressed air, direct current system of electricity, multiphase or alternating system of electricity, storage batteries, or other modern power except steam, or the third rail system, at the option of said grantee, with from time to time, the necessary switches, turnouts, poles, feeders, wires and other wires and appliances to operate the same through the village of Tecumseh, and toward, or to Jackson, upon and along the following streets in the village of Tecumseh, namely:

Commencing in Chicago street at the east corporation line of the village of Tecumseh, thence westerly along Chicago street to the west line of said village. No turnouts, switches or Ys shall be put in between Maumee and Union streets, and there shall be but one track laid between Maumee and Union streets.

Sec. 2. The actual construction shall begin as soon as franchises and rights of way are secured from Petersburg to Jackson, and the entire road between Petersburg and Jackson shall be completed within two years from the passage of this ordinance.

Sec. 3. The said street railway shall be constructed and consist of a standard guage track with, from time to time, all necessary switches and turnouts, and together with its cars, appliances and equipments, shall be constructed and maintained in the most approved modern manner, and in all respects, of first class material, and so as to interfere and interrupt as little as possible the ordinary traffic along said street. And such construction shall be done under the supervision of the street commissioner of said village.

Sec. 4. Passengers shall be carried from any point in said village along the line of said road, at the maximum charge of one and one-half cents per mile, taking a full cent where the charge ends in a fraction of a cent: provided no charge shall be less than five cents.

Sec. 5. The top of rails of said railway, and the space between the rails, shall be laid and kept flush with street grade and said trustee or his assigns shall at all times keep the space between the rails and for sixteen inches on outside of each rail along said street in as good condition as the remainder of said street is kept, free from ruts and water holes, using crushed stone of sufficient thickness, with a light gravel dressing, between the rails and for sixteen inches from each, outside of track.

In case said portion of said street can not or is not kept in such condition, then the said trustee or his assigns shall pave the space above described, between the west line of Union street and the east line of Oneida street, with paving brick, when required by the village council.

Said trustee and his assigns shall also construct plank crossings at the intersections of all streets east of Oneida street, and all streets west of Union streets, said crossings to be made of three inch plank, and to extend for a distance of thirty-two feet at each crossing.

The tracks of said railway shall at all times be made to conform with the street grade thereof.

Whenever the village of Tecumseh shall order any of the streets over which this franchise is granted, to be paved, repaved, or otherwise improved, or any part or parts thereof, wherein the tracks of said railway are laid, it shall be the duty of said grantees, their associates, successors and assigns, and they shall at their own cost and expense, grade, pave or otherwise improve all of the parts of the said streets which lie between the outer rails of their said tracks and for sixteen inches on outside of each rail, and all of the side tracks, turnouts, or switches, with like kind of material other than street asphalt, at the same time and in the same manner in which the other portions of said street or streets shall be paved, repaved or otherwise improved, and if the said railway shall be constructed in any street already paved, then said grantees shall pay to the village of Tecumseh, the cost of material which the said grantees would be required to furnish to pave any such street.

Sec. 6. The tracks of the said railway shall be laid in the streets at the points and on the lines designated by the common council, and in the event that the said common council, shall for any reason fail to make such designation within fifteen days after receiving notice from the said grantees, so to do, then the same shall be laid in and along the center of said street.

Sec. 7. The said grantees, their heirs, successors and assigns or the corporation operating said railway under this franchise shall after completing the construction of said railway, restore the streets and all portions thereof occupied by said railway and maintain the same in as good condition as the same were at the time such railway construction shall commence, and the said street railway shall be in all things constructed and operated in such a manner as to interfere as little as may be with public travel and traffic in and along the streets of the village of Tecumseh.

After said railway shall be completed and in use, the company owning and operating the same, shall remove all snow drifts which may be made along the line of said tracks, and which cannot be spread upon the street without interfering with public travel.

Sec. 8. That in case any other electric railway coming into the village of Tecumseh shall want to use the tracks of said grantee along the streets herein named, for the operation of any other electric railroad, said village shall have the right to grant said railway so entering the village, the right to use such tracks upon the payment of current and trackage to the said granteee or his assigns. In case such companies cannot agree upon the rates of charges for the use of tracks and current, then in that case said terms or prices shall be fixed by three arbitrators, one of which shall be chosen by each of such companies and the third by the common council of the village of Tecumseh. Provided, however, said grantees shall not have the power to grant the use of said tracks through said village, to be used in common with said grantee, to any other person or company, except with the permission of the common council of this village first thereto obtained; and provided further, that common council of the village of Tecumseh hereby reserves the right to grant the use of said street for street railway purposes to any other person or company who may ask for and construct the same before the grantee herein named shall construct the road herein contemplated; but in such event the grantee herein named shall be protected by a clause in such other franchise, if granted as aforesaid, to the same effect as the first two clauses of this section.

Sec. 9. The street commissioner and the common council of said village shall be compensated by said trustee, his associates, successors and assigns, for all supervision and work required of them by this franchise a reasonable compensation for their services.

Sec. 10. The said grantee, his associates, successors and assigns shall construct their own bridges and culverts over all public drains, rivers or water-courses, of a width for water flowage to be approved by the street commissioner of said village.

Sec. 11. All poles within the village limits shall be located at points located by the street commissioner under the the authority of the common council, but no poles shall be set in front of alleys or private driveways. Said poles shall be of iron, between Oneida street and Union street in said village of Tecumseh.

Sec. 12. Said trustee or his assigns shall arrange for, and pay the expense of removing any telephone or electric light poles which may be necessary to be moved for the convenience of said railway.

Sec. 13. There shall be no obstruction to streets by cars standing on tracks and no cars shall be allowed to stand on tracks when not in use. The rate of speed of cars between the west line of Union street and the east line of Maumee street shall not exceed eight miles per hour.

Sec. 14. Grade crossings only shall be allowed at steam railway crossings on said street with proper safety devices.

Sec. 15. The said trustee or his assigns, shall provide a ticket office and a waiting room for the accommodation of passengers, the same to be located as near the center of the town as is convenient for the railway company to secure a location. If the said company want to provide for a fixed station for the receipt and storage of baggage, freight and express, said station shall not be located between Oneida street and Maiden Lane.

Sec. 16.

The said grantee and his assigns shall leave the streets over which said road is constructed in as good condition after such construction as the same was in prior to the commencement of, said work of construction. And the said grantee and his assigns shall be liable for all damages which the village of Tecumseh may sustain by reason of any negligence on the part of said grantee and his assigns, their agents, contractors, sub-contractors in the construction of said railroad and shall hold the said village harmless therein, including all costs and expenses incurred in defending any suit occasioned thereby, or which may arise out of or based upon alleged negligence.

The said grantee or his assigns shall, before doing any work in said streets other than surveying, file a bond in the penal sum of five thousand dollars with sureties to be approved by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh, to hold the said village harmless as aforesaid and to restore the streets after construction in the manner herein provided.

Sec. 17. Whenever any gas, water or sewer pipes, or conduits have been laid in any of the lanes, streets, avenues or highways of said village, occupied by said railway, said railway must be maintained subject to the rights of the village and the respective companies owning the same, to take up, repair or remove or renew such gas, water or sewer pipes or conduits without being liable to said grantee, his successors or assigns, for any damages whatever on account thereof. Provided, however, that such taking up, repairing, removing or renewing such pipes or sewers shall be done at the expense of the owner or owners thereof, and in such a manner as not necessarily to damage or injure said railway, or interfere unnecessarily with the operation thereof.

Sec. 18. Said common council reserves to itself the right to lay down, repair or renew, or permit the same to be done in said street, gas pipes, water pipes, sewers and conduits, whenever public convenience may require, provided that in every case where it becomes necessary to excavate lengthwise under or along the tracks of said railway, the persons so doing, shall do so with the least possible delay and shall replace the streets and pavements in as good condition as before, as near as possible.

Sec. 19. The said grantees, their heirs, successors and assigns shall within ten days of the passage of this ordinance, file with the village clerk, a written acceptance of the same and of the terms and conditions thereof, and on failure to do so, this ordinance shall be no longer in force.

Sec. 20. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after the expiration of ten days from the legal publication thereof and after filing with the village clerk the written acceptance of the same as above.

Sec. 21. All ordinances or parts of ordinances, inconsistant with the provisions of this ordinance are to the extent of such inconsistances hereby repealed.

Passed by the common council of the village of Tecumseh Michigan, February 15th A. D. 1904.

"Do it Today."

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TODAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c;

"OH, MAMMA.
Something is Biting Me."

Mothers Read.

It is not itching piles that ails YOU or YOUR CHILD. It's the PIN or SEAT WORM that causes you or your child to have rectal trouble. Soon after retiring for the night the pin worm appears. It bites and stings and causes scratching and aching. The doctor and the man who has the dollar-a-box salve call it piles. Mothers know what it means when the child cries out; "Mamma, something is biting me." And sure enough, upon examining her child she finds the naughty white pin worm, sharp pointed at both ends, imbedded in the child's rectum. This worm causes more nervousness to young and old persons than any other disease, and the itching is not piles but pin worms. The only sure and harmless remedy for this is STEKETEE'S PIN WORM DESTROYER. Do not pay a dollar for a box of salve when 25 cents will cure you and your child. For sale by all druggists, or send 25c postage for 1 box, or 3 for 50c to GEO. G. STEKETEE, Grand Rapids, Mich., proprietor.

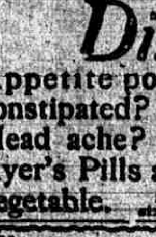
PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit.

The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children? Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.



Send for free sample.

The sale of the east room lately vacated by Stiefel's was completed this week by William Ferrier to Willis Love for $5250 cash down. The building fronts 18 feet and 4 inches on Maumee street, and extends 100 feet deep. The transfer includes both upper and lower stories, the upper story now being used by Drs. Waller and Ritter. The price paid is a high water mark for Angola real estate, being nearly $300 a front foot, including the building.

An Interesting Letter from

GEORGE L. GRAVES,

Of Milwaukee, Wis., who spent his

BOYHOOD DAYS

Milwaukee, Feb'y. 11, 1904.
Mr. Geo. N. Stacy,
Tecumseh, Mich.

FRIEND STACY:—I always look over your paper with much interest, as I still have a big place in my heart for the home of my childhood and youth, and am interested in every thing pertaining to it. I have no property interests in Tecumseh now so I am unprejudiced from that standpoint. I wish to commend and heartily endorse your views upon the proposed electric line upon Chicago St. It seems to me that the damage which would befall the residents and people doing business upon the street would far outweigh any benefit the village would receive from the road and that should the line be so built, in the near future Tecumseh would wish that she never had had the road.

The street is now a beautiful one and the pride of the village. An electric line would deface it and spoil its beauty and you have no other street that could take its place. In order to fulfill its purpose as a business street it must be free and open to the farmers and their teams. City horses, by familiarity, soon have a contempt for electric cars, and pass them by without notice but horses in the country, having no such familiarity, are liable to all sorts of misdemeanors, when a car is in sight and farmers would be obliged to tie "around the corner," or would think they must, which would amount to the same thing and they would practically be driven from the street.

The distances are so short any way in the village, that the local passenger traffic would amount to but little and while Chicago street might furnish a little more than perhaps any other, still the amount or difference would be too insignificant to consider.

If there was any need for the road being put upon Chicago street, if there were no other streets that could not accommodate the road as well, or better, it would be different, but, in my opinion, there is no excuse for yielding up Chicago street for the purpose and I sincerely hope that it will not be done.

With kind remembrances to your mother and sister.

Yours very truly
GEO. L. GRAVES.

I print the above simply to show the feeling of many old Tecumseh men about the electric road who feel as I do about Chicago street, Tecumseh. Geo. Graves was born and raised in Tecumseh the same as I have been, and has a feeling of sentiment that is hard to get rid of. We are both interested in the property of Tecumseh and can see no reason to give to an outside corporation our best and most beautiful street that it has taken years to build up and beautify.

"Hoity Toity"

The New Bradley announces for Friday, Feb. 19, Weber & Fields' greatest success "Hoity Toity," which comes with the prestige of "one solid year on Broadway!" "Hoity Toity" is to laugh. There is a plot to be sure, but you don't want to let that worry you, as it is frankly admitted that it is a mere thread on which to hang an unusually good assortment of hilarious comedy and tuneful music. The chorus is one of rare loveliness, and, what is more to the point—is distinctly a singing chorus.

The original scenery and light effects used in the New York production of "Hoity Toity" at Weber & Fields' cosy little Broadway theatre in New York, will be seen in this production; and no expense has been spared in making this, what the New York press unamiously conceded it to be—the greatest musical "hit" on Broadway in a decade.

Everything about "Hoity Toity" contains that which appeals to lovers of high class musical comedy. The book is by Edgar Smith; the music by the late John Stromberg, and the dances and movements by Julian Mitchell—a trio of names which speak volumes to those who are up-to-date in things theatrical. There is said to be an effulgent array of chorus girls and a glittering show of gorgeous costumes.

The large company, which numbers fifty people, includes Lillian Durham, Fanny Trumbull, Edith Warren, Jeanette Lewis, Albert Livingstone, LaPell Dixon, Irving Brooks, Harry West, E. F. Gallagher, J. A LETTER

Written to the Wit and Wisdom Club by

MRS. CHAS. A. SLAYTON

The following letter was written by Mrs. Chas. Slayton to the Wit and Wisdom club with permission to print it in the HERALD.

Rockledge, Feb. 8, 1904.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE WIT & WISDOM:

It is very difficult, with so many cares, to find time to write many letters besides the home letters, but you must not think we forget you, so I will tell you something of life in the sunny south: The land of pickaninnies, palm trees and oranges. Oranges everywhere, in the yards, in the streets for shade trees. I am sure we could have found no place where they grow so abundantly, for twelve miles down the river, all is orange groves, and they say the Indian river oranges are the sweetest and finest raised in Florida.

Our trip here was very pleasant. We had a fine train and enjoyed the view through the country, new to us, and very beautiful in Tenn., from the observation car. We stopped over, one train in Titusville, which is much more advertised in the guide book than Rockledge, but did not find any thing to attract there.

Rockledge is so called, because of the rock ledge that continues for miles up and down the Indian river. This ledge is formed of the coquina shell and of this shell they make the fine roads, which are like the roads of crushed stone north. We could not find a cottage here for house keeping, but have a nice large room on second floor of a three story cottage, get our own breakfast and supper, and our dinners near in a pleasant private boarding house. I have a man come in to clean the lamps and rugs and do the rough work, but he is only "po white trash" and I call him Charley.

We are only a square from Indian river, about as wide here as the Detroit and the card I enclose gives a good view of our street, we are only a few rods from the large tree, and there is a similar one in front of our house, towering above the roof every branch draped with the Florida moss. The first week we were here, it was fresh and cool, so we had to light the oil heater, night and morning, temperature from 58 degrees to 65 degrees, but now it is real summer, and mercury yesterday reached 90 degrees and we are in complete summer garb and feel like real southerners. I do not wonder now, that they do not feel like working. Even C. A. S. says he does not want to do any thing, so you may know there must be something enervating in the climate.

We walk two or three miles every day along the river road, orange trees loaded with the golden fruit all along the way and having met some of the people who own them, have had all the oranges we could eat. The trees are just budding and putting on the new growth. The blossoms that are now coming on taking till next fall to mature. They can leave the fruit on the tree till March and many do in order to get better prices.

It is all very interesting and delightful and we are enjoying our vacation greatly. We are in the same house with Miss Whitenack, indeed to her we are indebted for our pleasant room, for the cough and hoarseness she brought with her, from the frozen north, so frightened the lady who occupied the room, that she asked us if we would take it off her hands. She was afraid she would "take consumption." Since she left Gus is very nicely recovering.

I must draw this very long letter to a close, only wishing, we could step in and see you all, and that you could all enjoy the balmy air with us.

Sincerely Yours.
ALICE M. SLAYTON,
Rockledge, Fla.

Gospel Meetings.

The union services were very largely attended last Sunday. The spacious auditorium at the Presbyterian church was filled for the morning service. Mr. Rees preached a powerful sermon from the subject of "Profit and Loss." The union service of all the Sunday schools following the other service will not soon be forgotten by the hundreds present.

The large gathering of men in the Methodist church, in the afternoon was a sight never to be forgotten. Four-hundred men in a religious service in Tecumseh was indeed something unusual. Mr. Rees gave a very vivid description of the "Twentieth Century Sodom." There was a deep interest manifested by the men in the service and many resolved to live a better life.

Another large audience greeted the speaker at the evening service and a goodly number resolved to lead a christian life.

The meetings will continue through the week, afternoons for ladies and evenings for "men only." The services this week will be held in the Baptist church. The last meeting for "men only" will be held in the Presbyterian church next Sunday afternoon. Everybody invited to these services.

Prize fights in the "Blue Goose" saloon at Cement City are said to be a weekly event. Blood flows and so does "Red eye." The fighters come out from Jackson one evening in a week and a spar before an appreciative and enthusiastic audience.—Onsted News.

Before the holidays a friend in the west sent prosecuting attorney Joslin of Adrian, a duck and a goose. The goose was cooked for a Christmas dinner; the duck was hung out in the cold to rest till New Year's day, but a few days previous to the latter event a letter was sent to the doner, with thanks for the gift. A telegram was received in reply, to the effect that they would all be dead if they ate the duck, as it had been prepared by a taxedermist for a parlor ornament. The friends of the prosecutor are congratulating him on his narrow escape, well knowing that his appetite is so great that he rarely stops to taste before bolting the whole menu.—Hudson Post.

TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS.

C. A. Wright urges them to use Hyomei. Willing to sell it on approval.

A new and specially valuable use for Hyomei has been discovered, one that will be particularly welcomed by singers and public speakers.

The free use of Hyomei, breathed through the inhaler that comes with every outfit, carries healing balsams to the head and throat, and strengthens the voice. C. A. Wright has had several of his customers speak to him in regard to the good effects following the use of Hyomei for this special purpose, and will be glad to sell it on approval to any singer, minister, teacher, or public speaker.

He feels sure that the use of Hyomei for this purpose will make many new friends for the treatment. If it does not give satisfaction, the money paid will be returned promptly and without questions.

The complete Hyomei outfit, consisting of an inhaler that can be carried in the purse or pocket, a bottle of Hyomei and a medicine dropper, costs only one dollar.

Many remarkable cures of catarrh and other troubles of the air passages have been made by Hyomei, and C. A. Wright agrees to refund the money to anyone who does not find it a complete cure for any catarrhal trouble.

There is no dangerous stomach drugging with Hyomei; simply breathe it through the inhaler, and relief comes quickly.

Graceful Women
The scent of the violet or rose is as precious as the lovely flowers whose breath they are, and while the lives of flowers are brief and we can only enjoy them for a day, the beautiful woman gives the pleasure of her fragrance to us as a permanent blessing. The soft fragrance of a beautiful woman suggests purity, health and elegance; she is the refinement of civilization; an index always of good taste and an unerring badge of gentility.

Individuals are virtuous when they sacrifice their personal interest in the interest of all.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS.

Because It's for one thing only and Tecumseh is learning this.

They cure backache, every kidney ill. Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it. C. Patterson, the well known sexton residing in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "For over a year I had a soreness and pain in the small of the back at times quite severe, more especially if I did a hard day's work or took cold, for it always settled in my kidneys. The kidney secretions were also discolored and irregular and I had all symptoms of aggravated kidney complaint. I heard several people praising Doan's Kidney Pills so concluding to try them I got a box at C. A. Wright's drug store and commenced the treatment. I found it just suited my case for it helped me right from the start. It stopped the pain in my back and regulated and cleared up the kidney secretions. I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone having any difficulty with their kidneys."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

A man's virtue should not be measured by his particular efforts, but by his ordinary actions.

It's a mistake to imagine that itching piles can't be cured; a mistake to suffer a day longer than you can help. Doan's Ointment brings instant relief and permanent cure. At any drug store, 50 cents.

SACRIFICED HIS LIFE.

Aged Watchman Killed While Endeavoring to Save Others.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—Decapitated by the cruel wheels of a freight train, the remains of William Rochford, an aged watchman at Fort street and the Dequindre street crossing of the Grand Trunk railway tracks, were scattered for 100 feet along the tracks as the train swept past Saturday evening at 7:30.

About that time two trains were due to pass at that point, one going south and the other north. Something went wrong with the gates, the one on the west side refusing to work. The watchman saw two young men approaching the railway from the west, and fearing that they might bump into the oncoming trains made valiant efforts to warn them and, thereby sacrificed his own life.

He passed the east side track in safety, but when attempting to get by the other one, the freight train struck him. His body was crushed in a terrible manner, the head being severed from the trunk and the lower limbs being badly crushed by the wheels as they passed over him.

The remains were removed to the home of the deceased at 271 Champlain street east, where his wife and several grown up children live.

HUMANE AGENT COMPLAINS

Against Lake County Deputy Sheriff For Inhuman Neglect to Animals.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 15.—Complaint has been made by Humane Agent Randolph of this city against Under Sheriff William Gordon of Lake county, who is a candidate to succeed his chief as sheriff, charging him with cruelty to animals. The humane officer states that he found the worst conditions or inhuman neglect to animals ever brought to his notice on Gordon's farm in Chase township. He alleges also that Prosecutor Wilson of that county tried to evade him and that to insure prosecution he has written Judge McAlvay of Manistee, who has jurisdiction over Lake county. It is said that horses, lambs and calves were found dead from starvation and extreme exposure and others alive but starved and frozen.

Fell Into Boiling Potash.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 15.—Charles Sichter lies at Grace hospital swathed from head to foot in cotton bandages and suffering intensely from scalds received by falling into a caldron of boiling potash mixture. He is an employe in Charles H. Meier's potash works in New Baltimore and says that he cannot tell how he ever came to fall into the caldron. Though in a serious condition, his chief anxiety appears to be for his aged mother, who will be without support if he dies.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 13.—Charles Williams fell [illegible] a skip to the bottom of a shaft at the Phoenix mine, being instantly killed. James George, a woodsman, swallowed a large dose of horse medicine, which he took for a cold, and narrowly escaped death.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

It is better by a noble boldness to run the risk of being subject to half of the evils which we anticipate than to remain in cowardly listlessness for fear of what may happen.

REPUBLICANS BANQUETED.

Lincoln Day Well Observed In City of Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 13.—The annual Lincoln day banquet, under the auspices of the two Republican clubs of this city, eclipsed in point of attendance and the notable guests present all former successes achieved by the organizations. There were gathered not only the old wheel-horses of the party, prospective candidates for governor and other state offices, but the leaders of the younger element of the party from all parts of Michigan.

The special train from Washington brought as guests Congressman William Alden Smith, Baron von Sternburg, the German ambassador, Senator Dolliver of Iowa, Congressman Cushman of the state of Washington, ex-Congressman Wise of Virginia, Colonel E. S. Pierce, Congressman A. P. Bishop and several newspaper correspondents.

At 8 o'clock 2,500 stalwarts of the party and their guests sat down to a banquet in the auditorium. The menu was a sumptuous one, and after it had been thoroughly discussed toasts were in order. Congressman William Alden Smith officiated as toastmaster.

Mayor Palmer was introduced as the first speaker, who responded to "A welcome to the distinguished guests."

Senator Dolliver followed, responding to the toast "The principles of Lincoln and the twentieth century Republicans."

Representative F. W. Cushman of the state of Washington was next introduced, his topic being "Lincoln's example perpetual light to his successors."

The last speaker of the evening was ex-Representative John S. Wise, formerly of Virginia, but now of New York. He responded to the toast "The south and the colored man."

ANOTHER SOUTHERN FEUD.

Result of Strife For a Fair Maiden's Hand.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 15.—News of a bloody battle which was begun under the code duel, but in which the principals continued the battle emptying their revolvers, both falling fatally wounded, has reached here from Whitesburg, Letcher county. The participants, Sam Hall and Will Little, young farmers of the Beaver Creek neighborhood, were rivals for the attentions of Mary Thomas, the daughter of a country squire. They had been enemies for some time and their friends, fearing trouble, arranged for a duel between them. They took their places at twenty paces, using revolvers.

The seconds expected they would miss and thus end the trouble without serious results. Both missed on first fire, but Hall, who is a brother of the notorious Talt Hall, a desperado, and who has himself killed several men, seeing both had missed, warned his adversary that he meant to fight to the death, and began firing as rapidly as he could, and at the time advancing on Little. Little also kept firing. Both fell to the ground as the last shots were fired and neither can recover.

Brewer a Suicide.

St. Louis, Feb. 15.—Wm. J. Lemp, president of the Lemp Brewing Co., committed suicide Saturday at his residence, 3332 South Thirteenth street, by shooting himself in the right temple with a revolver. He died an hour after firing the fatal shot. Growing depression over the death of his favorite son, Fred Lemp, three years ago and the death of Frederick Pabst of Milwaukee, a lifelong friend, is believed to have been the cause of the rash act. Mr. Lemp, who was 68 years old and a native of Germany, had lived in St. Louis for forty-eight years. He stood high in business and social circles and was reputed to be a millionaire.

SERVICES IN EPISCOPAL CHURCH

"Lead Kindly Light," Mr. Hanna's Favorite Hymn, Sung by Choir—All Business Suspended For Two Hours.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 20.—The nation, state and home city of Senator Marcus A. Hanna bestowed upon him Friday afternoon its last honors. Funeral services over the remains of the dead staesman were held in St. Paul's Episcopal church, at the corner of Euclid and Case avenues, commencing at 1 o'clock.

Shortly after the noon hour the casket was taken from the chamber of commerce auditorium and the funeral procession took up its slow march to the church, two miles away. At the head of the column rode a platoon of twelve mounted police, followed by three platoons of troop A, all mounted on black horses, and with swords at carry. The hearse with its distinguished dead came next, and was followed by 100 carriages, carrying the pall bearers and official guests, which included members of President Roosevelt's cabinet, Gov. Herrick's staff, the delegations from the senate and house of representatives, members of the Ohio legislature, city officials and delegations from several civic organizations.

Immense throngs of people lined both of Euclid avenue from the down town section to the church entrance.

When the church was reached by the funeral cortage, a few moments before the hour set for the services to begin, the edifice was comfortably filled with persons who had been privileged by card to attend. The casket was closely followed by members of the Hanna family. The body was met at the church door by the officiating clergymen, Rt. Rev. W. A. Leonard, bishop of Ohio; Dr. G. N. McGrew, rector of St. Paul's church; President W. F. Pierce, of Gamier college, an institution which had been greatly benefitted by Senator Hanna liberally, and Rev. W. H. Jones, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, of which the dead man was a member, who spoke the usual sentences as the body was born down the aisle. When all had been seated the services began. St. Paul's choir chanted the psalms. President Pierce, of Lenyon college, read the lesson from First Corinthians, fifteenth chapter from the twentieth verse to the end of the chapter. "Lead Kindly Light," a favorite hymn of the senator was sung by the choir, and the followed an eloquent eulogy by Bishop Leonard.

The anthem, "Lord, Let Me Know Thy Name," by the choir and benediction by Bishop Leonard concluded the service. The pall bearers again took up the casket. As they proceeded down the aisle, followed by the family, the choir sang the recessional, "Now the Laborer's Work Is O'er."

Long before the church was emptied the body of Senator Hanna, accompanied only by members of the family and Bishop Leonard, was on its way to Lakeview cemetery, where a tender farewell was taken in Wade Memorial chapel. The only services there was in the chapel to await final disposition at the will of the family.

As a mark of respect for the dead business was abandoned from 12 to 3 o'clock throughout the city. For five minutes, from 1 o'clock to 1:05 o'clock, traffic on all the steam and electric roads was suspended. During a portion of that time people stood with bowed heads.

ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt Will Plant Memorial Trees.

Washington, Feb. 20.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt will observe Washington's birthday by planting two memorial trees. The trees selected are fern leaf beeches taken from Garfield park in this city. They will be planted in the grounds immediately east of the White Hoooooooooooooooo the thes White House and fronting on Executive avenue. The ceremony will take place at 2:30 p. m. Many memorial trees have been planted by presidents of the United States but most of them have been lost sight of because no permanent record of their location in the White House Grounds was kept. In this instance and on similar occasions hereafter the spades used in planting of trees not only will be preserved but on the blades will be painted a plan of the location of the trees and a brief legend descriptive of the event. Provision will be made in the White House for properly preserving the spades.

Serious Charge Against Balloonist.

Marshall, Mich., Feb. 22.—Professor William Randall, balloonist, is spending Washington's birthday in the county bastile. He was arrested at midnight by Marshal Purdy and Policeman Burkhardt, charged with attempting to kill his wife and father. His father made the complaint. HER LIFE IN DANGER

Detroit Girl Receives Threats From Unknown Admirer.

ASSAULTED IN HER OWN YARD

Police Mystified and Set Detectives to Work—Her Lover Asks Permission to Carry Weapon—Victim Made Ill Over the Matter.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Miss Susan Arle, 1100 Sheridan avenue, is in fear of her life. A few weeks ago she was struck on the head while in her own yard by some unknown man, and was sick for a week afterwards. Terrifying notes were received by the young lady no later than last Tuesday and she is now suffering from shock as a result.

Last evening Edward E. Esper, a young man living at 1169 Bellevue avenue, who declares that he has kept company with the young lady since last November, walked into police headquarters and asked where he could secure permission to carry a revolver. When asked for a reason for his somewhat unusual request, he told of a series of mysterious episodes that have so worried him lately that he deems it necessary to protect himself with firearms.

"Last May, about the 6th, I think," began young Esper, "Miss Arle found one of my cards on a window of her house on which was written: 'Meet me on Thursday evening. Ed Esper.' Of course she wrote to me about it and I was greatly surprised, for I never left the card there."

Esper then related the affair of the young lady being assaulted near her own doorstep, stating that two men drove up in a buggy early in the evening; one of them jumped out, struck her over the head and quickly ran away. Fortunately the girl's hair protected her from being seriously injured, though rendered unconscious from the shock.

Wrote a Long Note.

"On Saturday, Feb. 6," continued Mr. Esper, "another note of warning was received. It was not written but printed with a lead pencil. Here is what it said," remarked the young man as he produced the note:

"Dear Susie: I love you with my whole heart if you would only know it. If you will leave that Esper of yours and will be my wife you will be happy; if not, you will have misfortune. You may think Esper loves you, but he does not. If you marry him you will never be happy, but if you become my wife I promise you that you will be very happy. I do not get the opportunity to see you very often, but when I do see you my heart breaks. Dear Susie, take pity on me and be my wife. If you do not marry me you will feel the result. Good-bye, Susie, dear.

"From a true friend."

On Feb. 13 still another ominous note was found on the doorstep about 6:30 in the evening. It read:

"Beware, dear, beware, have me or beware."

Esper declares that the young woman has never kept company with any other person and that both she and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Arle, are greatly mystified and somewhat fearful concerning the matter.

The persons concerned do not consider the affair in the light of a practical joke which someone might be playing on them, and scout such an idea.

The police, likewise, are not contented to take the matter in the light of a joke, and two detectives have been assigned the work of investigating the affair.

Fraternity Is Very Much Alive.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Feb. 22.—Reports were current some time ago that one of the state normal's oldest fraternities, the Arm of Honor, was a defunct institution. Student circles have just been given a sudden surprise, however, by the announcement that old alumni men had rallied to the standard and with the aid of remaining members in the normal placed the organization on a firm basis again. Five new men have been made to ride the goat, and altogether, with the support of its old members, some of them prominent instructors in schools of the state, the outlook for the fraternity is again very flattering.

Couldn't Leave Meat Alone.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 22.—A short time since Joseph Brosocky became a patient at Menominee River hospital with a broken jaw. His diet was, naturally, of liquid foods, but it proved of too little nourishment for Brosocky, and after vainly pleading for meat he finally took matters into his own hands, jumped out of bed, donned his clothes and left the institution. It sadly proved his undoing. For a day he wandered the streets, finally falling by the wayside exhausted. Someone discovered him and he was sent to the poorhouse. Doctors still entertain hopes of saving him.

Honors For Col. Hecker.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Colonel Frank J. Hecker, one of Detroit's most esteemed citizens and one of Michigan's noted men, will be a member of the new Panama commission, according to unofficial advices received in Detroit from Washington. It is understood the president has recommended to the senate that he be appointed.

Gen. Black Will Attend.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 22.—General John C. Black, commander of the national G. A. R., has notified Adjutant Wyckoff of the Michigan department that he will attend the annual encampment in this state at Battle Creek June 15 and 16.

Admits He Shammed Insanity.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—After escaping a death sentence on the ground of alleged insanity Nathan Breen, convicted of the murder of his sweetheart, Irene Donner, admitted that his apparently insane actions during the trial were all sham. Breen was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Encased in ice, as in the center of a rock, the remains of an unknown man were found in the river about thirty feet from the mouth of the Fourteenth street sewer. To chop the body from its casing took over an hour, and when finally broken loose it was so covered with ice as to require some time for thawing after reaching Maney's morgue. The body is unidentified.

By Emile Gaboriau. . . .

CHAPTER XIII.

The reply was as follows:

The Lagors are very poor, and no one knows any member of the family named Raoul. Mme. Lagors had no son, only two daughters.

The next day, among the letters which his valet brought him, was one bearing the postmark of Vesinet. He opened the envelope with great care and read:

Dear Aunt—It is indispensable that I see you today. Come to me. I will explain why I give you this trouble instead of calling on you.
RAOUL.

Eager to lose no time, he opened a drawer, took out a revolver and examined the hammer to see if it was in order. He imagined himself alone, but a vigilant eye was watching his movements. Gipsy, under strict instructions from M. Verduret, stationed herself at the keyhole of the study door and saw all that occurred. M. Fauvel laid the pistol on the mantelpiece and resealed the letter, which he then placed where the letters were usually left, not wishing his wife to know that it had passed through his hands. He was only absent but two minutes; but, inspired by the imminence of the danger, Gipsy darted into the study, rushed to the mantel and rapidly extracted the balls from the revolver.

"There!" she murmured. "This peril is, for the present, averted, and M. Verduret, whom I shall warn through Cavaillon, will now perhaps have time to prevent a murder."

She descended to the bank and sent the clerk with a message, telling him to leave it with Mme. Alexandre for M. Verduret. An hour later Mme. Fauvel ordered her carriage and went out. M. Fauvel took a hackney coach and followed her.

"Great heavens!" cried Nina to herself. "If M. Verduret does not reach there in time, Mme. Fauvel and Raoul are lost!"

CHAPTER XIV.

WHEN the Marquis of Clameran perceived that Raoul de Lagors was the only obstacle between him and Madeleine, he swore that the obstacle should be removed.

The same day his plan was laid. As Raoul was walking out to Vesinet about midnight he was stopped at a lonely spot by three men, who asked him what o'clock it was. While looking at his watch the ruffians fell upon him suddenly.

By his skillful blows, for he had become proficient in boxing in England, Raoul made his enemies take to their heels. He continued his walk home, determined to be hereafter well armed when he went out at night. He never for an instant suspected his accomplice of having instigated the assault.

But two days afterward, at a cafe which he frequented, a vulgar looking man, a stranger to him, after trying to provoke a quarrel, finally threw a card in his face, saying its owner was ready to grant him satisfaction. Raoul rushed toward the man to thrash him with his fists, but his friends held him back.

"Very well, then. You will hear from me tomorrow," he said to his assailant. "Wait at your hotel until I send two friends to you."

As soon as the stranger had gone Raoul recovered from his excitement and began to wonder what could have been the motive for the insult. Picking up the man's card, he read:

"W. H. B. Jacobson, formerly Garibaldian volunteer, ex-officer of the Army of the South (Italy, America), 30 Leonie street."

"Oh," he thought, "here is a big military man who can whip everybody!"

But, since the insult had been offered in the presence of others, early the next morning Raoul sent two of his friends to make arrangements for a duel. He gave them M. Jacobson's address and told them to report at the Hotel du Louvre, where he proposed to sleep.

At half past 8 in the morning his seconds arrived. M. Jacobson had selected the sword and would fight that very hour in the woods of Vincennes.

"Let us be off!" cried Raoul gayly. "I accept the gentleman's conditions."

After a minute's fencing Raoul was slightly wounded in the right shoulder. The "ex-officer of the south" wished to continue the combat, but Raoul's seconds declared that honor was satisfied and that they had no intention of imperiling their friend's life again. The ex-officer was obliged to acquiesce. Raoul went home delighted at having escaped with nothing more serious than a little loss of blood and resolved to keep clear of all so called Garibaldians in the future. In fact, a night's reflection had convinced him that Clameran was the instigator of the two attempts to kill him. Mme. Fauvel having told him what conditions Madeleine placed on her consent to marriage, Raoul instantly saw the great interest Clameran would have in his removal. He recalled a thousand little remarks and events of the last few days, and on skillfully questioning the marquis his suspicions changed into certainty. This conviction that the man whom he had so materially assisted in his criminal plans was so basely ungrateful as to turn against him inspired in Raoul a resolution to take speedy vengeance upon his treacherous accomplice and at the same time insure his own safety. He was persuaded that by openly siding with Madeleine and her aunt he could save them from Clameran's clutches. Having fully resolved upon this, he wrote a note to Mme. Fauvel asking for an interview. The poor woman hastened to Vesinet at the appointed hour, convinced that some new misfortune was in store for her. She found Raoul more tender and affectionate than he had ever been. He saw the necessity of reassuring her and winning his old place in her forgiving heart before making his disclosures.

He succeeded. The poor lady had a smiling and happy air in an armchair, with Raoul kneeling before her.

"I have distressed you too long, my dear mother," he said in his softest tones, "but I repent sincerely. Now listen to me."

He had not time to say more. The door was violently thrown open, and M. Fauvel, revolver in hand, entered the room.

"Ah," he said, "you thought you could abuse my credulity forever!"

Raoul had the courage to place himself before Mme. Fauvel and to stand prepared to receive the expected bullet.

"I assure you, uncle"—he began.

"Enough!" interrupted the banker, with an angry gesture. "Cease this acting, of which I am no longer the dupe."

"I swear to you"—

"Spare yourself the trouble of denials. I know all. I know who pawned my wife's diamonds. I know who committed the robbery for which the innocent Prosper was arrested and imprisoned."

Mme. Fauvel, white with terror, fell upon her knees.

At last it had come—the dreadful day had come! Vainly for years she had added falsehood to falsehood. Vainly she had sacrificed herself and others. All was now discovered.

"Pardon, Andre! I conjure you, forgive me!"

At these heartbroken tones the banker trembled. This voice brought before him the twenty years which he had spent with this woman, who had always been the mistress of his heart, whose slightest wish had been his law and who by a look could make him the happiest or the most miserable of men.

"Unhappy woman!" he said. "Unhappy woman! What have I done that you should act thus? I have loved you too deeply."

Raoul, who listened with attention, saw that if the banker knew some things he certainly did not know all. He saw that erroneous information had misled the unhappy man and that he was still a victim of false appearances. He determined to convince him of his mistake.

"Monsieur"— he commenced.

But the sound of Raoul's voice was sufficient to break the charm.

"Silence!" cried the banker, with an angry oath. "Silence!"

The stillness was only broken by the sobs of Mme. Fauvel.

"I came here," continued the banker, "with the intention of killing you both, but courage fails me to kill a woman, and I will not kill an unarmed man."

Raoul once more tried to speak.

"Let me finish!" interrupted M. Fauvel. "Your life is in my hands. The law excuses the vengeance of an injured husband, but I refuse to take advantage of it. I see on your mantel a revolver similar to mine. Take it and defend yourself."

"Never."

"Defend yourself!" cried the banker, raising his arm. "If not"—

"Place yourself in that corner of the room, and I will stand in this," continued the banker, "and when the clock strikes, which will be in a few seconds, we will both fire."

They took the places designated. But the horror of the scene was too much for Mme. Fauvel to witness any longer without interposing. She understood but one thing—her son and her husband were about to kill each other before her very eyes. Fright and horror gave her strength to start up and rush between the two men, with extended arms.

"Have pity, Andre!" she cried, wringing her hands in anguish. "Let me tell you! Don't kill"—.

This burst of maternal love M. Fauvel took for the pleading of a criminal defending her lover. He seized his wife by the arm and thrust her aside.

But she would not be repulsed. Rushing up to Raoul, she threw her arms around him and said to her husband:

"Kill me, and me alone, for I am the guilty one!"

At these words M. Fauvel glared at the guilty pair and, deliberately taking aim, fired. Neither Raoul nor Mme. Fauvel moved. The banker fired a second time, then a third. He cocked the pistol for a fourth shot when a man rushed into the room, snatched the pistol from the banker's hand and ran to Mme. Fauvel. It was M. Verduret.

"Thank God," he cried, "she is unhurt! Do you know who that man is that you attempted to kill?"

"Her lover!"

"No; her son!"

The banker looked wildly from Raoul to M. Verduret, then, fastening his haggard eyes on his wife, exclaimed:

"It is false! You are all conspiring to deceive me! Proofs!"

"You shall have proofs," replied M. Verduret. "But first listen."

And rapidly, with his wonderful talent for exposition, he related the principal points of the plot he had discovered. The true state of the case was terribly distressing to M. Fauvel, but nothing compared with what he had suspected. His throbbing, yearning heart told him that he still loved his wife. Why should he punish a fault committed so many years ago and atoned for by twenty years of devotion and suffering? For some moments after M. Verduret had finished his explanation M. Fauvel remained silent. So many strange events had happened in the last few days, culminating in the scene which had just taken place, that M. Fauvel was incapable of thinking. If his heart counseled pardon and forgetfulness, wounded pride and self respect demanded vengeance. If Raoul, the baleful witness, the living proof of a faroff sin, were not in existence, M. Fauvel would not have hesitated—Gaston de Clameran was dead—he would have held out his arms to his wife and said:

"Come to my heart! Your sacrifices for my honor shall be your absolution. Let the sad past be forgotten."

But the sight of Raoul prevented.

"So this is your son," he said to his wife—"this man who has plundered you and robbed me!"

Mme. Fauvel was unable to utter a word in reply. Happily M. Verduret was there.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

CONCERNING THE FIGURE

Taking care of the form by proper exercise, feeding and dressing. Choice of the corset and the correct way to wear it.

By CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK.

(Copyright, 1904, by Christine Terhune Herrick.)

There is no excuse for a woman's having a poor figure. It may give her some trouble to get a good one but it is worth the effort.

Some women begin life without figures worthy of the name. While they are young girls they are scraggy and flat, or lumpy and shapeless. These peculiarities do not lessen with age and when to their natural drawbacks the owners add utter carelessness, it is no wonder if by the time they have reached middle age that they are a trial to the eyes of their friends.

As a matter of course, it is easier to let oneself go and not take the pains that the care of a figure demands. But no woman with the least particle of vanity in her make up—and it is a very poor sort of woman who lacks it—can help feeling a thrill of pleasure when she beholds the improvement wrought in her appearance by a good corset, properly worn.

For the corset is the first essential in the making of the figure. A number of other things go with it. The woman must carry herself properly but the corset helps her to do that. She must pay attention to her outer dress, and to this too, the corset will stimulate her. Her diet cannot be entirely neglected, if she wishes to have her form reduced from over stoutness or redeemed from ultra thinness but with the corset as a foundation for her efforts she will be encouraged in the work of regulating her food.

Even in this day there are plenty of people who find nothing bad enough to say about a corset. I have seen one matron give way to tears while addressing a woman's club on the evils that had been wrought by corsets. She had known the corset as it was in the earlier years, before common sense and science went to its making and she knew the harm it had done those who regarded it as an instrument for the compression of the waist into a smaller compass than nature had intended for it.

The new corset,—the "straight front", with which fashion papers and comic columns have made everyone familiar, —is built on a different plan. It does not squeeze a woman's organs out of shape but holds them in place. As I have said before, it must be properly made and properly worn. The ideal corset is one that is made to order and is adapted to the needs of the individual body, but for those who cannot afford this there are substitutes in plenty. A woman should seek until she finds what she wants.

The corset increases the size of the waist line, thereby giving room for play of the lungs and diaphragm. There is no difficulty in deep breathing with the woman who wears a well made corset of the present style. That is, if she puts it on properly.

To do this she must loosen the laces. Gone are,—or should be,—the days when a woman kept her corsets laced for days and weeks at a time. Now the woman loosens the laces at night and tightens them in the morning. When she puts on the corset it is so loose that it hangs upon her like a bag. She clasps the garters that are attached to the front and, if she be of stout figure, to the sides, settles the corset down over her hips and abdomen, drawing a long deep breath after this is done, and then proceeds to tighten the laces. She does this carefully, drawing the lower ones first and then those above the belt line. Never must she make them too tight for comfort. As soon as she does this she injures her figure as well as her feelings. When the laces are tight enough, she should cross them in the back, bring them to the front, pass them under the garter on the left side and tie them there.

The great advantage of thus tightening the corset laces every day is that the figure can be humoured. There are days when a woman feels that a tight corset is more than she can bear. Then she leaves the laces loose at first, and draws them up later in the day when she has reached the point where a little closer compression will be grateful to her.

I can hear the protests of busy women over the time it will take to go to this trouble. But it really takes less time than one would think. At first, before one is accustomed to the process it may require a few minutes more than one has been in the habit of granting to one's toilet, but as the habit grows upon one of lacing the corsets daily, it will be done more quickly and become a matter of course. And even if it does take a few minutes more, is not the game worth the candle? When one sees the good figures that have been evolved from shadeless forms by the use of a good corset, does it not seem that a little extra care is a very small price to pay for the gain?

The corset once on, the woman must proceed to live up to it. She will find that it helps her to keep her shoulders straight and her body erect. She must learn to poise herself properly, throwing her weight on the balls of her feet, and resisting the temptation to sway backwards. That is a tendency which grows upon women as they advance in years and in flesh. If they do not "stand so straight that they lean the other way," they let their shoulders droop until the middle of the back is like a hump. All about the country one may see women in the late fifties who have bent their shoulders until they look almost as though they were deformed. This could have been spared them if they had taken a little pains early in life. And even an elderly woman can do much to correct such a stoop if she is willing to give herself trouble about it.

To stand straight is neither to bend backwards nor to droop forwards. The prominent abdomen is as unsightly as the humped up shoulders. The woman with a trend towards either should exercise herself every day standing in front of a mirror. She is wise if she follows the advice of one sensible housekeeper and hangs a looking glass in her kitchen where she can see herself as she steps back and forth about her work and bring herself up with a round turn if she slips into any slovenly trick of carriage.

The corset will give a good figure for a time, but a woman must work to keep it. If she is too thin for beauty the task will be simpler for her than for the woman inclined to put on flesh. The latter has her work ahead of her. The thin woman may have to take exercise, as the stout one must do, but she has less to carry about with her while she is doing it. For both it is essential that exercise should be taken in doors and out. The latter is vastly preferable, for obvious reasons. But the exercise indoors is far better than nothing.

One woman who would be called old if her years were known has never, for fifteen years, failed to go through a certain course of what she calls her "gymnastics," on rising in the morning. For ten minutes daily, she bends and twists her body, stooping until she sits on her heels and rising without laying hold of anything to assist her. She leans forward until she can touch the floor with her finger tips, without bending her knees and backward until her forehead is in contact with the wall. She swings her arms about, kicks the air vigorously and in every way she can brings all her muscles into play. As a result of this she is as brisk and agile as women many years her junior and asserts that she never intends to grow old but to keep her strength and vigor to the end. As she probably will.

When such exercises as this are taken it must be with the window open, even in cold weather. There is no use inflating the lungs unless you fill them with fresh air. For this reason as well as for many others, out-door exercise is preferable to that taken in a gymnasium, no matter how well equipped this may be. At the best, it is only a substitute. Long walks, horseback rides, bicycle spins, golf or tennis, all do their share in developing the muscles, reducing adipose tissue or strengthening the body to gain flesh. One at least of these is needed to keep the figure in shape, or failing this, one must follow the exercises I have outlined. These may be aided by such appliances as a lifting machine, dumbbells, Indian clubs, and the like. Because of the many muscles called into play by it, ping-pong is one of the best house games known. It encourages bending and stooping and reaching and stretching, and by all these means develops and improves the figure.

But, says some one, "How can this be done in the long, straight front corset pictured everywhere?" It cannot. But there are corsets which come to be worn on such occasions. The ribbon girdle corset, made either in heavy satin ribbon or in wide tape, or the short equestrian corset is adapted to all sorts of vigorous exercise. It is also excellent for the women who do lots of housework which requires bending over and stooping While it does not hold in the over-plump figure as a heavier, longer corset would do, it is far better to yield a little restriction than to break corset steels and suffer discomfort at the same time.

A woman can never allow herself to become careless about her corset. Having gone to the expense and pains of procuring one and learning how to wear it she should not let the gain slip away from her. When her corset becomes old and out of shape she should have it re-boned, as it is worth while to do with a good corset. Never should she relax her vigilance over her figure and her way of carrying herself. Perhaps for a while it will seem a good deal of a burden: but after a time the well carried form, with the back straight, the head up, the shoulders properly poised, will become instinctive, so that the trouble would be to bear herself in the wrong way.

It is a woman's duty to keep her good looks as long as she can and a good figure is a most important part of them. A pretty face is all very well—there are few women who would not be willing to yield a virtue or two to possess a charming countenance,—but it loses a great deal if it is set on top of a badly cared for, badly carried figure. When a woman gets toward the point where youthful charms are forsaking her, it is a boon to her and to those about her if she has a well made, well borne form. And the possession of this is within her own power.

There are so many unmarried men in Morenci that one of the hotels has a bachelor's table at which the boarders are more particular than a lot of old maids. It is said they even object to eggs being served at this table, because they are laid by female hens. The landlord is compelled to personally wait on table as the sight of a dining girl takes away the appetites of the grouty old fellows whose horror of leap year is so great that they have all cut February 29 out of their calendars.—Hudson Post.

A Cure for Eczema.

My baby had Eczema so badly that its head was a solid mass of scabs, and its hair all came out. I tried many remedies but none seemed to do any permanent good until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The Eczema is cured, the scabs are gone and the little one's scalp is perfectly clean and healthy, and its hair is growing beautifully again. I cannot give too much praise to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.—Frank Farmer, Bluff City, Ky. In buying Witch Hazel Salve look out for counterfeits. DeWitt's is the original and the only one containing pure Witch Hazel. The name E. C. DeWitt & Co. is on every box. Sold by C. A. Wright.

Good Spirits.

Good spirits don't all come from Kentucky. Their main source is the liver—and all the fine spirits ever made in the Blue Grass State could not remedy a bad liver or the hundred-and-one ill effects it produces. You can't have good spirits and a bad liver at the same time. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. You can put your liver in fine condition by using Green's August Flower—the greatest of all medicines for the liver and stomach and a certain cure for dyspepsia or indigestion. It has been a favorite household remedy for over thirty-five years. August Flower will make your liver healthy and active and thus insure you a liberal supply of "good spirits." Trial size, 25c; regular bottles, 75c. At all druggists.

HE'S A GONE GOOSE

HOG THAT IS CALLED A "BIRD."

In sweetness and tenderness our pork closely resembles young chicken and has that fine, nutty flavor so noticeable in the flesh of corn-fed pigs. It is good roasted or broiled and brings forth expressions of pleasure from those who partake of it.

J. MILLER'S DAISY MEAT MARKET.

A Hudson girl had a little grip which made her feel quite ill; the doctor said she must be good and to keep very still; she said she ought to have a nurse, but no woman would do; she knew a young man who she thought, could take good care of two; 'twas evening when he took the case, and through the long still night, he held her hand and stroked her brow, in fact he used her right; She's better now; she will get well, but there's a great demand, for the same gentle, skillful nurse, who cures by pressing hand.—Hudson Post.

A better man for the position of toastmaster at the Lincoln Republican Club banquet to be held in this city this week than Honorable Henry C. Smith of Adrian, could hardly be secured. Mr. Smith is a talented and witty speaker, and can enjoy a joke even on himself. In regard to his lecture on McKinley before the Detroit Y. M. C. A. recently he says that "not a criticism was heard. The train was late and the audience had filed out leaving only the janitor to listen to his burning words."—Hillsdale Standard.

Its the early husband that catches fire at least a prominent Pontiac citizen did when he went to the kitchen in his robe de nuit to light the matutinal blaze, on one of the recent cold mornings. This is not to be regarded as an argument in the family controversy as to which ought to get up and build the fire, but should be started in the stove, whoever does it. There was no serious injury except to the night gown.—Northville Record. Most men know better than to do anything of the kind. He nuit probably, after he did it.—Adrian Press.

Adrian old maids are getting desperate. They propose to have a grand leap year ball about the time of St. Valentine's Day. There are lot of unmarried men at the county seat who are spotted as leap year victims, and it is hoped that Valentine's Day will bring them to time.—Hudson Post.

"OH, MAMMA, Something is Biting Me."

Mothers Read.

It is not itching piles that ails YOU or YOUR CHILD. It's the PIN or SEAT WORM that causes you or your child to have rectal trouble. Soon after retiring for the night the pin worm appears. It bites and stings and causes scratching and aching. The doctor and the man who has the dollar-a-box salve call it piles. Mothers know what it means when the child cries out: "Mamma, something is biting me." And sure enough, upon examining her child she finds the naughty white pin worm, sharp pointed at both ends, imbedded in the child's rectum. This worm causes more nervousness to young and old persons than any other disease, and the itching is not piles but pin worms. The only sure and harmless remedy for this is STEKETEE'S PIN WORM DESTROYER. Do not pay a dollar for a box of salve when 25 cents will cure you and your child. For sale by all druggists, or send 25c postage for 1 box, or 5 for $1 to GEO. G. STEKETEE, Grand Rapids, Mich., proprietor.

Mary Alverson Heesen.

Our departed sister, Mary Alverson Heesen, was born in the state of New York on July 4, 1847. She departed this life early Tuesday morning, Feb. 16, at the age of 57. With her parents she came to Michigan in early life. While living in Macon she was baptised in the Free Will Baptist church. In Nov. 1866 she was married to Mr. Heesen. Most of their married life has been spent in Tecumseh. To them were born seven children, five of whom, La Verne, Nellie, Grace, Mildred and Geraldine, survive the mother to mourn her loss. Two, Perry Alverson and Althea are dead.

Mrs. Heesen was in poor health through the greater part of her life. This together with her naturally retiring disposition, kept her much at home. Here her life was lived in unstinted devotion to her husband and children.

She lived for her family and they today feel the loss of her tender ministrations the more keenly. In her home she was best known, appreciated and loved. Yet outside her home many a one had reason to bless her gentle thoughtfulness and kindly ministry. She was ever deeply sympathetic and ready to extend a helping hand to those in want or sorrow. Religion to her seemed chiefly to consist in following her master in "going about doing good."

During her last illness Mrs. Heesen frequently expressed her faith in God. Death had no terrors to her. It was but falling asleep in Jesus. After a long and tedious illness, which she bore with fortitude and resignation, she quietly fell asleep. This home is impoverished of her love, but we trust she has entered into a more blessed experience, sharing the master's joy.

PRIZE PROBLEM

For the correct solution of the following problem in higher mathematics, the Herald will give a copy of the Electric Railroad Franchise, bound in limp calf. This contest is open to every resident of this vicinity, excepting to members of the Council, who of course, must be in possession of the correct figures. Here is the problem.

Judged by the fact that this self-same Council recently charged the Lake Shore Railroad the sum of $400. for the privilege of crossing ONE obscure street in the out skirts of the town; and judged by the further fact that the Circuit Court recently awarded Mrs. George Keyser damages to the amount of $875. because the above mentioned crossing was made in front of her residence;

What, then, in view of these facts, is it worth to allow an electric railroad to occupy and virtually OWN the entire extent of Chicago street?

Verily, verily, consistency thou art a jewel!!

A GOOD LETTER

This time from an

OLD TECUMSEH BOY

A little late to do any good, but the Herald is always glad to hear from Leroy Blood, as in fact are many others.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 19, 1904.

MY DEAR STACY:—I have taken great interest in the articles that have appeared in your paper recently in regard to the use of Chicago street for an electric road. I heartily endorse all that our old friend, Graves, has written upon the subject.

Tecumseh was my boyhood home and for a number of years I was engaged in business on your beautiful Chicago street. Once or twice a year I give myself the pleasure of returning to my former home to renew old acquaintances, often I drive over from Lansing and when I do I take particular delight in driving up and down one of the most beautiful streets that can be found in any city or village in the state of Michigan.

I have no property interest now in Tecumseh except at River Side and as my horse is city bred and not afraid of electric cars (if he was and should run away he is too slow to break your village ordinance against fast driving) still I want to add my protest to that of yours against what would be nothing less than a crime against the coming generation.

Tecumseh has every thing to lose and nothing to gain by an electric line on Chicago street. It will be many years before you will out grow walking distance.

That you want the road and want it bad and should put forth every effort to obtain it, is a foregone conclusion but for the purposes that you want it, for any other street would be better than Chicago street. Corporations, especially railroad corporations, when seeking a franchise, have their hip pockets loaded with honey drops, sweet oil and promises, but when the same is obtained they are apt to make use of the expression once used by an eastern financier, when he said, "The public be D—."

I can hardly imagine it possible to find a citizen in your village, who would be willing to grant such a privilege as this road asks for.

Put up a good stiff fight, friend Stacy, against it and keep everlastingly at it and some day your fellow townsmen will turn out en mass and give you a good funeral.

Yours Truly,
L. C. BLOOD.

Mrs. S. T. Paradise.

Entered into rest at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Norris, on the morning of Feb. 15, 1904, Mrs. S. T. Paradise.

Sarah T. Holloway was born in Gloucestershire, England, May 8, 1818, she being the eldest of a family of nine children. Oct. 12, 1844, she was married to Henry Paradise, who was also a resident of Gloucestershire.

In the fall of 1857 she, with her husband and two little daughters, came to America and settled in Tecumseh, Mich., where they made their home. Mr. Paradise died in June, 1876, since which time she has made her home with her two daughters, Mrs. J. H. Norris, of this place, and Mrs. Mary Skinner, of Macon, being born of pious parents and who were prominent members and supporters of the Methodist church in their home town.

Mrs. Paradise early became a christian and united with the church of her choice. On coming to America she brought her church letter and united with the M. E. church of this place, where she has been a faithful and humble member. Failing health and infirmities of age prevented her from constant attendance—but her heart and sympathies were always with her church and its people. Her faith in Jesus and hope of heaven was strong, which was shown in her last moments. Truly she entered heaven by prayer and the peace which passeth understanding was hers.

Being of a quiet and retiring disposition and an affectionate nature, she was best known in the immediate family circle, where her love and devotion knew no bounds. Her friendship was real, as many friends with whom she was known can testify.

Farewell, dear mother, we hope to meet you where partings are unknown, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes.

Funeral services were conducted from the M. E. church in Tecumseh on Feb. 17, by Rev. Sedweek.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted during the death and burial of our dear mother, also the choir.

MRS. MARY SKINNER, AND FAMILIES.

Sandwich in Kent, England was once a seaport though it is now two miles from the shore.

The Only One.

The only moving picture company that has ever given an entirely satisfactory exhibition of moving pictures in the New Bradley has been engaged for a return date on Monday, Feb. 29, 1904. The name of Lyman H. Howe is so well known in connection with moving pictures that imitators are using his name in their advertising. This is the best compliment that could be paid, as it shows him to be the acknowledged leader and it is only necessary to say further that this is Mr. Howe's original company. The exhibition will be in the New Bradley on Monday, Feb. 29. Included in the program, which is entirely new, will be a reproduction in colors of the Rise and Fall of Napoleon the Great, vividly portraying the strongest scenes in the life of that great historical character.

CLUB NOTES.

The Research Circle will meet this week on Friday afternoon, Feb. 26, instead of Tuesday. It is requested that all the members be present on account of important business. Be prompt. The hour is two o'clock. Program.

Refreshments will be served at the close of the program.

The Farmers' Union.

The Farmers Union club will hold its next meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Micheal Smeltzer, on the evening of the 26 of Feb. 1904. Program as follows:

New Oven at the City Bakery.

Wm. Willoughby, the proprietor of the City Bakery, has found his business increasing rapidly since his arrival in Tecumseh and to such an extent that the old oven, which was in the bakery at the time he purchased it, will not bake fast enough to enable him to fill all his orders promptly as he desires promptness being the key to his success. Therefore he finds it necessary to put in a much larger oven and the one chosen is a large Black Diamond three deck Oven purchased of the Roberts Oven Co. of Chicago.

It is already in operation at the bakery and Mr. Willoughby and his help are delighted with it.

Sam T. Jack's Own Burlesque Co.

The attraction at the New Bradley opera house next Friday, Feb. 26, will be Sam. T. Jack's Own Burlesque Company and there is no question but that the theatre-going public are in for an avalanche of fun and jollity from the fact that this company is fully equiped with a class of superior talent that should make the performance go fast and furious. In the company there will be found as pretty a lot of female beauty as ever wore slippers or rouged a cheek. Twenty bewitching damsels that can dance, sing and pose. The comedy element is said to be more clever and ample opportunity is given to show their eccentric drollery. The burlesques and there are two of them—one called, "A Night at the Circus" and the other "The Royal Princess," are new and original, and entirely out of the regular rut. The olio is exceptionally strong and novel, furnished by well known members of the vaudeville profession. During the action of the burlesque, there will be introduced the famous "Dance-du-Frolique" by eight French dancers, and it is asserted that they are bound to create a furore.

The costumes, music and electrical effects are truly magnificent, the whole forming an entertainment that cannot but please the most confirmed cynic.

Thos. Beal had an exciting time Monday on his way to Cement City. At one spot in the road water covered it to quite a depth and attempting to cross the ice the horse became frightened and broke through the ice and fell into the water. It was with some difficulty that the horse's head was kept above water until the cutter was gotten loose. The cutter was broken to some extent but no further damage resulted.—Onsted News.

A noted "sister" of the Methodist Episcopal church once had a large tea-party at which were present most of the prominent ministers of that denomination in America, including the local pastor, who was a little hard of hearing. When all were seated, she, wishing to honor him, whose birthday it happened to be, said in her blandest whisper; "Brother,—will you ask a blessing?" And the pastor replied in a loud voice to the great injury of the company: "I take milk, ma'am, but no sugar."—Ex.

Now, if Mr. Young knows who got the bobs, why not go right after him now, instead of coming to a newspaper office and telling people about it? The party who took them, either had a right to do so, or is a thief. In either case Mr. Young should promptly go and secure his property. If the bobs were stolen, Mr. Young's duty is to enter complaint and have the crime punished. Otherwise he is willing to compound a felony, by remaining quiet in order to get back his property. It is very likely that Young did not have the least idea who took the bobs.—Adrian Press.

Mr. H. Haggins of Melbourne, Fla., writes, "My doctor told me I had Consumption and nothing could be done for me. I was given up to die. A Hudson laundry announces that it can no longer "do" a shirt for five cents but owing to the increased price of gasoline, lime, soap, fuel, coal tar, and other good requisites of good laundry work the men must pay ten cents for shirts in the future. Martin Young had a pair of miniature bob sleighs that he used to draw the mail to and from the depot and the postoffice. Several nights ago someone took the bobs and Mr. Younge says that he knows who got them. Now it is up to the one who took the bobs away to return them as soon as possible or stand the chance of getting into trouble.—Hudson Gazette.

CURES WITHOUT STOMACH DOSING.

A long stride toward solving the mystery of curing catarrh was taken with the discovery of Hyomei. In fact, the percentage of cures by this treatment proves it equal to the final tests.

The folly of taking medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh of the nose, throat and lungs, has been realized by physicians, but not until Hyomei was known, had they a practical method that would obviate stomach drugging.

A complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1 and consists of a neat pocket inhaler that can be used anywhere without attracting attention, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathing Hyomei through the inhaler, every particle of air that enters the nose, throat and lungs is charged with a healing balsam that soothes and allays all irritation, kills the catarrhal germs and enriches the blood with additional ozone.

C. A. Wright has so much faith in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh, that he is selling it under he personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not give positive relief.

ARE YOU A COMING MOTHER? ARE YOU EXPECTANT?

MOTHER'S FRIEND

makes childbirth easy by preparing the system for parturition and thus shortening labor. The painful ordeal is robbed of its terrors, and the danger lessened to both mother and child; the time of confinement is shortened, the mother rested, and child fully developed, strong and healthy.

Morning sickness, or nausea arising from pregnancy, is prevented by its use. As pregnancy advances, the breasts enlarge, become swollen and hard. Long before the child is born, they are preparing for the secretion of milk. It is important that they receive early attention. Mother's Friend softens the skin and facilitates the secretion of Life Fluid. Undeveloped breasts, hard-caked shortly after delivery, are the result of non-treatment, and likely to culminate in Mammary Abscess, from which so many suffer excruciating pain and are left with these organs permanently impaired.

Softness, pliability and expansion are given to the muscles and sinews, thus bringing comfort and causing an easy issue of the child. Try it. Of druggists $1.00. Our book "Motherhood" free.

UNCOMMON WISDOM.

Some Tecumseh People Profit by Neighbors' Experience.

It's a wise man who profits by the experience of his friends and neighbors. Here is a chance to do it, and every man, woman or child in Tecumseh who knows the misery of a bad back, the nervousness and restlessness caused by kidney complaint or the annoyance of urinary disorders, will show uncommon wisdom to profit by this citizen's advice.

Ex-Postmaster J. W. Wightman, well-known to every reader of this statement, says: "I have no hesitation in endorsing Doan's Kidney Pills procured at C. A. Wright's drug store. They have been used in my family and the most satisfactory results followed the treatment. They proved to be a remedy of merit. You can use my name to that effect if you think proper."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

After arguing with a man for half an hour a woman invariably says: "Now why can't you be sensible?"

Scald head is an eczema of the scalp—very severe sometimes, but it can be cured. Doan's Ointment quick and permanent in its results. At any drug store for 50 cents.

His Fortune Came Too Late.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Frank Langowski, who was buried last Friday from a little room over a store at 437 Canfield avenue east, was the son of a Russian count, who was disgraced at the time of the assassination of the Czar Alexander. Langowski himself was sentenced to the mines of Siberia and was kept there in dreary exile for years. He was subsequently pardoned and emigrated to this country, where he has lived in poverty. The Russian government finally heard his claims for damages for lost title and estates and awarded him $17,000 damages, the money reaching Washington too late, however, to be of any use. His body was laid in the grave before the news reached here.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Charlotte, Mich., Feb. 22.—William Searles, aged 82 years, who had lived alone for many years, was burned to death last night when his house was destroyed by fire. The End of the World.

Here are six views on the end of the world that have been given out by eminent scientists during recent years:

The land surface is diminishing; the human race will be finally drowned.

Ice is accumulating at the north pole; some day the earth will fall out of balance and man will be utterly annihilated by the rush of moving objects.

The earth is gradually approaching the sun; the last man will therefore finally be roasted alive.

Water is slowly growing scarcer; in the ages to come all human beings and animals will perish for the want of a drop of moisture to cool their parched tongues.

With the beginning of the year 3000 A. D. man will commence to retrograde and will finally come to be a creature no larger than a plant louse.

The sun is burning up; as she cools the earth's glacial zones will enlarge, and the last remnant of humanity will be frozen in a heap.

Boys' Cleverness With Flowers.

"If the public schools ever add to the curriculum the making of bouquets as a fine art, the boys will take much higher honors than the girls," lamented a perplexed teacher. "I used to wonder why it was that all the employees in a florist's establishment were men. Having no other explanation to fall back on, I concluded that the preference was due to their superior physical strength, but I know now that it is because they have better taste in the arrangement of flowers. With all her supposed inherent talent in the matter of home adornment there isn't one girl in a thousand who can make a lot of flowers up into a decent bouquet without coaching, while, on the other hand, the boy who cannot put them together in artistic style is rare."—New York Press.

Volcanic Functions.

Terrific as are the forces of volcanic action, they have served and do yet serve their ordained purpose in the magnificent scheme of cosmic development. Volcanoes form a natural vent for the pent up internal forces resulting from the slow cooling and consolidation of the earth's mass. They act as the safety valves of the world, without which the crust of the earth would in all probability burst with explosive force and with a resulting cataclysm appalling to contemplate. Volcanoes tend, in fact, to maintain the normal stable equilibrium between the interior and the outer surface of the world.—Engineering.

What He Did.

"What did that man do to make himself so famous?" asked the inquirer, gazing curiously at an individual who formed the central of a social group.

"To the best of my knowledge," replied the cynic, "he did the public."

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflames the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

MEET TO "TALKSHOP"

Farmers Assemble at Lansing in Goodly Numbers.

IT IS NINTH ANNUAL ROUND-UP

M. A. C. Authorities to Act as Hosts—Prof. Taft Reports That 300 Two-Day Institutes Were Held During Year—Dairy Work Discussed.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 24.—A notable congress of farmers opened up here Tuesday and a formidable array of agricultural subjects will be under discussion for the next two days.

It is the annual round-up of the Michigan Farmers' Institute in conjunction with the state convention of allied associations like the Michigan Dairymen's association. Some 200 have already arrived and have participated in the thoroughly practical work of the dairymen in the afternoon. It is expected that 1,000 of the state's most progressive farmers will be on hand today when the M. A. C. authorities will act as hosts in the fruitful annual exposition of scientific farming.

The first session of the ninth annual round-up of Michigan Farmers' Institutes was called to order by the state superintendent, Prof. L. R. Taft, at the Agricultural college at 2 p. m. Prof. Taft introduced Hon. Charles F. Moore of St. Clair as presiding officer.

Prof. Taft in his report gave the number of one and two-day institutes held during the year at about 300, with a slight increase in attendance over last season. Following this came short reports on the progress of institute work in the various sections of the state.

The meeting then adjourned to the physical laboratory, where Prof. L. G. Holbrook gave a demonstration and talk on the X-ray and wireless telegraphy.

In his talk to the Michigan Dairymen's association, Helmer-Rabild of Chesterfield spoke in part as follows:

"In the production of wholesome milk and in the manufacture of butter bacteria play an all important part.

Making a Starter.

"To accomplish this the scientist has taught us to make use of a starter. Starter, in general practice, is the name given to a mess of sour milk which in souring has developed that undescribable flavor and taste which is not desired in butter, in other words, a starter is a collection of lactic acid bacteria.

"In preparing my first batch of starter I use a half gallon crock, the inside of which must be perfect and without cracks. In this crock, which I have found holds the temperature remarkably well, I put three pounds of carefully pasteurized milk of good quality and at a temperature of 80 degrees, and to this I add half an ounce of culture. I stir the mixture with a sterile spoon, cover the crock with sterilized parchment paper and set it away at a temperature of 80 degrees in the summer and 85 degrees in the winter. In the course of 18 or 20 hours it has soured sufficiently to become loppered. With my three pounds of starter I inoculate two batches of pasteurized milk. The first batch consists of four pounds in a sterile half-gallon crock and to this I add about one-fourth pound of starter and set it away like the first day but at a temperature of 70 degrees in summer and 75 degrees in winter. This I call my mother-starter. With the 2¾ pounds which I have left I inoculate 80 pounds of pasteurized milk at above temperature in a ten-gallon can and place the can in water at a slightly higher temperature in order to keep the temperature of the milk as near 70 degrees as possible. The milk treated in this way will be ready to use in about eighteen hours, so if the starter is set at 2 p. m. it will be ready for use by 8 the next morning. I have my mother-starter ripe at 2 p. m. ready to use for inoculation of my next day's milk."

The evening session of the dairymen was prolific in ideas on the pasteurizing of milk and making of cheese. In fact, it was the cheese makers' innings, with Fred M. Warner in the chair.

The subject of cheese was introduced by E. A. Haven of Bloomingdale in an excellent paper on "Some phases of the Michigan cheese markets."

"Local consumption is not keeping pace with production," he said. "The competitive setting and cutting of prices is working the industry an injury, but all attempts to organize closely have failed. Less than 4 per cent is consumed at home, and we need outside markets."

"Is the use of the curd milk advisable?" was the subject treated briefly by Prof. John Michels. He answered the question in the affirmative, holding the device to be economical in the production of a firm chedder. Norman B. Horton of Fruit Ridge led a discussion on "Merging of cheese sales," a move which he strongly advocated outlining a scheme for eliminating slaughter sales and undesirable competition. "I would not, on the other hand, indorse any movement to organize to boost prices," he said.

Under the auspices of the Michigan Farmers' Institute a session was held by the visiting delegates at the M. A. C. in the evening.

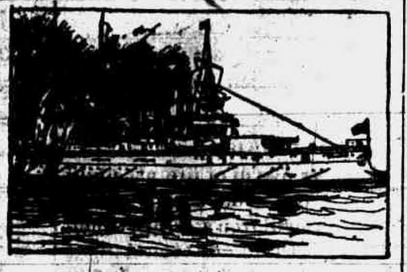
Japanese Repulsed in Effort to Close Port Arthur

BY SINKING SHIPS AT MOUTH

Viceroy Alexieff Reports Sinking Four Steamers—Japanese Sailors Drowned—Excitement at St. Petersburg Over the News.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—A telegram from Viceroy Alexieff to the czar says:

"At a quarter before 3 in the morning of Feb. 23, numerous Japanese torpedo boats attempted to attack the battleship Retvizan and sink large steamers loaded with inflammables. The Retvizan was the first to observe the torpedo boats, and opened a strong fire on them. She was supported by the land batteries. She destroyed two steamers near the entrance of the harbor; they were coming directly towards her. One of them went on the rocks near the lighthouse on Tiger peninsula, and the other sank under Golden Hill. The Retivazan observed four steamers in a sinking condition and eight torpedo boats departing slowly to rejoin the waiting Japanese warships. A portion of the crews of the Japanese vessels was drowned. The grounded steamer is still burning.



BATTLESHIP RETVIZAN,

The enemy is observed in the offing of Port Arthur in two lines.

"The Japanese crews saved themselves in boats, and it is possible that some of them were picked up by the enemy's torpedo boats.

"I am proceeding to examine the coasts. The entrance of the harbor is open. I attribute the complete derangement of the enemy's plan to the brilliant action and destructive fire of the Retvizan. Floating mines are still visible in the roadstead. I have recalled the three cruisers sent in pursuit of the enemy in order, in the first place, to clear the roadstead of floating mines.

"We had no losses."

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—Reports of a Russian victory at Port Arthur were current late yesterday afternoon, and early in the evening and about midnight they were definitely confirmed by a dispatch from Alexieff.

Admiral Sampson's Tactics.

It appears that the Japanese had attempted to bottle up Admiral Stark's fleet in Port Arthur by sinking two stone laden vessels at the entrance of the harbor, employing the tactics which were considered, but not executed, by the late Admiral Sampson, U. S. N., with the Merrimac at Santiago during the Spanish-American war. According to one account, two Japanese ships appeared off the harbor with a Japanese fleet behind them and ostensibly in pursuit. The Russians, however, suspected a ruse and their ships steamed out, sank the stone-laden vessels, engaged and defeated the enemy and drove them off.

Rumors of this victory were spread far and wide over the city during the early part of the evening, and the crowds which had gathered in the streets, in spite of the severe cold, to discuss the news were greatly excited.

The crowds at the admiralty and newspaper and telegraph agency offices kept increasing and the excitement attained the fever point when it was known definitely that the emperor had received a telegram giving more details and showing the Russian victory was even greater than was at first reported.

It must be observed that in his dispatch Viceroy Alexieff does not mention the number of steamers which the Japanese tried to sink or drive upon the Russian ships, and it is not yet known whether the four vessels the captain of the Retvizan observed going down, in addition to the two destroyed, were also laden with inflammables or whether they were warships. The greatest praise is given to the commander of the Retvizan and the splendid action of this American-built vessel places her name foremost on the roll of the Russian navy.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—Viceroy Alexieff, with a complete staff, now has his headquarters on a special train, which at present is about four miles from Moukden, fully equipped and ready to move from place to place as the necessities of the situation require.

Miles Predicts Long, Cruel War.

Boston, Feb. 25.—Gen. Miles while here expressed the opinion that the war between Japan and Russia will be a long and cruel one. "I cannot go into the matter at any length," he added, "but I do think a prolonged conflict will ensue, into which I hope the United States will not be drawn. It is too early to tell what the result will be. From present reports, it is impossible to make accurate comment on what has already taken place.

Very Evenly Matched.

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 25.—Harry Cobb of Detroit was given the decision over Tom Prendergast of Saginaw on a foul in the seventh round of what was scheduled for a ten-round contest in this city last night. Both men were very evenly matched. Prendergast scored a knockdown in the first round, Cobb taking the count of six to get on his feet. In the seventh Prendergast got his arm around Cobb, forced him to the ropes and struck him three times in the face. The referee then stopped the bout and gave the decision to Cobb. Prendergast claimed that Cobb tried the same tactics and failed.

AT ODDS WITH BOARD

Inspector-General Green Likes Camps With Regulars.

WANTS VOLUNTEERS FAVORED

Should Be Given Preference in Matter of Practice Over Regulars—State Military Board Opposed to Government Camp Idea.

Ionia, Mich., Feb. 25.—"I never intended to convey to the public the impression that I thought the state volunteers and the regulars of the federal government should hold separate camps. What I did say was that in a national encampment, composed of both regulars and volunteer troops, the regulars should be made subordinate in attention to the volunteers. The regulars have plenty of opportunity to train themselves both before the volunteers come to camp and after they leave. The volunteer, to get the full benefit of the contract with the regulars, should have first place in the way of receiving instructions from the regulars."

Such was Inspector-General Green's reply last night to the comments made on his recent report to the effect that he disapproved of the principle of holding combined encampments of regular army men and volunteers.

"The state military board understands," he said, "that it is the purpose of the war department to hold these combined encampments every two years. I am quite sure that if one were to be held this year, similar to the one held in Kentucky in 1903, the board would vote to send the Michigan troops to it.

"At the Grand Rapids meeting of the board this week Generals McGurrin and Kidd were appointed a subcommittee to investigate available sites for a state encampment for 1904, and to discuss the matter of regimental or brigade camp. It is not true that it was decided to negotiate with the state land office for a site in Roscommon county or to take over any of the state lands there."

It is understood that the talk of fixing the camp in Roscommon arose from the inquiries of Major-General Bates of Chicago, commander of the department of the lakes, as to available sites in Michigan for a national encampment, and the suggestion that 51,000 acres of state land in Roscommon county might be utilized for that purpose.

Won't Camp With Regulars.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 25.—The state military board held an important meeting in this city and decided that the next encampment of the state militia will be held in Michigan. The board are sore on the government camp in Kentucky, the general sentiment being that the maneuvers there were not of such a nature as to prove instructive to the state militia. The men of the state militia they claim were moved about like puppets for the benefit of the regular army officers. The sentiment is in line with the report presented by Inspector-General Green some time ago.

Many New Independent 'Phones.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 25.—About ninety representatives and managers of independent telephone exchanges in Michigan are attending the state convention which opened Wednesday. In his annual address President Fisher said the independent companies had upwards of 40,000 telephones in the state, an increase of 10,000 in the past year. Several new exchanges have been opened. Chicago will soon be connected and the situation in Detroit is developing according to Fisher. He urged the importance of encouraging the rural service. Dr. G. S. Reed of Hart read a paper on rural service and W. J. Melcher one on telephone accountants. The visitors were given a banquet last night by the Citizens' company.

Retail Grocers Elect Officers.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 25.—The sixth annual convention of the Michigan Retail Grocers and Butchers' association adjourned here to meet next year in Lansing. The following officers for the coming year were elected: President, E. M. Akers, Port Huron; first vice-president, Fred W. Fuller, Grand Rapids; second vice-president, H. J. Schaberg, Kalamazoo; treasurer, J. W. Breckinser, Dowagiac; secretary, J. T. Percival, Port Huron. E. M. Akers was chosen as the delegate to the national convention at San Francisco.

School Teacher Froze Her Leg.

West Branch, Mich., Feb. 25.—While teaching school in Hill township Miss Gertrude Valley froze her foot and leg, but kept at her school until it became so painful that she walked three miles to take a train for home. There is danger of the leg having to be amputated.

Old Navigator Dead.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 25.—One of the old-time navigators of the great lakes, Captain Peter Sinclair, has passed away at his residence, 478 Sixth street. Had he lived until Monday he would have been 84 years of age. Captain Sinclair was born on the Isle of Islay, one of the larger Scotch islands.

Michigan Postmasters.

Washington, Feb. 25.—The president sent to the senate the nomination of Zebedee G. Culver to be postmaster at Reading, Mich. The nomination of Eugene T. Slayton as postmaster at Lapeer, Mich., was confirmed by the senate Wednesday.

ONLY ONE MORE STEP

Panama Canal Bill Is Now Ready to Be Ratified.

SENATE PASSED THE MEASURE

By Vote of 66 to 14—Amendment to Compensate Colombia Turned Down—Bill Providing For Temporary Government Introduced.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The senate Tuesday passed the Panama canal treaty by a vote of 66 to 14.

The result was a foregone conclusion, the interest in the matter being only in the division of the vote on the Democratic side, which was not known definitely until the roll was called, all the Republicans being for ratification.

Two Democrats, Clark (Mont.) and Stone (Mo.), were paired in favor of the treaty and three Democrats, Overman, McLaurin and Martin, were paired against it, so in the total vote 16 Democrats were for the treaty and 17 against it.

The only other vote was on the amendment offered by Senator Bacon, providing for an arrangement to compensate Colombia for loss of the territory of Panama. This was rejected by a vote of 24 to 49.

The debate in executive session was generally on the merits of the treaty with reference to the secret papers which were sent to the senate by the president. Senator Morgan made a set speech, which occupied the greater part of the time.

Senator Kittredge of South Dakota, a member of the inter-oceanic canal committee, immediately after the ratification of the canal treaty Tuesday introduced a bill to provide for the temporary government of the Panama canal territory and the protection of the canal works and for other purposes connected with the construction of the canal.

The first section creates "the Panama board of governors," consisting of three citizens of the United States, not all of whom shall be of the same political party, to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate.

Until congress shall otherwise provide, according to the second section, the legislative, administrative and executive powers possessed by congress and the privileges of the United States on the Isthmus of Panama shall be vested in the board of governors. The powers so vested shall include the power to raise revenue. None of the taxes levied and collected shall be covered into the treasury of the United States, but shall be retained and disbursed by the board for proper purposes.

Ready to Dig.

Everything is ready for the speedy consummation of the canal treaty, and both the war and state departments have made preparations for the next step, the former by the dispatch of troops to the isthmus and the latter by the completion of arrangements for the exchange of ratifications of the treaty, which must take place in Washington. There is no reason why this ceremony should not occur within the next forty-eight hours. M. Bunau-Varilla, the minister from Panama, has already visited the state department in relation to this matter.

The administration intends to press the canal project by all proper methods. As a cabinet officer expressed it, the next step after the appointment of the commission will be "to scratch dirt."

After the vote on the treaty consideration was begun of the agricultural appropriation bill. More than two hours was consumed in the discussion of an amendment making an appropriation for experiments in stock feeding, against which a point of order was made by Mr. Lodge. The point was finally withdrawn and the amendment adopted, but not until rule "16" had made its annual inroads into the valuable time of the senate. The agricultural bill remains the unfinished business.

In the House.

Although the house devoted the entire day to consideration of the naval appropriation bill under the five-minute rule, small progress was made. Amendments were offered in profusion for the perfection of the measure from a Democratic standpoint, but all save an appropriation for the Charleston navy yard were rejected. This matter, presented in a forcible manner by Mr. Legare of South Carolina and amounting to a total of $656,500 to carry on the work on existing contracts, was agreed to.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The war department has issued orders for the entire Third regiment of infantry to proceed to the Isthmus of Panama. The regiment will leave at the earliest possible time on the transports Sumner and McClellan from New York. The regiment is going to Panama to relieve the marines stationed there.

Big Blaze In Battle Creek.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 24.—A disastrous fire devastated nearly one entire block of the downtown district, and only the presence on the roofs of great quantities of snow saved more buildings from being gutted. The fire started in the contracting shop of Lewis & Son's, on Jefferson street, and spread almost immediately to the adjoining structures. Following are the losses: M. M. Lewis & Son, contractors, $7,000; Consolidated Boat Co., $3,000; Rathbun estate, $3,000; Rathbun & Kraft Lumber Co., $1,000; Brown Machine shop, $1,200; Richard Cowan Blind factory, $1,000; Mason & Rathbun, building, $500.

By Emile Gaboriau.

CHAPTER XIV.

"Oh," he said, "madame will tell you that this young man is the son of Gaston de Clameran. She has never doubted it. But the truth is"—

"What?"

"In order to rob her he has perpetrated a gross imposture."

During the last few minutes Raoul had managed to approach the door, hoping to escape while no one was thinking of him. But M. Verduret, watching him out of the corner of one eye, stopped him just as he was about to leave.

"Not so fast, my pretty youth," he said, dragging him into the middle of the room. "Let us have a little conversation before parting. A little explanation will be edifying."

The jeering words and mocking manner of M. Verduret made Raoul turn deadly pale. He started back as if confronted by a phantom.

"The clown!" he gasped.

"The same, friend," said the fat man. "Ah, now that you recognize me, I confess that the clown and myself are one and the same. Yes, I am the jolly clown of the Jandidier ball. Here is the proof."

And, turning up his sleeve, he showed a deep cut on his arm. "If you are not sure, examine this scar," he continued. "I imagine you know the villain that gave me this little decoration that night I was walking along Bourdaloue street. That being the case, you know I have a slight claim upon you and shall expect you to relate to us your little story."

But Raoul was too terrified to utter a word.

M. Fauvel listened without understanding.

"Into what dark depths of shame have we fallen!" he groaned.

"Reassure yourself, monsieur," replied M. Verduret. "After what I have been constrained to tell you little remains. I will finish the story."

He then told how Louis Clameran had concocted his plot to palm off Raoul as Mme. Fauvel's son with a view to extort money from her.

"Can this be possible?" cried Mme. Fauvel.

"Impossible!" cried the banker. "An infamous plot like this could not be executed in our midst."

"All this is false!" said Raoul boldly. "It is a lie!"

M. Verduret turned to Raoul and, bowing with ironical respect, said:

"Monsieur desires proofs, does he? Monsieur shall certainly have convincing ones. I have just left a friend of mine, M. Palot, who brought me valuable information from London. Now, my young gentleman, I will tell you the little story he told me.

"In 1847 Lord Murray, a wealthy and generous nobleman, had a jockey named Spencer, of whom he was very fond. At the Epsom races this jockey was thrown from his horse and killed. Lord Murray grieved over the loss of his favorite and, having no children of his own, declared his intention of adopting Spencer's son, who was then but four years old.

"Thus James Spencer was brought up in affluence as heir to the immense wealth of the noble lord. He was a handsome, intelligent boy and gave satisfaction to his protector until he was sixteen years of age. Then he became intimate with a worthless set of people and turned out badly.

"Lord Murray, who was very indulgent, pardoned many grave faults, but one fine morning he discovered that his adopted son had been imitating his signature upon some checks. He indignantly dismissed him.

"James Spencer had been living in London about four years, managing to support himself by gambling and swindling, when he met Clameran, who offered him 25,000 francs to play a part in a little role which he had arranged."

"You are a detective!" interrupted Raoul.

The fat man smiled grimly.

"At present," he replied, "I am merely a friend of Prosper Bertomy. It depends entirely upon your behavior which character I appear in while settling up this little affair."

"What do you expect me to do?"

"Where are the 350,000 francs which you have stolen?"

The young rascal hesitated a moment.

"The money is in this room," he said.

"Very good. This frankness is creditable and will benefit you. I know that the money is in this room and also exactly where it is to be found. Look in the back of that cupboard."

Raoul saw that his game was lost. He tremblingly went to the cupboard and pulled out several bundles of bank notes and an enormous package of pawnbrokers' tickets.

"Very well done," said M. Verduret as he carefully examined the money and papers. "In this you have acted wisely."

Raoul had counted on this moment, when everybody's attention would be absorbed by the money, to make his escape. Softly he stole toward the door, opened it, slipped out and locked it on the outside. The key was still in the lock.

"He has escaped!" cried M. Fauvel.

"Naturally," replied M. Verduret without turning his head. "I thought he would have sense enough to do that."

"But"—

"Would you have this affair become public? Do you wish a case to be brought into the police court in which your wife is the victim?"

"Oh, monsieur!"

"Then let the rascal go free. Here are the 350,000 francs. Here are receipts for all the articles which he has pawned. We should consider ourselves fortunate. He has kept 50,000 francs. So much the better for you. This sum will enable him to go abroad, and we shall never see him again."

Like every one else, M. Fauvel submitted to the ascendency of M. Verduret. Gradually he had awakened to the true state of affairs. Prospective happiness was possible, and he felt that he was indebted to M. Verduret for more than life. He was not slow in expressing his gratitude. He seized M. Verduret's hand, as if to carry it to his lips, and said, with emotion:

"How can I ever find words to express my appreciation? How can I repay the great service you have rendered me?"

M. Verduret reflected a moment and then said:

"Since you feel under obligations to me I have a favor to ask of you."

"A favor of me? Speak, monsieur. You have but to name it. My fortune and life are at your disposal."

"Well, then, monsieur, I confess I am Prosper's friend and deeply interested in his future. Can you not exonerate him, restore him to his position? You can do more than this, monsieur. He loves Mlle. Madeleine."

"Madeleine shall be his wife, monsieur," interrupted the banker. "I give you my word, and I will so publicly exonerate him that no one shall reproach him with what has been my mistake."

The fat man quietly took up his hat and cane, which stood in a corner, as if he had been paying an ordinary morning call, and turned to leave the room.

"Monsieur," he said before going, "excuse my intruding any advice, but Mme. Fauvel"—

"Andre!" cried the poor woman. "Andre!"

The banker hesitated a moment, then, following the impulse of his heart, ran to his wife and, clasping her in his arms, said:

"No; I will not be so foolish as to struggle against my heart. I do not pardon, Valentine; I forget—I forget all!"

M. Verduret had nothing more to do at Vesinet. Therefore, without taking leave of the banker, he quietly left the room and, taking his cab, ordered the driver to return to Paris and drive to the Hotel du Louvre as rapidly as possible. His mind was filled with anxiety. He knew that Raoul would give him no more trouble. The young rogue was probably taking his passage for some foreign land at that very moment. But Clameran should not escape the punishment he deserved. But how was it possible to inflict this punishment without compromising Mme. Fauvel? M. Verduret thought over the various cases similar to this, but not one among his repertory of expedients could be applied to the present circumstances. After long thought he decided that an accusation of poisoning must come from Oloron. "I will go there and work upon public opinion, so that to satisfy the townspeople the authorities would order an inquest in Gaston's case. But this required time, and Clameran, being warned, would disappear.

It was almost dark when the carriage stopped in front of the Hotel du Louvre. M. Verduret noticed a crowd of people collected together in groups and heard the police crying "Move on!" The crowd would merely separate in one spot to join a more clamorous group a few yards off.

"What has happened?" demanded M. Verduret of a lounger near by.

"A strange thing," replied the man. "He first appeared at that seventh story window. He was only half dressed. Some persons tried to seize him; but, with the agility of a sleepwalker, he jumped out upon the roof, shrieking 'Murder! Murder!' The recklessness of his conduct led me to suppose"—

The gossip stopped short in his narrative, very much astonished. His questioner had vanished.

"Could it be Clameran?" thought M. Verduret.

He pushed through the crowded courtyard of the hotel.

At the foot of the staircase M. Fanferlot and three peculiar looking individuals were standing together.

"Well," cried M. Verduret, "what's the matter?"

"The matter is this," said Fanferlot dejectedly. "I have no luck. You see how it is. This is the only chance I ever had of working out a beautiful case, and, presto, my criminal breaks down!"

"Then it is Clameran who"—

"Of course it is. When the rascal saw me this morning, he scampered off like a hare. On reaching the Boulevard of Schools a sudden idea seemed to seize him, and he struck out for this hotel, probably to get his pile of money. When he arrives, what does he see? These three friends of mine. The sight of them had the effect of a sunstroke upon him. He went raving mad."

"Where is he now?"

"At the prefecture, I suppose. Some policemen handcuffed him and drove off with him in a cab."

"Come with me."

M. Verduret and Fanferlot found Clameran in one of the private cells reserved for dangerous prisoners.

He had on a straitjacket and was struggling violently against three men who were striving to hold him while a physican tried to force him to swallow a potion.

"Help!" he shrieked. "Do you not see him — my brother — coming after me? He wants to poison me!"

M. Verduret took the physician aside and questioned him about the maniac.

"He is in a hopeless state," replied the doctor. "This species of insanity is incurable. He thinks some one is trying to poison him, and nothing will persuade him to eat or drink anything, and as it is impossible to force anything down his throat he will die of starvation after having suffered all the tortures of poison."

M. Verduret, with a shudder, turned to leave the prefecture, saying to Fanferlot:

"Mme. Fauvel is saved. God has punished Clameran."

"That doesn't help me," grumbled Fanferlot. "All my trouble has been for nothing. What luck!"

"That is true," replied M. Verduret. "Case 113 will never leave the record office. But console yourself. I will send you as bearer of dispatches to a friend of mine, and what you have lost in fame will be gained in gold."

Later was celebrated at the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette the marriage of M. Prosper Bertomy and Mlle. Madeleine Fauvel.

The banking house is still in Province street, but as M. Fauvel has decided to retire from business and live in the country the name of the firm has been changed and is now Prosper Bertomy & Co.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

A WONDERFUL REMEDY FOR THE DRINK HABIT.

Nearly 1000,000 People in the United States have been permanently cured of Intemperance by

ORRINE.

For ages the curse of intemperance has afflicted mankind, claiming its millions of victims every year and causing more untimely deaths than all the wars of history.

In days gone by the drunkard was an object of contempt, spurned and loathed by all, because it was the commonly accepted theory that to cure his drinking habit was a matter of exercise of will power alone.

Physicians, however, have long since recognized that drunkenness is a physical disease, requiring physical treatment. The diseased condition of the nerves of the stomach and the inflamed stomach linings and membranes, produced by over-indulgence in alcoholic stimulants, in the vast majority of cases require medical treatment to effect a cure.

To permanently remove the craving for liquor by restoring the stomach and digestive organs to their normal conditions, a wonderful preparation called ORRINE has been placed upon the market, and is now sold all over the United States, recommended and endorsed by the leading druggists and by thousands of physicians, nearly one hundred thousand cured inebriates and many members of the W. C. T. U. and Y. M. C. A., as well as many clergymen, temperance lecturers, etc.

The price is $1 per box, or six boxes for $5. In every package there is a registered guarantee to return the money if ORRINE fails to do all that is claimed for it. The remedy is simple, harmless and sure, contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind or description, will cure the drink habit without leaving any bad effects and can be given secretly without the patient's knowledge, if desired. The remedy can be taken at home, thereby rendering sanitarium treatment unnecessary.

If ORRINE will do for those addicted to the drink habit what nearly one hundred thousand people all over the United States say it has done for them, surely it is worth many times its price and is a very wonderful remedy indeed. The medical principles upon which ORRINE is founded would warrant its use as a stomach tonic, and as the money will be refunded if it fails of its purpose surely those who have need for such a remedy run no risk whatever in giving it a fair trial.

An early riser.

A strong, healthy, active constitution depends largely on the condition of the liver. The famous little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers not only clense the system but they strengthen the action of the liver and rebuild the tissues supporting that organ. Little Early Risers are easy to act, they never gripe and yet they are absolutely certain to produce results that are satisfactory in all cases. Sold by C. A. Wright.

Among those who were recently snow banked abroad railroad trains was F. J. Hough, the 81-year-old bicycle champion of Michigan, i. e., he is champion of all the 81-year-old riders and nine-tenths of those of any age. Near Cox Junction his train bumped into a drift that stopped the car. Many were helpless in the emergency, but Mr. Hough was not. He simply hopped off the train and taking his grip in hand and overcoat on his arm, struck out on foot and wallowed the "beautiful" four miles to Spring Lake. He is now trying to study out some kind of a winter "bike" for such emergencies. Detroit Tribune

A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell and it means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup. Mrs. P. Cordier, of Mannington, Ky., writes: "My three year old girl had a severe case of croup; the doctor said she could not live. I got a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar, the first dose gave quick relief and saved her life." Refuse substitutes. Sold by J. J. Orr.

A Cure for Eczema.

My baby had Eczema so badly that its head was a solid mass of scabs, and its hair all came out. I tried many remedies but none seemed to do any permanent good until I used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. The Eczema is cured, the scabs are gone and the little one's scalp is perfectly clean and healthy, and its hair is growing beautifully again. I cannot give too much praise to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve.—Frank Farmer, Bluff City, Ky. In buying Witch Hazel Salve look out for counterfiets. DeWitt's is the original and the only one containing pure Witch Hazel. The name E C. DeWitt & Co. is on every box. Sold by C. A. Wright.

A man ought to talk only as loud as he lives.

"Do it Tody."

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TODAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c;

The man with a new sealskin cap takes the open winter as a personal affront.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, Feb. 20, 1904.

The absence of eleven Senators and Representatives to attend Senator Hanna's funeral does not seem to diminish Congressional activity. Still the official artificiers go merrily on fashioning the weapons for the fall campaign and putting in definite shape the armor they are to wear. All the week the discussion has centered upon the Panama canal treaty and the proposition to fortify the Philippine Islands.

Both branches of Congress still insist that the way to "honor" a dead colleague is to visit his home in great numbers in what is virtually a pleasure excursion at the expense of the government. Two chartered trains of Pullman cars now lie upon a siding at Cleveland employed at government expense to carry the family and friends of the dead Senator and eleven Senators and thirty Representatives, their clerks, servants, and reporters. These trains are sumptuously furnished and provisioned very completely from a gastronomic point of view. Food and drink are furnished free and in unlimited quantities to these 60 participants in a government picnic. The choicest brand of liquors are provided and cigars that cost 50 cents a piece are distributed, each inclosed with its aroma in a dainty vial lassoed with a blue ribbon. If the people who pay the taxes approve of this sort of thing, then, as remarked, this is the sort of thing they approve of. Some think that the dead statesman would be honored just as much if a committee of two, one from each house, accompanied his body homeward, providing for themselves only the comforts of an ordinary Pullman. The expense of this junket will perhaps be in the neighborhood of $12,000.

Rev. Cortland Meyers of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in this city addressing the Y. M. C. A. After returning home he said that he shook hands with the President while here; and he fervently added: "I do not think I have washed that hand with soap since. I do not think I will ever lose the memory of that clasp. I would like to take that splendid grip with me out of this world into the next." Is this an effort to bear the soap market?

The extraordinary conduct of Mr. Shafroth, Dem., in quitting congress and giving his seat to his republican rival because he felt there had been fraud at the election from which he had inadvertently profited, created a buzz of enthusiastic compliment and admiration in the capitol. Perhaps Colorado will find some way to express her appreciation of such straight forward integrity.

The national museum in this city will have a very choice and interesting exhibition at the St. Louis fair of the most artistic things made by the Indians of the new world, illustrating the Indian's sense of the beautiful. While not so large as the exhibition at Chicago, it will be superior in quality. The best of all these objects having an aesthetic value, selected from the largest collection in the world, will be sent to St. Louis as an object lesson to civilized people demonstrating that the untutored Indian enjoys beautiful things and knows how to create them. The exhibit will be under the management of Prof Holmes and will include examples of articles in stone, wood, metal, clay, skins, textiles, and architecture. The gold ware of ancient Colombia, Mexico and Peru will be reproduced; also models, made to scale, of three temples from South Mexico. There will be a large and beautiful display of basketry. Probably there is not a white women in the United States who can make as fine a basket as an Indian woman, or weave a blanket of any kind. Hand-weaving, which might be profitable and useful as well as artistic, appears to be lost art, save among Indians. There ought to be a simple hand-loom in every home, where small rugs, sofa cushions, pieces for upholstering, borders for portieres, and other bits of art stuff could be manufactured. It is thought that when the public sees what the Indian can do by hand aided by very simple appliances, there will be a desire to accomplish similar results.

Whiskey and Beer Habit

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

"ORRINE,"

ABSOLUTELY SAFE, SURE AND HARMLESS.

Physicians pronounce drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Continued indulgence in whiskey, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and stupefies the digestive organs, thus destroying the digestion and ruining the health. No "will power" can heal the inflamed stomach membranes.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor by acting directly on the affected nerves, restoring the stomach and digestive organs to normal conditions, improving the appetite and restoring the health. Can be given secretly if desired.

Cure Effected or Money Refunded.

Ask your druggist whom you know what he thinks of ORRINE; he will indorse our statements as truthful in every respect. If ORRINE fails to cure we will refund you every penny paid for it as cheerfully as we took it.

No Sanitarium Treatment or Publicity!
No Absence from home or loss of time!

Mothers, wives and sisters, you cannot cure those who are afflicted with this most terrible of all diseases by your fervent prayers, or eyes red with tears, nor by your hope that they may stop drinking. It can be done only with ORRINE. You have the remedy—will you use it? If you desire to cure without the knowledge of the patient, buy ORRINE No. 1; if the patient desires to be cured of his own free will, buy ORRINE No. 2. Full directions found in each package. Price $1 per box.

☞ We will gladly furnish a treatment free of cost to any physician to demonstrate that Orrine is a positive specific for drunkenness. ☜

MOST SACRED PAGODA.

The People of India Worshiping Their Idols Shown in Detail.

You have often read of the sacred shrines in India and of the manner of worship by the natives. You have also read of the magnificent temples, embellished with the most costly metals and precious stones. A moving picture of the exterior, interior and acts of worship in the most sacred pagoda in Burmah, India, was secured by Lyman H. Howe and it will be shown in the exhibition to be given in the New Bradley on Monday, Feb. 29. The picture will be shown in the original colors of the shrine and of the people and their dress and it will be one of the most interesting of the series of many subjects. Mr. Howe has secured a large number of the most exclusive pictures from all parts of the world and they will all be shown. Although this season's exhibition is much more costly than former ones there will be no advance in the price of admission.

A PLEASANT DAY

The Adrian Womens' Club are Hostesses on

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

At Everiss Hall in Adrian, to the Ladies of the Monday Club of this place.

About thirty-eight of the members of the Monday club enjoyed the hospitality of the Adrian woman's club at Adrian last Tuesday afternoon. A special train due to leave Tecumseh at 1:30, but was delayed nearly a couple of hours, carried them over. On their arrival at the hall they were welcomed by the president, Miss Mary Miller.

The hall was handsomely decorated with flags and the pictures of Martha and George Washington were draped in our nation's colors. Queen Wilhelmina's portrait occupied a prominent position as the Adrian ladies are studying the history of Holland this year and on the president's table was a small cherry tree, loaded with its fruit. Mrs. Tobias was dressed as Martha Washington, and acted as hostess.

After the greetings the first number on the program, which was a song entitled, "Star Spangled Banner," was given by the company. An exceedingly interesting paper was read by Mrs. Frank Clay, her subject "The Story of George Washington." Mrs. Clay proved the hatchet story to be true, and strongly defended George for cutting down the cherry tree. Mrs. W. H. Rogers gave the Russia and Japanese national airs as piano solos, followed by recitation, "The Flag of Washington" by Miss Leese. Miss Wright rendered a solo in a pleasing manner, entitled "Columbia". For an encore she gave 'My own United States." She was accompanied by Prof. Cluff.

Mrs. R. W. Boyd read an original poem entitled "George and the Cherry Tree," which was as follows:

Now, we all know well the story,
And, perhaps, we in it glory:
What George Washington, the Father of his Country,—he Did when he was but a boy,
Seemingly with careless joy—
He chopped down his father's favorite cherry tree.

First his father and his mother—
First the one and then the other,
Had endeavored to teach George that ever truthful he must be.
Most especially, must he never
On occasion whatsoever,
Harm his father's favorite cherry tree.

And in all things else, however,
He put forth his best endeavor.
And he seemed a model child to be.
But, for some untold reason—
Some inherent trace of treason—
He cut down his father's favorite cherry tree.

Had this been his only sinning;
Surely, 'twas a small beginning.
But "from little acorns oaks tremendous sometimes be."
And his parents feared that sorrow
From the future he might borrow—
Cutting down his father's favorite cherry tree.

With his hatchet, bright and shining,
All his thoughts to blows inclining—
He from careful admonitions all cast free,
Did with force and fervor blended,
And with strenuous action splendid
Hack and hew his father's favorite cherry tree.

Then—remorse he quickly buries,
As he spies the ruddy cherries
Now, within his reach as lowly in the dust they be
And he revels in their sweetness,
As he strips them off with fleetness
From his father's fallen favorite cherry tree.

Later, through his orchard strolling,
Like unto a bell's slow tolling,
Came that father, fondly gazing—he
With his soul in pride uplifted,
And his eyes on all things drifted;
But they failed to find his favorite cherry tree.

Till in wonder and amazement
He discovered the displacement
Of the one of all things he had ever loved to see.
And his sorrow was heart-breaking,
And no comfort could he take in—
Sadly gazing on his fallen favorite cherry tree.

"Who has done this thing so shameful;
Who for this deed is most blameful?
Let me find him, whomsoever he may be."
In his terror George had fled
Promptly to a near-by shed,
Leaving prone the favorite cherry tree.

But his better nature reaching,
Through his childhood's truthful teaching—
Caused him from this refuge quickly now to flee;
And, with courage in his eye,
Cried, "O, I cannot tell a lie.
Father, I cut down your favorite cherry tree!"

"With this hatchet that you bought me.
Ah, how little then you thought me
Capable of crime, like such as this you see.
But, transported with the gladness,
Of its sharpness, I in madness,
Cut and felled your favorite cherry tree."

"George, with anger I have striven,
But my boy, you are forgiven;
And my pride shall henceforth in your honor be;
For, I'd rather have my son
Prove his worth, as you have done,
Than to own the world's most famous cherry tree."

This, our self-same famous George,
Hero of old Valley Forge,
And in revolutionary battles brave was he.
But the hand that ruled this nation
With such grand determination,
Was the same that felled his father's favorite cherry tree.

Mrs E. E. Marble read a love letter written by her great grandfather, William Harrington in 1794, which was very amusing. The company then sang, "America."

The supper was then served at small tables, and Mrs. Marble was assisted in the serving by a number of the ladies who were attired in white aprons, kerchiefs and caps. The favors were cards containing the picture of George Washington and the letters, A. W. C. A collection of curios were on exhibition among them, a flax wheel, a sugar and creamer made of silver dollars and a silver tankard over 100 years old. Several of the ladies were dressed in old fashioned clothes. The return trip was made about nine o'clock. The afternoon so pleasantly spent will long be remembered by the ladies of the Monday club, and the Adrian ladies proved to be royal entertainers.

THE CHURCHES.

At the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning the pastor will preach on the subject, "The Use of Opportunities."

On Sabbath morning the regular services will be resumed in all the churches. In the afternoon there will be a union service for men only in the Methodist church. The pastor of the Methodist church will deliver an address on, "The Railroad to Hell." There will be a union mass meeting for everybody in the evening. Rev. D. Bancroft of Ann Arbor, will preach. Let everyone plan to attend these services.

MACCABEES.

The Lady Maccabees on Monday night have a nice program.

THURSDAY NIGHT

The Sir Knights initiated a class of 150 at the New Bradley and entertained the Lady Maccabees afterwards.

A regular review and initiation of Tecumseh hive 784 L. O. T. M. M. was held at their hall Monday night. Even though the new officers had only been installed four weeks, the work went off with a snap and rigor very pleasing to the ladies. After the initiation the committee had a little entertainment prepared in honor of Washington's birthday.

Little hatchets of white paper written with black ink and tied with red ribbon were given to one side of the hall. They had the question of a conundrum on them. The ladies on the other side received similar hatchets written in red ink and tied with black, which had the answer on. In this way the partners were secured for refreshments.

The chairman announced that the topics on hatchets were to be used in a guessing contest. It would cost each one 2 cents for a guess and the money was to start a flower fund. They were to guess the combined weights of the Lady Commander, Ferguson's cow, Fire team Chase's cat, 10 quarts sweet cider Commodore Hayden, this hatchet, Don Bowen's two month's old babe, our piano, and the brick.

Mrs. James Henderson guessed nearest and received a box containing some pretty calendars and a beautiful embroidered doiley.

After this oranges, bananas, and stuffed dates were passed. Every one enjoyed themselves immensely and voted this committee the best one on the list.

ENTERTAINMENT OF THE LADIES OF THE MACCABEES BY THE SIR KNIGHTS.

Last evening the Sir Knights initiated a class of 150 into the mysteries of the order, at the New Bradley. They had with them Dr. Sleneau of Port Huron, who delivered an able address. A. M. Slay, B. J. Gardner and Corrall Bros. of Port Huron, were also there and took part in the evening's program.

After the initiation by the Sir Knights in the opera house a committee of them came to the regular hall, where nearly 300 Ladies of the Maccabees were awaiting them. They were members of the Hives of Holloway, Clinton, Britton and Tecumseh with the wives and sweethearts of the Sir Knights, not members. This committee led the Ladies to the opera house, where a very elaborate and entertaining program had been prepared for their benefit by the Sir Knights.

Great Past Lady Commander Bailey was with the ladies and gave them a very instructive address before they left their hall as well as before the assembled crowd at the opera house. The Ladies wish to extend their thanks for their careful consideration by the Sir Knights.

A prize of badges was given to the lodge, who took in the largest number of candidates, the Britton lodge carrying off the prize, as they took in 63.

"BEN HUR"

The Grandest Spectacle of the Century.

To be Staged in Detroit, Mich.

Klaw & Erlanger's massively ornate spectacle, "Ben Hur," is to be staged at the Detroit Opera House, Detroit, Michigan, for the week beginning Monday evening, March 14, and ending Saturday evening, March 19, with special matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The dramatization of General Lew Wallace's great novel has been seen very little outside of New York. William Young, who made the dramatization, succeeding most admirably in the production of a drama which not only retains the most absolute fidelity to General Wallace's great book but which does not offend the most devout Christian. Professor Edgar Stillman Kelly has heightened the solemnity of "Ben Hur" with music that is a positive delight to the ear. The stage settings provided by Klaw & Erlanger have never been equaled in this country. The pictures of the "Star of Bethlehem," the "City of Jerusalem" from the terrace garden of the palace of Hur in Judea, the "Interior of a Roman Gallery," the "Grove of Daphne," the "Fountain of Castalia," the "Chariot Race," the "Vale of Hinnon" and the "Mount of Olives" are remarkable exhibits of the best scenic art. To these are added some wonderful effects in lighting, as in the "Star of Bethlehem," and in stage mechanics, as shown in the thrilling chariot race. The contrivances that go to make up the chariot race cost more than $15,000. Eight horses run in full view of the audience.

The great scene which closes the play is the healing of the lepers on Mount Olivet. Here hundreds of people are arranged in picturesque groupings, the whole forming one of the most beautiful pictures ever put upon the stage. The personality of the Nazarene is not shown in the play, but in this scene the nearness of His presence is indicated with the most intense impressiveness by a shaft of the purest white light. The dramatization is carefully constructed so as to remove it from the domain of the so-called Passion plays, and while the Savior is only referred to, yet His tremendous dominating power is felt with thrilling effect.

The advance sale of seats [illegible] "Ben Hur" engagement will open [illegible] troit Thursday, March 10, when orders for seats for any of the performances, if accompanied by a postal or express order and a self-addressed stamped envelope for reply, will be filled in the order of their receipt. Address all communications to B. C. Whitney, Manager Detroit Opera House, Detroit, Michigan.

CURES WITHOUT STOMACH DOSING.

A long stride toward solving the mystery of curing catarrh was taken with the discovery of Hyomei. In fact, the percentage of cures by this treatment proves it equal to the final tests.

The folly of taking medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh of the nose, throat and lungs, has been realized by physicians, but not until Hyomei was known, had they a practical method that would obviate stomach drugging.

A complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1 and consists of a neat pocket inhaler that can be used anywhere without attracting attention, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathing Hyomei through the inhaler, every particle of air that enters the nose, throat and lungs is charged with a healing balsam that soothes and allays all irritation, kills the catarrhal germs and enriches the blood with additional ozone.

C. A. Wright has so much faith in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh, that he is selling it under he personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not give positive relief.

B. F. REYNOLDS,

REASONS

Why our Vinol is the Greatest Health Restorer and Strength Creator Known to Medicine.

Because Vinol contains in a concentrated form ALL of the medicinal curative elements found in cod liver oil, but without a drop of oil to nauseate and upset the stomach; therefore, wherever old-fashioned cod liver oil or emulsions will do good, Vinol will do far more good.

Because we have never sold anything in our store equal to Vinol to restore health and create strength for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers, and after a severe sickness.

A prominent physician writes:

"Vinol is the most palatable and valuable preparation of cod liver oil ever compounded. I now use it entirely in all cases where I formerly depended upon old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions."

Try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if you are not satisfied.

UNCOMMON WISDOM.

Some Tecumseh People Profit by Neighbors' Experience.

It's a wise man who profits by the experience of his friends and neighbors. Here is a chance to do it, and every man, woman or child in Tecumseh who knows the misery of a bad back, the nervousness and restlessness caused by kidney complaint or the annoyance of urinary disorders, will show uncommon wisdom to profit by this citizen's advice.

Ex-Postmaster J. W. Wightman, well-known to every reader of this statement, says: "I have no hesitation in endorsing Doan's Kidney Pills procured at C. A. Wright's drug store. They have been used in my family and the most satisfactory results followed the treatment. They proved to be a remedy of merit. You can use my name to that effect if you think proper."

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

After arguing with a man for half an hour a woman invariably says: "Now why can't you be sensible?"

Scald head is an eczema of the scalp—very severe sometimes, but it can be cured. Doan's Ointment quick and permanent in its results. At any drug store for 50 cents.

Sandwich in Kent, England was once a seaport though it is now two miles from the shore.

Too late to cure a cold after consumption has fastened its deadly grip on the lungs. Take Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup while yet there is time.

Women have a sympathetic liking for cats because the latter always seem ll at ease when there is a man around.

COURAGE OF AMERICANS

By Not Giving in to Rheumatism They Find Relief from Pain.

Americans do not sit down and cry over their troubles, but look around for a way out; that was the way Athlophoros was created—to drive the Uric acid from the blood—the cause of Rheumatism.

Uric acid in the blood is likened to floating ice in a river—we all know how ice congests commerce and retards progress—Uric acid is the same—it prevents proper circulation of the blood, besides poisoning it, and brings on complications with the stomach, kidneys and heart.

Many people think they have Dyspepsia, Bright's Disease and Heart Trouble, whereas once rid of the Uric acid they are freed from all, as well as their Rheumatism. Athlophoros goes to the seat of the trouble and quickly forces out the Uric acid—improvement is noted at once and the cure is sure—one bottle will prove if you are being helped—it only costs you the price of one bottle to test it—All druggists sell it—if not, send $1 to The Athlophoros Co., New Haven, Conn. Don't sit still and suffer.

Tendency of the Times.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

It depends on whether you are going to bed or getting up if 2 o'clock a. m. is early or late.

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love; pleasure bestowed upon a grateful mind was never sterile, but generally gratitude begets reward.

AT FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

Good Roads and Dairying Main Topics For One Day.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 25.—The all-embracing character of the Farmers' Institute round-up was strikingly illustrated Wednesday when nearly 1,000 of the top of the agricultural profession assembled under the several roofs of the state college and thus camped proceeded to barter idea for idea and experience for experience in the upbuilding of the rural prosperity.

Dairying interests seem paramount and the warmest discussions bear on dairy themes. The women are in evidence and a woman's congress is under way. The home, as made a happy retreat by the farm wife, was discussed in the women's building. In the evening good roads were uppermost, and experts from far and near contributed valuable suggestions.

The pasteurization of milk proved a live topic. The process got its knocks and its boosts, particularly its knocks.

The morning was a busy one on the college grounds, where various expositions of practical work were made by the professors. Prof. Michels gave a practical butter and milk test at the dairy building. Misses Carpenter and Lyford gave the women visitors an exhibition in practical cooking at the woman's building, and Instructors Gingles and St. John gave demonstrations in needlework. Many visitors turned out in the early morning to attend the 8 a. m. college [illegible]k, and the grounds were peopled with farmers.

Strikers Vote to Hold Out.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 25.—The strikers at the Baltic, Champion and Tri-Mountain mines have again voted unanimously to hold out. The men are quite bitter against Superintendent Denton and last night burned him in effigy. The situation is apparently a deadlock and neither side shows the slightest indication of yielding. Two thousand five hundred men are idle.

Veterinary Surgeons' Association.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 25.—The Wolverine Veterinary association is holding its fourth annual meeting in this city. Most of the prominent veterinary surgeons of the state are in attendance. The afternoon was devoted to technical papers relating to the profession, and a banquet was served in the evening. A clinic will be held today.

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach caused indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflames the mucous membranes lining the stomach and exposes the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kodol Dyspepsia Cure

ALL FOUR ARE GUILTY

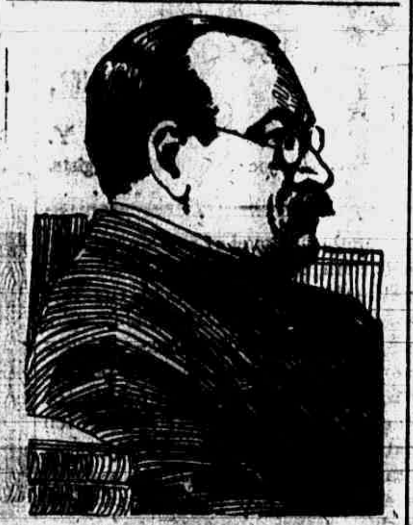
Machen, Lorenz and Two Groffs Convicted of Conspiracy

TO DEFRAUD UNITED STATES

Jury Returns Verdict of "Guilty as Indicted"—Motions Filed For New Trial—Machen Was Thunderstruck—Trial Lasted Seven Weeks.

Washington, Feb. 27.—"Guilty as indicted" was the verdict announced by Carl Peterson, the foreman of the jury in the now famous postoffice conspiracy trial shortly after 8 o'clock last night, stating at the same time that this was the verdict as to all four defendants, August W. Machen, late general superintendent of the rural free delivery division; George E. Lorenz of Toledo, O., and Samuel A. and Diller B. Groff of this city.

The jury had been out nine hours, although the verdict was reached in eight hours and twenty-five minutes. At 7:25 o'clock the jury announced to the deputy marshal outside the jury room that a verdict had been reached; Justice Pritchard was sent for and arrived at the courthouse shortly before 8 o'clock. In the dimly lighted room sat the four defendants. Each wore an anxious look. With impressive dignity the jury to a man arose, and as the words "Guilty as indicted" fell from his lips, the defendants and their counsel seemed appalled. There was very general astonishment that the jury had included in the conviction Samuel A. Groff, the Washington policeman and inventor of the Groff fastener.



AUGUST W. MACHEN.

Five ballots in all were taken. On the first ballot the vote stood 7 to 5 for conviction, on the second 8 to 4, on the third 9 to 3, on the fourth 10 to 2, and on the fifth the vote was unanimous.

Bail Boosted.

Immediately after the verdict was rendered Mr. Charles A. Douglass, in behalf of all four defendants, filed motions for a new trial for an arrest of judgment and also for an appeal for the purpose of having the defendants admitted to bail. Bail was then fixed at $20,000 each, the bond of Lorenz and the two Groffs being increased from $10,000 to that sum.

Next to Samuel A. Groff the most surprised man was Machen, who said he was thunderstruck at the verdict.

Foreman Peterson, after the jury had been discharged, consented to make a brief statement regarding their deliberations. He said that many points were taken up and discussed. The now famous $25,000 note of Lorenz to Machen, he said, had been "discounted" by the jury. The fact that they were out so long, he said, was because on the part of some of the members there were some matters of sentiment, "but," he added, "we overcame that by hard work."

The four defendants will appear before Justice Pritchard today to receive their sentence, which action is necessary upon which to base a motion for a new trial and an appeal.

The trial, which lacking two days, lasted seven weeks.

Bail was furnished last night for each of the four convicted men, the sureties being the same as on the bonds for the amounts fixed prior to conviction, and the defendants were released from custody.

Scaffolding Fell.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—One man was killed, another was probably fatally injured and over a score of workmen had narrow escapes from being crushed beneath a monster scaffold which collapsed in the center of the new postoffice building. The scaffold was built from the main floor of the building, directly beneath its dome to the tenth floor, a distance of 161 feet. Thirty-five men were working about the dome at the time of the accident, and for a time it was thought nearly half this number had been killed by the falling timber, but all escaped with the exception of two plasterers, James Byron and Barney McBride. Byron was instantly killed.

Newspapers Consolidate.

It saved his leg.

COSSACKS AFTER JAPS

Camp Invaded at Ping Nang and Fighting Took Place.

JAPANESE SUPPRESS ALL NEWS

Survivors of Sunken Transports Not Allowed to Talk—News of Heavy Land Fighting Expected in Russia—Rules of War Issued.

Seoul, Feb. 29.—Details of a skirmish at Ping Nang last Friday show that fifty Russian cavalrymen approached the north gate of the Japanese camp and fired at a distance of one thousand meters. A sharp fusillade took place and the Russians retired. All foreigners are safe.

Chefoo, Feb. 29.—While the Japanese report that their fleet is still concentrated in the neighborhood of Port Arthur, yet endeavors are being made to prevent definite information from becoming public. The survivors of the sunken transports who were landed Saturday were not allowed to see anybody and they will be sent home. The Japanese fleet originally consisted of sixteen warships, but two battleships and a dispatch boat are now missing from that number, and from two sources it has been learned that two Japanese warships returned to Sasebo in a disabled condition. It is being circulated among Chinese that Port Arthur has fallen.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 29.—The official announcement by Major General Pflug, chief of staff to Viceroy Alexieff, that Russian cavalry had crossed the Yalu river is expected to be followed shortly by news of rather heavy land fighting, as, according to seemingly trustworthy reports, General Lenevitch has sent a whole army corps of infantry to support the Cossacks, who have penetrated to a point below Anja and who are reported to have beaten the Japanese in several skirmishes.

Nevertheless, if this movement in force is progressing, it must not be assumed that the Russians have taken the offensive, but rather that they are taking up a strong position in northern Korea in order to check the advance of the formidable army of Japanese landing on both shores of Korea while the concentration of Russian troops behind the Yalu is being completed. This concentration is making better progress than is generally believed abroad.

The movement of troops eastward over the trans-Siberian railroad will be greatly accelerated henceforth, as telegraphic reports say that the ice railroad over Lake Baikal was completed Sunday. Up to this time the tracks have been used as far as laid, the soldiers marching from the terminus of the line to the other shore.

Rules of war were published officially last night. An august decree had been referred to the ruling senate by the ministry of justice for the laying down of the rules which Russia intends to follow during the war with Japan. The original draft of these rules was indorsed by the czar with the words, "It must be so."

According to rule 1, Japanese subjects will be allowed during the war to remain in Russia under the protection of the law and will be permitted to pursue peaceful occupations.

VLADIVOSTOCK BLOCKADED.

Japs Holding Out Against Russia's Other Railroad Terminal.

London, Feb. 29.—Vladivostock has been blockaded by a Japanese fleet since Thursday, according to a Daily Mail dispatch from Hakodata, which adds that in-coming steamers report Russian cruisers on the east coast of Kinkwasan, in the Bay of Sendai, Japan.

Japanese warships have been reported in the vicinity of Vladivostock, but this report of a blockade, although considered probable, has not yet been confirmed from other sources.

WAR NOTES.

A shipment of 600 horses was about to be lowered into a steamer at Libau, Russia, when it was stopped by the authorities. The horses were believed to have been bought by British agents for Japan.

Viceroy Alexieff has arrived at Mukden, where he probably will remain until the reorganization of the forces has been completed. He has been living aboard a train, but enters his headquarters today.

The movement of troops on the trans-Siberian railroad has attained unprecedented proportions. Trains going east are filled with troops. All trains from Manchuria are crowded with women and children.

A Tientsin correspondent says the Russians are interfering with the imperial railway telegraphs. On Feb. 27 they demanded that they be allowed to read the telegrams received at Tien Chwang station, where the Chinese authorities have now placed a sentry.

Since Feb. 23 four troop trains have left Paohingfu for the northeastern frontier. The last contingent left Sunday on two trains, completing the force of ten thousand men. The troops are all regulars and their equipment is excellent. They will be replaced by troops from Shantung province.

Blind Man Cremated.

Camden, Mich., Feb. 29.—James Osborn was burned to death at his home, east of town. He was alone at the house when the fire was discovered and it was too late to save him. Mr. Osborn was totally blind and could not save himself. His charred remains were found.

Not Long Separated.

Mackinaw Island, Mich., Feb. 29.—Joseph Wilmot, one of the oldest and most prominent citizens of this place, died Sunday and was soon followed by his wife, who died but a few hours later. The burial services will be held on Wednesday.

HIT IT ABOUT RIGHT

Tax Commissioners' Assessments Not Far Off

ON STATE'S TWO MAIN ROADS

Figures Submitted by Experts Adams and Cooley in Suits Continued in U. S. Courts at Detroit—Justifiable and Fair.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 27.—At the hearing Friday in the big railroad tax case before United States Commissioner Fitch, the Cooley valuations of the physical property of the Michigan Central and Pere Marquette railroads for 1900 and 1902 were introduced in evidence.

Prof. H. C. Adams, the expert employed by the state tax commission to appraise the non-physical property of the railroads, was also on the stand. Prof. Adams' testimony was completed last night. Expert Green of New York will go on the stand today.

Final figures were prepared by Prof. Adams on the capitalization of the net income plan, which showed that the total values of the Michigan Central railway properties were set at $63,698,479. The Pere Marquette properties was fixed at $49,905,940.

Professor Adams contended that his computations were made from a careful study of the stocks and bonds of the Michigan Central railway for a period of five years, ending in 1902.

Prof. Cooley's figures, according to the car mileage basis, are as follows: Cost of construction of the Michigan Central railway in 1900, $42,903,869; allowing for the wear and tear of the property the estimate was set down at $35,463,517. For 1902 the figures were considerably more. The cost to build a road like the Michigan Central railway was set at $51,272,542; the cost, less the estimate for wear and tear, $41,849,810.

Commissioners Dust, Kerr and McLaughlin, who are of the opinion that the railway properties have hitherto been undervalued, have assessed the Michigan Central railway for this year at $55,500,000; the Pere Marquette railway assessment is placed at $37,500,000.

Commissioners Dust and McLaughlin were more than pleased with the reports of the experts, as the estimates were considered justifiable and fair.

LAKE FROZEN OVER.

Ice Windrows Forty Feet High on Old Michigan.

Grand Haven, Mich., Feb. 27.—After being laid up in Milwaukee for three weeks, the Grand Trunk car ferry Grand Haven and the Crosby steamer Naomi arrived in port late Friday afternoon.

Both Capt. McLeod of the car ferry and Capt. Traill of the Naomi assert that in all their years of sailing they never saw such an extensive ice field. Lake Michigan is practically frozen from shore to shore. The only open water is a strip two miles in width off the east shore. Windrows of ice were encountered forty feet high, something unprecedented, making the trip across the lake like a journey in Arctic waters.

Neither boat was damaged from bucking the ice field. The car ferry Grand Haven made remarkable time in the solid blue ice on the west shore. The present tieup was the longest since the celebrated winter of 1885 when the steamer Michigan went down, crushed by ice.

Many Railroad Employes Ill.

Jackson, Mich., Feb. 27.—Sickness has a firm grasp upon the employes of the railroads, and the Michigan Central is having its troubles in this direction. In this city there are about 400 Michigan Central engineers and firemen. Of these fully 150, or 40 per cent, are laying off on sick leave or for some other reason. The railroad company found itself in straits regarding getting engine men and had to resort to posting a notice announcing that no more lay-offs could be considered.

Aged Couple's Double Funeral.

Muskegon, Mich., Feb. 27.—The double funeral of Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, the octogenarian couple, who died within thirty hours of each other, was held here Friday afternoon. They were married at Bath, O., March 6, 1845, and came to Muskegon sixteen years ago. Preparations were being made to celebrate their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary.

Kalkaska Man Has Airship.

Kalkaska, Mich., Feb. 27.—George Wade of Hoxieville is not the only airship owner in northern Michigan, for W. C. Freeman of Kalkaska, the president of the Freeman Manufacturing Co., has one. It will fly, too, and Mr. Freeman will enter the contest for the $100,000 prize at the world's fair next summer in St. Louis.

Struck Heavy Flow of Gas.

Niles, Mich., Feb. 26.—The Umholtz Oil Co., a stock company recently organized to bore for oil on the Umholtz farm, north of this city, struck a vein of gas at a depth of 700 feet last night. The gas took fire and sent a flame thirty feet into the air, which has attracted thither hundreds of people from the surrounding country. This section is declared by high authorities to be in the carboniferous trough, or basin, running from New York state to Pennsylvania, Colorado and California, as well as on a direct line north and south between the Indiana and southern Michigan gas and oil fields.

Working Overtime.

Eight hour laws are ignored by those tireless, little workers—Dr. King's New Life Pills. Millions are always at work, night and day, curing indigestion, biliousness, constipation, sick headache and all stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy, pleasant, safe, sure. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

LIKE ENOCH ARDEN.

Woman Married Again, Believing Husband Dead.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 27.—An Enoch Arden story, with variations, developed in the probate court here. Early in the '80s Joseph N. Reed, a prosperous merchant of Kalamazoo, was married and several children were born to the couple.

One day Reed left home to look after his shipping interests on Lake Michigan, expecting to be gone about a month. He was not heard from again and some time later a body was found on the beach at Algonac which was identified as Reed.

Two years ago the wife, believing herself a widow, married Hiram Elliott, a farmer living in Algonac township, Kent county, and one son was born to them. Some time later it was discovered that Reed was not dead. He knew of his wife's remarriage and tried to keep the fact that he was still living away from her. She has now procured a divorce from Reed and remarried Elliott.

The latter died six weeks ago and then the story came out in the contest over his estate, some of his relatives disputing the title of Mrs. Elliott and her son to the property. The court decided in favor of the widow.

BEES AND FRUITS

Absorbed the Interest of Institute Workers on the Final Day.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 27.—The little busy bee and the luscious fruit have pushed all heavier subjects out with the assembled farmers and agricultural specialists. Friday, the final day of the big industrial round-up, opened with the bee-keepers and allied horticulturists in possession of the college armory. The presiding officer introduced W. Z. Hutchinson of Flint, president of the Michigan Bee-Keepers' association, who read an instructive paper on "Bee-keeping as a specialty."

He was followed by Prof. U. P. Hedrick of the M. A. C., who read a paper on "Bees and fruit." "Small fruit for home use and market," by W. W. Farnsworth, proved another interesting subject skilfully handled.

Veteran Editor Stricken.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Feb. 27.—F. R. Gilson, editor of the Benton Harbor Palladium, is in a critical condition as a result of a stroke of paralysis. He is conscious only part of the time. He cannot articulate, but can understand what is said to him. The physicians say he may last several days. Bright's disease aggravates his condition. Mr. Gilson is well known throughout the state. He is 55 years of age and has been in charge of the Palladium for nineteen years. He has been president of the Michigan Press association and vice-president of the National Editorial association, and last year, in Omaha he lacked just one vote of being elected president of the national association.

Manslaughter Case Settled.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 27.—The case against Fred Murray, charged with manslaughter in having accidentally killed David Pickett in mistake for a deer, has been dropped at the request of the widow. A settlement out of court, presumably on a money basis, was reached.

Wealthy Farmer Missing.

Traverse City, Mich., Feb. 27.—Antoine Solem, a wealthy farmer of Sutton's Bay, has been missing since last Friday. He started for this city with the intention of buying hogs and had a considerable sum of money with him. His friends fear he became lost in the snow and perished.

Jap Took Oratorical Honors.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 27.—Innui Kryosue, a Japanese student at the University of Michigan, took second place in the sophomore literary class oratorical contest. He is the first Japanese student to enter the oratorical lists.

Medical Student Missing.

Battle Creek, Mich., Feb. 27.—H. C. Taylor, a medical student at the Battle Creek sanitarium, has been missing since Monday. He is the son of H. G. Taylor of Westfield, Mass., and is 26 years old. No reason is known for his disappearance.

Plainwell Youth Took Poison.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 27.—J. Roscoe Purcell, grandson of John Crispe, a wealthy merchant of Plainwell, committed suicide last night by carbolic acid. He was 19 years old and despondent owing to ill health.

Austria Expects to Take Hand.

Berlin, Feb. 27.—Austria, it is asserted, expects to intervene in the Balkans in co-operation with Russia. Orders are reported to have been issued to prepare for the mobilization of the army. The commanders of the army corps have been told to grant no leave to officers, and horses liable to requisition have been called and military railway and transport officers have been already appointed.

Old Sweethearts Wed.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 26.—A romance extending over a period of half a century ended in marriage here. William E. Leach and Miss Donahue, both 70 years of age, were the participants. Leach lives in Galesburg, Ill., and Miss Donahue resides at East China, this county. The aged bride was never married before, but always cherished her little romance of fifty years ago, when Leach and she were sweethearts. Leach has been married once before, but after a lapse of half a century came back to claim the sweetheart of his younger days.

Colds are Dangerous.

How often you hear it remarked, "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. Sold by all druggists.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

No other medicine acts like it; no other medicine has done so much real, substantial good, no other medicine has restored health and strength at so little cost.

"I was troubled with scrofula and came near losing my eyesight. For four months I could not see to do anything. After taking two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I could see to walk, and when I had taken eight bottles I could see as well as ever." SUSIE A. HAIRSTON, Withers, N. C.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure i the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Severe Cold for Three Months.

The following letter from A. Nusbaum of Batesville, Ind., tells its own story. "I suffered for 3 months with a severe cold. A druggist prepared me some medicine and physician prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I then tried Foley's Honey and Tar and eight doses cured me." Refuse substitutes. Sold by all druggists.

More Riots.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the liver or kidneys as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and effective nervine and the greatest all around medicine for run down systems. It dispels nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia and expels malaria germs. Only 50c and satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist.

Wakeful Children.

For a long time the two year old child of Mr. L. McPherson, 59 Tenth St. Harrisburg, Pa., would sleep but two or three hours in the early part of the night which made it very hard for her parents. Her mother concluded that the child had stomach trouble and gave her one half of a Chamberlain stomach and liver tablet which quieted her stomach and she slept the whole night through. Two boxes of these tablets have effected a permanent cure and she is now well and strong. For sale by all druggists.

The man who belongs altogether to the devil is generally last to find it out.

Dangers of Pneumonia.

A cold at this time if neglected is liable to cause pneumonia which is so often fatal even when the patient has recovered the lungs are weakened, making them pecularily susceptable to the developement of consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar will stop the cough and prevent pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

Shadow Superstitions.

Our proverb, "Devil catch the hindmost," is based on one of the curious shadow legends. According to the fable, the devil had a regular school at Toledo, Spain. Commencement was inaugurated by the graduating class running through a long subterranean hall. The devil hid at a place known only to himself, and if he "caught the hindmost" he ever after claimed him or her as his special property. Sometimes he only caught the shadow, and the persons thus deprived of their "second self" were supposed to make the best astrologers and magicians.

Nearly all East Indian tribes as well as the Malayans and several African sects believe that if a man walks along the south bank of a river casting his shadow across the water a crocodile will seize it and thus draw the owner to certain death.

Several writers, Fiske among the rest, say that the Zulus have a superstition similar to that of the old Babylonians—viz, that a dead body has no shadow. The Modocs and the Klamaths of Oregon formerly refused to have their pictures taken for fear that the process would take away their shadows. In the Aryan folk tale the "witchdalo," or "infernal Sabbath," was celebrated only by witches' shadows.

Hitch Your Wagon to a Star.

A student of the horse thus explains where Emerson's epigram, "Hitch your wagon to a star," originated: Long before the war there was a famous trotting stallion of the name of American Star, belonging to one Seely. American Star mares became scattered all through New England and New York, for they were the best roadsters in the country, and every farmer must have one. It soon became well understood that in order not to lose the respect of the community one must drive nothing else. Later it became a subject of banter. If one farmer passed another on the road, he would look over his shoulder and shout, "Why don't you hitch your wagon to a star?" Unquestionably Emerson many a time had heard the remark, and in his lecture on "American Civilization" at the Smithsonian institution in 1862 he rung it in for the first time, advising mankind in general to aim high and "Hitch your wagon to a star," thus converting a common incident into a figurative allusion.

Queer African Mask.

Grotesque masks are worn in many parts of Africa during dances and religious ceremonies. The reason is because a symbolic significance is attached to them and they are especially supposed to possess the power of preserving those who wear them from the influence of evil spirits.

The masks are generally made of wood, and some are carved with rare skill. When a chief or the head of a family dies, he leaves his mask to his successor, and the latter is bound to wear it. In every village there is an artist who repairs masks and occasionally makes a few new ones, and it is said that no one does a more thriving business than he.

Ethnologists have been trying to find out the exact time when these masks first came into use, but all they have learned as yet is that they have been popular in Africa for many centuries.

Somnambulism.

Somnambulism? What is it? Did you ever walk in your sleep? If so, you know just about as much about this strange use of the faculties and senses of the mind and the body as does the average physician. Somnambulism has been a mystery and a matter of discussion to the medical profession since the days of the ancients. They knew as well as we all now know that there is such a thing as somnambulism or walking in the sleep. They attempted to explain it just as modern medical science has been endeavoring to explain it ever since. But as it was then so it is now. There are so many explanations that even the physician is puzzled to decide which to accept.

Ostrich Plumes.

In each wing of an ostrich twenty-six long white plumes grow to maturity in eight months. In the male these are pure white, while those of the female shade to ecru or gray. The short feathers are plucked for tips, and each wing furnishes seventy-five of these. The tail feathers are of a deep old ivory color, and sixty-five of these have a commercial value. In a plucking at the Coronada ostrich farm 300 feathers were obtained from one bird. The female ostrich lays seventy eggs a year.

Waiting For the Change.

"It was too bad to keep you waiting so long for your change," said the smiling shopgirl as she counted it out. "I am afraid I have given you a bad quarter"—

"What!" exclaimed Mr. Tytephist in alarm.

"Oh!" he said, considerably relieved. —Chicago Tribune.

He Tried Again.

Tess—Oh, yes, I feel pretty sure of him. I rejected him when he proposed first because I was positive he'd try again.

Jess—And you were right. He did try again, and I accepted him.—Philadelphia Press.

Scouring Wool.

Our ancestors scoured their wool in tubs, much as our wives and daughters scour our clothes today. In the hand washing of wool a tub was filled with the suds, in which one or two men with long poles stirred the wool until clean, when they lifted it upon a traveling apron, which carried it between a pair of rollers which squeezed out the water. The same principle is applied in the automatic scouring now in vogue.

Great forks or rakes seize the wool as it is carried by rollers from a feeding apron into the iron tanks and by alternating motions of their teeth give it a thorough scouring. Thus cleansed the wool is delivered by rollers to the drying machines, where hot air and great fans are now utilized to extract all the moisture without tearing the fiber.

The Original Use of Canes.

Somebody has been looking up the history of the original use of canes in this country and finds that they were formerly a part of the repertory of the leaders of the church, being at one time the principal badge of the deacon. The deacon's cane was about five feet long, one end being embellished with a big knob, the other with feathers. When the small boy got too noisy or rebelled against the powers that were, he was given a rap on the head with the uncharitable end of the stick. If the head of the family forgot himself while listening to the morning sermon and lapsed into a blissful dream of old times in merry England, the turkey plumes on the deacon's cane feathered him into life again.

When Brignoli Was Excited.

Brignoli always expected an encore, no matter where or what he sang, and if it was not forthcoming he was off in a rage instantly. In some small town he sang his favorite song, "Com e Gentil," a serenade from Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," with unusual care and walked off the stage perfectly satisfied, pausing at the wings to listen to the applause. To his utter amazement there was not a sound of approbation. He strode into the dressing room muttering that he would not respond to an encore; he would refuse to sing another song. Still the house remained silent. "No," he cried to those about him; "I refuse to sing again. I refuse to respond to the encore."

Barbagelata, who was more clever than the ordinary servant, humbly approached and said:

"Signor Brignoli, you sang that like an angel. The people could not appreciate it."

The old fellow nearly wept.

"Barbagelata," he exclaimed, "give me your hand. I did not know you were such a musician. Taglianietra, I must introduce you to Barbagelata, my servant," turning to "Tag," who stood near by. "He is a great musician. He appreciates my singing more than all those fools."

How Mussels Move.

The general impression is that mussels do not move. They fasten themselves to certain objects or they lie in the mud and sand at the bottom of the water, and there they pass their existence. In proof of this the fact is adduced that mussels are at times buried under the sandy deposit when a rush of water carries a lot of soil with it. A naturalist who has devoted much time to the study of these creatures says that mussels do move slowly, and the movement is accomplished in the following manner:

The mussel opens its shell and projects its body to a certain extent from its projecting case. Then it exerts some force whereby it keeps the shell above the soil and uses its body to propel itself along the bottom just in the same way as a land snake gets over the ground. If the sand is examined after the mussel has taken one of these strolls, it will be easy to see two parallel lines caused by the edges of the shell touching the ground.

Snuff Versus Good Humor.

Interesting notes on the snuff taking habit are furnished by the German authorities of the district known as the Bavarian forest. The men there consume on an average half a pound of snuff per day, the tobacco being mixed with ground glass "to sting better." The people in this district are much given to violence, and attacks with the knife are of daily occurrence. For years the prison authorities experienced great difficulties with their charges on account of their uniform obstinacy and finally hit upon the plan of depriving them of snuff. They say that after awhile a great change for the better was noticeable, the men becoming tractable and sensible of their degrading inhumanity.

Immortality of Jokes.

Whoever does not believe in immortality, let him turn his eye upon jokes. No joke has ever been known to die. Even the weakest from its very birth lives forever. Now and then a joke will work overtime too consistently and will have to go to the hospital of temporary oblivion for a rest. But it always returns to do business with a clean bill of health and semioccasionally a new tie or a fresh collar. As a rule, however, it wears the same old celluloid neckband and faded scarf sponged off and benzined by the skillful hands of Time.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Putting Down the Pickle.

"Put down that pickle!"

The words were uttered harshly and hurriedly by the sergeant to an ungracious private who, carried away by his hungry passions, had snatched a pickle from the barrel.

"An' why should I put down the pickle?" queries the private mildly.

"Put down that pickle, that's all I want of you!" returned the sergeant determinedly.

"Down it goes, then!" cried he. And stuffing it into his mouth it quickly disappeared.—Illustrated Bits.

Great Presence of Mind.

"That woman showed wonderful presence of mind when her horse ran away."

"Is that what you call it? She threw down the reins and yelled."

"I know she did, and the horse ran straight down the street. If she had held on to the reins, she would have doubtless steered him into the pavement."

A Mechanical Catastrophe.

Fortunate.

Mrs. Highup—How fortunate it is that we are rich! No one will ever notice it.—New York Weekly.

It Did Him Good.

"I am sorry, doctor, you were not able to attend the supper last night. It would have done you good to be there."

"It has already done me good, madam. I have just prescribed for three of the participants."

No Offense Intended.

At the exhibition of the International Live Stock association in Chicago a portly old gentleman remarked to one of the men in charge of the cattle department, "You don't call this the 'fat stock show' any more, it seems."

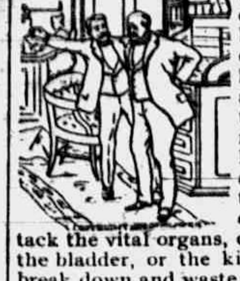
"No," replied the other. "It's quality that counts with us now and not quantity. You can put fat on any kind of an animal, and after it's all done he's nothing but a big, fat—I—I—I beg pardon, sir! I—I hadn't noticed—I didn't mean"—

The portly old gentleman had begun to turn red, and the attempted apology only made the matter worse. After an ineffectual effort to express himself he waddled on in speechless indignation.

Lobsters.

To avoid buying lobsters which have been cooked and laid on ice until all their firmness and sweetness have been sacrificed lay the creature on its back and straighten out the tail. If when the tail is released it springs back into its normal curled position, it may be considered fresh. But if it stays back and seems limp and flabby it is unfit for use.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.



There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, Feb. 27, 1904.

The Agricultural Appropriation bill did not get through the senate without opposition, although it calls for only $6,000,000, while the Army and Navy bills call for $75,000,000 and $96,000,000 respectively. It was up for discussion on Thursday. Senator Bailey wished that we could get back to the times when it was expected that the people would support the government instead of having the government support the people. He said "An extravagant nation can no more escape becoming a corrupt nation than a spendthrift can escape becoming a bankrupt," and he predicted that when we got to a two billion dollar congress the people would wake up and turn out the party that had been in too long. Senator Teller attacked the appropriation for good roads on the ground that it belonged on some other bill and he bitterly assailed the department of commerce as having no excuse for existence except to get its hand in the treasury. "The bill creating it was passed without consideration," he exclaimed; "What function has it except functions that belong to other departments? It spends a heap of money, but what does it do? What does the nation get for it?" he sharply asked and nobody answered.

That was rather an unseemly exhibition on Thursday in the senate, to which Senators Tillman of South Carolina, and Warren of Wyoming, contributed. It began with a bit of horseplay by the latter, who crossed the aisle to the democratic side and cautiously removed a vial from Tillman's pocket, uncorked it, smelt it and put it back while the owner was speaking. The Carolinian, being informed of the trick, and conscious of the observation of the press gallery, rose in his place, blushed as much as he can, exhibited the vial, affirmed that it contained only a harmless medicine for his cold, but he wished the reporters to understand that he drank when he pleased. Mr. Warren rose and apologized for what he had thoughtlessly done, said the senate was a semi-sacred place and added that Mr. Tillman needed no certificate of morals or conduct from anybody, for he was a teetotaler and neither touched nor tasted the accursed thing. Tillman instantly interrupted with "Hold on! You are going altogether too far! I both touch and taste whiskey when I see fit, but, while I sometimes get mellow, I never get drunk,—excepting," he added after a long pause, "at banquets' and even then I never get so drunk that I don't know what's going on and can't get home, you know." Of course the galleries were in an uproar of glee at the foolish exhibition and when both the Senators indulged in fulsome compliments of each other, the ancient models of propriety, like Hoar, Cullom, Teller and Berry, evidently ashamed of the affair, wriggled in their seats and looked as if they would like to get out into the fresh air. It was scarcely relavent to the Agricultural bill under discussion, unless the allusions to the juice of corn might be so regarded. The president of the senate used his gavel briskly and commanded order, trying to recall the two senators to the proprieties of the place.

Your correspondent ran against Gen. Grosvenor yesterday and detained him by the Lapel long enough to say "I see you are betting on Japan, General." "No", he answered, "the betting is off. To see the little nation try to thrash the big one stirred the cockles of my heart a little, but it begins to look reckless., and my time is now all occupied in guessing." I asked him what he guessed. "I guess that Japan will be ahead a year from now," he said, "if the little Japs will stand up and fight white men, man for man. That is the conundram. If they will easily give way, retreat and quit, in short, if they are inferior to white men in staying qualities, they are whipped before they begin. I don't know. Their valor on an open field has yet to be demonstrated."

I had a chance the same day to ask the same question of Brigadier-General A. W. Greely in the signal service bureau of the war department. He looks uncommonly spruce in his khaki uniform and has not grown perceptibly grayer in the last ten years, though a man who went through his Artic experiences is entitled to be very great indeed. "The little Japs have taken a big contract," he answered. "The result must depend on what kind of fighters they are. If they have the courage, qualities which the Russians have repeatedly shown, they will drive the Russians back into Siberia. I don't know as they have. They are insular. They are sailors. They can fight when afloat but fighting on level ground is another thing. The Russians are three or four times as many as the Japs but they are connected with their base of supplies by a single line of railroad five thousand miles long, twice as long as from here to Denver. It is a hard proposition they are up against, and if the Japs will fight like white men, they will cut off Port Arthur, Vladivostock, and perhaps Harbin. Will they stand and be killed or see their file leaders fall dead at their feet? That is the question.

The Senate has ratified the canal treaty and the president has signed it; but the Colombian government has sued the French canal company and while that suit is pending it will be impossible for this government to obtain a clear title to the property. So it cannot pay out a dollar. Thus the whole business is suspended for an indefinite season. For how long? Nobody knows. The Circumlocution Office has got it.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by C. A. Wright.

Good Spirits.

Good spirits don't all come from Kentucky. Their main source is the liver—and all the fine spirits ever made in the Blue Grass State could not remedy a bad liver or the hundred-and-one ill effects it produces. You can't have good spirits and a bad liver at the same time. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. You can put your liver in fine condition by using Green's August Flower—the greatest of all medicines for the liver and stomach and a certain cure for dyspepsia or indigestion. It has been a favorite household remedy for over thirty-five years. August Flower will make your liver healthy and active and thus insure you a liberal supply of "good spirits." Trial size, 25c; regular bottles, 75c. At all druggists.

"OH, MAMMA, Something is Biting Me."

Mothers Read.

It is not itching piles that ails YOU or YOUR CHILD. It's the PIN or SEAT WORM that causes you or your child to have rectal trouble. Soon after retiring for the night the pin worm appears. It bites and stings and causes scratching and aching. The doctor and the man who has the dollar-a-box salve call it piles. Mothers know what it means when the child cries out: "Mamma, something is biting me." And sure enough, upon examining her child she finds the naughty white pin worm, sharp pointed at both ends, imbedded in the child's rectum. This worm causes more nervousness to young and old persons than any other disease, and the itching is not piles but pin worms. The only sure and harmless remedy for this is STEKETEE'S PIN WORM DESTROYER. Do not pay a dollar for a box of salve when 25 cents will cure you and your child. For sale by all druggists, or send 25c postage for 1 box, or 2 for 50c to GEO. G. STEKETEE, Grand Rapids, Mich., proprietor.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

The complete novel of the March Lippincott's Magazine is one to arrest the casual reader and keep him to the last page. It is called "A Provident Woman" and is by Neith Boyce—a new name with a new grip in story-telling. The scenes are sordid ones at first in the toiling metropolis, but shift to new-rich life abroad and at home, with love-making that reeks of trade. It is so real that everybody will think it pictured from his own neighborhood, and yet it is universal in type and episode and original in plot.

* * *

The March number of the Critic prints a timely and momentuous utterance of the President upon "The Mission of the Republican party." Since assuming office, Mr. Roosevelt has written almost nothing for publication so that the present paper is all the more noteworthy. Another timely paper is upon the foretelling, by Bulwer-Lytton, of the discovery of radium. Mr. Arthur Hornblow calls attention to a book of the novelist's in which the description of a certain new force seems now like prophecy.

* * *

In an address to a gathering of newspaper men some time ago, Charles B. Hanford frankly admitted the obligations which men of his own, as well as other professions, are under to the press and ventured the opinion that if Hamlet could be alive today it would be of the journalists rather than of the players that he would say: "They are the abstract and brief chronicles of the time. After your death you were better have a bad epitaph than their ill report while you live."—Pearson's.

In literary features the March Designer is particularly strong. There is a short story "Mis' Osborne's Christenin'," by Mina Welles Tibbot, which supplies the humorous element, and another—"Penelope's Party Waist," by L. M. Montgomery, which inclines toward the practical, while the parlor drama "Mademoiselle Prudence," by Thomas Littlefield Marble furnishes a daintily fantastic love story. "The Carlisle School," by Lilian C. Paschal, describes most entertainingly how the descendants of the original lords of North America are being turned from the wide ways of savagery to the straight and narrow paths of civilization, and the interesting pictorial series, "Women of All Nations," is continued in two especially effective pages.

Whiskey and Beer Habit
PERMANENTLY CURED BY
"ORRINE,"
ABSOLUTELY SAFE, SURE AND HARMLESS.

Physicians pronounce drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Continued indulgence in whiskey, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and stupefies the digestive organs, thus destroying the digestion and ruining the health. No "will power" can heal the inflamed stomach membranes.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor by acting directly on the affected nerves, restoring the stomach and digestive organs to normal conditions, improving the appetite and restoring the health. Can be given secretly if desired.

Cure Effected or Money Refunded.

Ask your druggist whom you know what he thinks of ORRINE; he will indorse our statements as truthful in every respect. If ORRINE fails to cure we will refund you every penny paid for it as cheerfully as we took it.

No Sanitarium Treatment or Publicity!
No Absence from home or loss of time!

Mothers, wives and sisters, you cannot cure those who are afflicted with this most terrible of all diseases by your fervent prayers, or eyes red with tears, nor by your hope that they may stop drinking. It can be done only with ORRINE. You have the remedy—will you use it? If you desire to cure without the knowledge of the patient, buy ORRINE No. 1; if the patient desires to be cured of his own free will, buy ORRINE No. 2. Full directions found in each package. Price $1 per box.

☞ We will gladly furnish a treatment free of cost to any physician to demonstrate that Orrine is a positive specific for drunkenness. ☜

THE PASSION PLAY.

Do Not Fail To See It.

The Passion Play is a sacred drama, founded on the life of Christ, as portrayed in the New Testament. The first Passion Play of which we have any record, was in the fourth century, A. D., among the Greeks; and was called "Christos Paschon." All through the middle ages, different dramas of this nature were portrayed, chiefly by religeous orders. During the Crusades, many similar plays were given for the purpose of stimulating the people to activity in the saving of the Holy City from the hands of the Saracens. At the New Bradley opera house, March 7, admission 15, 25 and 35 cts.

ROUNDABOUT US.

A fire at Evans Lake Hotel last week started from a lamp which was used in thawing out a frozen sink pipe. The 'phone in the house was put into use and a crowd of men soon extinguished the flames.—Onsted News.

Herman Fahselt, a wealthy East Tawas farmer, is very ill of brain fever the result of a fall on the ice which rendered him unconscious in which condition he lay out in the cold for two hours. When he regained consciousness he managed to crawl into the house.—Ex.

Guy Martin lives in Wright and he has a novel manner of catching rats. He recently cut a hole near the bottom of a barrel, and made a door of wire screen which opened inward and then closed automatically. He baited the barrel with corn, and in the morning found he had caught seventeen.—Hudson Post.

George VanAllen was a tramp, and indulged in Hillsdale whiskey, which makes some men see big snakes, while others it makes frisky; with wabbly legs and icy walks he could not stand upright, and when they picked him from the walk his face looked like a fright; a doctor stitched the gashes up, and then in justice court, his honor said ten days in jail was right for such a sport.—Hudson Post.

News comes from Devil's Lake that two men fishing through the ice made the greatest catch of the season one day last week. Besides catching an extraordinary number of small fish, each landed a pickerel that would have made almost any fisherman look wise and happy. One of these weighed nineteen, and the other a trifle over eighteen pounds.—Hudson Gazette.

Blissfield citizens have been victims of a smooth bunco game. About two weeks ago a smooth faced, nice appearing young man went from house to house soliciting orders for enlarging pictures. He gave each person a coupon, upon receipt of 25 cents which was to be presented to the car which would be here about the 14 or 15 of the month. No car appeared to date. Folks who paid the 25 cents are out their cash. Marshall Wood arrested him and he was taken before President Stein after which he was discharged.—Blissfield Advance.

George Tiffany, formerly of this city, is at present holding about as many positions in Alaska as one man can take care of comfortably, and they are all responsible positions too. Besides being the manager of the North American Trading and Transportation company, at Weare, Alaska, Mr. Tiffany is express agent and postmaster. His father who resides in Tecumseh, received a letter from him last week which was dated Dec. 23, 1903. George is still doing well in Alaska and will probably not return to Michigan for about two years.—Hudson Gazette.

When the girl employed at the home of W. F. King went into the cellar on an errand Monday evening, she saw smoke under the rear portion of the kitchen floor and hastening up stairs, she secured a pail of water and dashed it upon the flames. The smoke filled the cellar, and the department was out but not needed. Mr. King can give no explanation of what it was that caught fire or how it caught but is thankful it was discovered at the start. He says he couldn't have set any thing on fire there if he had tried. Several lead pipes were melted leading to and from the pump and sink.—Adrian Press.

Tragedy Averted.

"Just in the nick of time our little boy was saved" writes Mrs. W. Watkins of Pleasant City, Ohio. "Pneumonia had played sad havoc with him and a terrible cough set in besides. Doctors treated him, but he grew worse every day. At length we tried Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, and our darling was saved. He's now sound, and well." Everybody ought to know, it's the only sure cure for coughs, colds and all lung diseases. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Putnams announce the publication of a strong, compelling work of fiction entitled "When it was Dark." "The Story of a Conspiracy" by Guy Thorne. The theme deals largely with the subject of the Christian religion and the power of faith to withstand the most subtle and searching attacks. The story is daring in its conception and treatment and certain to arouse suspicion. The plot is well constructed and appeals powerfully. The reader is conscious of of the power for evil weilded by the blasphemous arch-conspirator and conscious, also, of the horror of great darkness which falls upon a world robbed of its faith and hope. On the other hand, there is a steadfast and inspired faith of Basil Gortre, which in the end dispels the darkness and brings again the light.

The March Atlantic contains several powerful articles on practical questions of the day. It opens with a paper on Abuses of Public Advertising by Chas. Mulford Robison, an officer of the Architectural league of the Park and Outdoor Association and a recognized authority upon outdoor questions and improvements. Dr. Henry Stimson's the Small Business as a School of Manhood treats the gradual elimination of small firms and independent employers by great trusts and corporations, which involves the loss to the nation of a class of independent, self-supporting business men, to the country's great injury.

* * *

It is doubtful if any more charming and alluring bits of brief fiction have been offered the public than "The Little Stories of Married Life," by Mary Stewart Cutting. A particularly delightful effort along this line is made by this writer in the March McClure's entitled "The Terminal." The pathos and trials of the life on the road of the traveling salesman who goes forth to commercial conquest, leaving wife and family behind in sore need of his protecting love and thought are sympathetically presented. Almost a tragedy the little story becomes and it tugs at the heart-strings of every reader whose heart-strings are still attuned to the music of tender and true sentiment all the more rare and attractive when that sentiment is so practical and domestic.

The American boy for February with its title page showing boys snow-balling, its skating story. "The Honor of the School," its "How to Hunt Muskrats," and its first chapter of a biography of Washington, is a model February number for a boy's paper. Other timely features are an illustrated article entitled "Get Ready for the Flowers," written by Dr. Hugo Erichsen, a short biographical sketch of Lieutenant-General Adna R. Chaffee, and a description of "Tarbucket night," Connecticut's pet name for Washington's birthday, further chapters of Kirk Monroe's famous story, "The Blue Dragon," the editor's "Three Yankee Boys in Ireland," "The Drawing Room Magician," and "How to Become Strong" appear in this number.

* * *

Mr. Rollo Ogden, editor of the New York "Evening Post," presents in the form of a dialogue considerations on "The Making of Public Opinion," being imaginary lunch table talk of a Senator, a college president, a doctor of divinity and an editor. Mr. Burroughs returns to the charge in his tilt with what he calls the sentimentalizing of natural history in a paper on "Humanizing the Animals," which is characterized by much plainness of speech. The editor writes of the late John R. Procter, and the need of more scruple in public and private life, and there is a final installment of the familiar and autobiographic Thackery letters, setting forth his "Friendship with an American Family," including this month three letters to Miss Libby Strong and a drawing by the novelist of "Othello and Desdemona."—The Century.

The news of the war between Russia and Japan has been so voluminously reported, and with so many contradictions, that it is a relief to turn to the editorial statement which is presented in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for March, which, in graphic, discriminating style, carries the reader through the mass of reports and rumors and lands him safely in the few but intensely interesting facts. This record is copiously illustrated, and is supplemented by two descriptive articles on the men who are "doing things" for both Russia and Japan.

* * *

Timeliness is only half the problem in good magazine making. The real achievement is to have the subject of the moment treated by the man who knows most about it. For instance, there have been hundreds of sketches of the Tsar of Russia, the paramount figure in the world at the moment. In the February number of Everybody's Magazine there is a character study of the Muscovite autocrat by Arnold White, the well-known English publicist, who is one of the few men outside the Empire familiar with the conditions actually prevailing in Russian court circles. In the same number is an article on "J. Pierpont Morgan's Word as an Asset," which explains the genesis and development of the great power wielded by the eminent financier, and frankly discusses the degree to which recent events have impaired his prestige. The writer is E. J. Edwards (Holland), dean of the New York correspondents, who enjoys a more intimate acquaintance with the big men of Wall Street than any of his contemporaries.

HYOMEI A RECORD BREAKER.

Novel method of curing catarrh. Sold on approval by C. A. Wright.

The popularity and remarkable sales of Hyomei have broken all records. In nearly every city and town in the country, this guaranteed cure for catarrh has given most astonishing results.

The leading druggists are so enthusiastic over the remarkable percentage of cures following the use of Hyomei, that with hardly an exception, they advertise to their customers that Hyomei will be sold with the understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures.

In Tecumseh, C. A. Wright is endorsing it and guaranteeing to refund the money unless Hyomei cures catarrh. He has sold a great many Hyomei outfits, and today, no other treatment for the cure of catarrh has as many friends in Tecumseh and vicinity as Hyomei.

It is a scientific, yet common sense method of treating and curing this too common disease. It sends by direct inhalation to every cell of the air passages in the head, throat and lungs, a balsamic air that destroys all catarrhal germs, purifies the blood with additional ozone, and makes a complete and lasting cure of any catarrhal trouble.

The complete outfit costs but $1, and includes an inhaler, medicine dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment.

You take no risk in buying Hyomei. C. A. Wright positively guarantees to refund your money unless it cures.

SECRETS

At the Price of Suffering.

Woman on her way to semi-invalidism caused by pregnancy suffers much pain. Ignorance prompts her to suffer alone in silence and remain in the dark as to the true cause—motherhood.

Mother's Friend takes the doctor's place and she has no cause for an interview. She is her own doctor, and her modesty is protected. Daily application to the breast and abdomen throughout pregnancy will enable her to undergo the period of gestation in a cheerful mood and rest undisturbed.

Mother's Friend

is a liniment for external use only. It would indeed be shameful if the sacrifice of modesty were necessary to the successful issue of healthy children. All women about to become mothers need send only to a drug store and for $1.00 secure the prize childbirth remedy. Healthy babies are the result of useing Mother's Friend. Our book "Motherhood" mailed free.

Mrs. J. W. Owen, wife of the well known carpenter, living in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am very well pleased with Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at C. A Wright's drug store and they did me a lot of good. I had heart trouble and my kidneys did not preform their proper duties. This condition existed for some time. I tried different remedies which were recommended to me but received little if any benefit from them. I received more permanent relief from their use than from any other medicine I ever used. I am pleased to testify in their value.

Finns Quarrel and One Killed.

Bessemer, Mich., Feb. 29.—At a Finnish row in Jessieville Constantine Kalli stabbed and instantly killed John Peto. The murderer was pursued and hid in a friend's barn. The pursuers hunted through the hay for some time in vain. Finally a pitchfork was run into Kalli, who yelled. He was taken out and is now in jail here. The quarrel was over the late Maki murder. Both were drunk and used knives.

Once Lived in Milan.

Milan, Mich., Feb. 29.—Edward Relger, the crazy man who went to the White House armed with a loaded revolver, and whose persistent efforts to see President Roosevelt caused his arrest, is Frank Coe, who formerly resided in this place and who is a cousin of Mrs. Webb Blackmer. He also has other relatives here. A few years ago Coe shot and killed his wife and attempted to kill himself, but was unsuccessful.

Henry T. Thurber Ill.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 29.—Henry T. Thurber, secretary to Grover Cleveland during the latter's incumbency of the presidential chair, and a former law partner of Don. M. Dickinson, is seriously ill with appendicitis at his home at 578 Jefferson avenue. Mr. Thurber enjoys a wide reputation and is known to still possess the confidence of Cleveland. Not many months ago he was reported to be dead, and he had the unusual experience of reading his own obituary. Sunday morning he was removed from his home to St. Mary's hospital, and Dr. Theodore A. McGraw operated upon him successfully. Last evening his condition was reported as being very favorable and his physicians stated that there was no danger of Mr. Thurber succumbing to the operation.

May Get Naval Station Yet.

Washington, Feb. 27.—An effort will be made to reinstate the $250,000 for the lake naval training station when the naval bill gets into the senate. The location will be fixed at Put-in-Bay. When the bill gets back to the house there will be no opposition, so it is said, to the Lake Erie station. With Muskegon out of the question, even the Michigan delegation is favoring Put-in-Bay.

Wild Man Is Dying.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 26.—Charles Ross of this city, who has become well known throughout Michigan, having been exhibited as the wild man "Tiki" at nearly all the county fairs and presented last fall as "Weelo" on the pike at the state fair at Pontiac, was found ill in his shack of a house a few weeks ago and taken to the county house. Good care, however, and a warm place to sleep does not seem to be the right thing for Charles, as he has steadily become worse and his death is reported as only a matter of a few days.

Detroit Ferries Out of Business.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 26.—With four steamers disabled by the ice, the Detroit, Belle Isle & Windsor Ferry Co has entirely suspended service between Detroit and Windsor. Until at least one boat is repaired or weather conditions lift the ice blockade in the river all traffic will be handled between Joseph Campau avenue and Walkerville. From present indications direct service will not be resumed until next week. Such conditions have not been known before for twenty-five years.

Cow Ate Nails and Died.

Port Huron, Mich., Feb. 26.—Albert E Stevenson of Kimball township, who is regarded as the owner of some of the finest prize cattle in the state, lost one of his most valuable shorthorns in a peculiar manner. In some manner the cow took several nails into its stomach along with its regular food and death ensued suddenly. When cut open one of the nails was found piercing the animal's heart. The cow was known as "Spanish Lady" and had taken prizes at various fairs in the state.

Flint Hydrants Frozen, Too.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 26.—If a big fire should break out in the business portion here, the fate of fire-stricken Baltimore would undoubtedly be that of this city, for with the crippled condition of the local waterworks system, due to no fault in the management, a blaze could sweep almost unhindered through the city. The frost has penetrated so far into the ground as to affect the water mains and in all parts of the city hydrants are frozen.

Killed While Gathering Fuel.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Feb. 26.—While Benjamin Daniels, 52 years old, was gathering bits of coal along the tracks of the Grand Rapids railway the limited shot by, instantly killing the coal picker. There are several tracks at the crossing, and evidently Daniels heard the roar of the approaching train, but mistook the track on which it was running.

Wild Animals Hungry.

Hillman, Mich., Feb. 26.—There has been no thaw in this vicinity since cold weather set in, Nov. 10. Small streams are frozen to the ground, game birds are nearly all destroyed, and wildcats and foxes have become so ravenous that they prowl nightly around farm barns and houses in search of food.

Near an Understanding.

London, Feb. 26.—"It is almost certain," cables the Constantinople correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, "that Turkey and Bulgaria are on the point of reaching a pacific understanding regarding Macedonia."

An Open Letter to the Public

FROM A WELL-KNOWN DRUGGIST

To Whom It May Concern:

Of late there has been a good deal of discussion in regard to advertised medicines and their value. We want to say to every man, woman and child in this vicinity that the most valuable preparation of cod liver oil,—the best tonic reconstructor, health restorer and strength-creator we have ever sold in our store is Vinol.

Vinol is not a patent medicine; it contains no injurious drugs, and it actually does contain all of the medicinal curative elements of cod liver oil, taken from fresh cods' livers, but without a drop of oil, and is delicious to the taste.

Vinol is recognized throughout the world as the greatest strength-creator for old people, weak, sickly women, children, nursing mothers, and after a severe sickness.

Vinol cures hacking coughs, chronic colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Unequalled to create an appetite, and make those who are too thin, fat, rosy and healthy.

READ IT THROUGH.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John Harmon, of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlains Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

Big Cave-In Near Scranton.

Scranton, Pa., Feb. 27.—One of the most extensive cave-ins that the northern anthracite coal region has ever experienced has occurred in West Scranton. The cave-in has affected an area of about forty acres. Several houses have been wrecked and many families hurriedly removed their household goods to places of safety.

Dam at St. Clair Gave Way.

Clare, Mich., Feb. 27.—Sixty feet of the ice dam in the Tobacco river owned by Callam & Cornwall, has been carried away, causing loss of $2,000. The powerhouse was uninjured. Pressure of three feet of ice on the pond was the cause. The dam is used to generate electric power for the Clare roller mills.

JAPAN BLAMES RUSSIA

Justifies Her Action for Beginning the War.

RUSSIA PREPARED FOR CONFLICT

While Peace Negotiations Were Being Conducted—Evident She Was Not Inclined Toward Friendly Settlement—Meant to Force Submission.

Washington, March 1.—A statement just received from his government has just been given out by the Japanese minister. In part it says:

"The Russian government has charged Japan with having treacherously obtained a victory by a sudden attack upon Russian, who was bent upon maintaining peace. It is further asserted in these communiques that since a rupture of diplomatic relations can never be looked upon as the opening of hostilities, and since Japan did not issue a declaration of war until the 11th of February, she has been guilty of a flagrant breach of the principles of international law in making, as early as the 8th of February, most unwarranted attacks on the Russian men-of-war and merchant vessels.

"The answer to these charges may be found in the action of Russia herself. That her government never entertained any sincere desire for peace can be clearly seen from its own conduct. Throughout the whole course of Japan in a moderate and conciliatory the negotiations Russia persistently refused to meet the proposals made by Japan in a moderate and conciliatory spirit. By delays that could not be construed as otherwise than wanton and unnecessary, she put off the settlement of the questions at issue, while at the same time busily extending her naval and military preparations.

"Her warlike preparations in the far east since last April, when she failed to carry out her treaty to evacuate Manchuria, are in full confirmation of these statements.

"There has been the greatest activity possible at Port Arthur and Vladivostok, and work has been carried on day and night to strengthen the fortifications of those naval ports, while forts have been built at Hun Chun, Liao Yan and other strategic points, and large quantities of arms and ammunition have been sent to the far east by the Siberian railway and the vessels of the volunteer fleet. In the middle of October last a train of fourteen cars was hurriedly sent from Russia laden with the equipment of a field hospital.

"From these military and naval preparations of every description, made during the progress of the negotiations, it is quite evident that Russia was not inclined to a friendly settlement of the questions then under discussion between Japan and herself, but sought solely by her military preponderance to force Japan into submission. In view of these facts who can say that Russia had no warlike intentions or that she was unprepared for war? Seeing that the situation had become so critical that it admitted of no further delay, the Japanese government was compelled to break off negotiations that had proven abortive and to take the necessary steps for war protection. But the responsibility for the challenge to war rests not with Japan but solely with Russia.

"On the 6th of February Japan announced to Russia her decision to terminate the pending negotiations and to take such independent action as she might deem best to defend her position menaced by Russia and to protect her established rights and legitimate interests. At the same time the government of Japan informed the Russian government that as its moderate and unselfish proposals in the interest of a firm and lasting peace in the far east had not received the consideration which was their due, Japan had resolved to sever her diplomatic relations with Russia, which for the reason named, had ceased to possess value and to withdraw her legation.

"The term 'independent action' naturally included the opening of hostilities. The fact that Russia was unable to understand it in that light, is, of course, no reason why Japan should be held responsible for the misinterpretation made by Russia. It is the almost unanimous opinion of international jurists that a declaration of war is not an indispensible prerequisite to the opening of hostilities. Indeed it has been the common practice in recent wars to declare war after hostilities have been begun. Japan's action therefore is not open to the least criticism in this regard."

Battle With Moonshiners.

Owingsville, Ky., March 2.—An unconfirmed rumor has reached here that a battle was waged Tuesday in the mountains of Knott county between moonshiners and revenue men. According to the rumor, Wm. and John Maddix, moonshiners, were killed and Jack Combs, a moonshiner, was fatally wounded. One deputy marshal was reported killed. The moonshiners were said to be working in a cave when surprised by the revenue men, and resisted arrest. The report has not yet been definitely confirmd.

Electrocuted on the Street.

Ionia, Mich., March 3.—Charles Bonnell, for years an employe of the Ionia Electric Co., was instantly killed by a live wire on Dexter street. Bonnell was engaged in trimming an arc lamp, the type that lowers to the street, when his body came in tact with an uninsulated wire, knocking him over dead. He was 40 years old, and leaves a widow and two children.

Killed by Fast Train.

Coldwater, Mich., March 3.—J. W. Merryfield, aged 65, was instantly killed by a fast train two miles east of this city. He was walking on the track and the train struck him, cutting his head off. The engineer blew his whistle, but as Merryfield was totally deaf, he did not hear the signal.

It saved his leg.

P. A. Danforth of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For ulcers, wounds, piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25cts. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

JAPS IN POSSESSION

Reported Six Thousand Now Occupy Ping-Yang.

KOREA SENDING TROOPS THERE

Russian Admiral at Port Arthur Reports Japanese Fleet Has Disappeared—Russia Anxious to Retain America's Friendship.

St. Petersburg, March 3.—An official dispatch received from Major General Pflug, Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, dated March 2, says:

"According to the reports of our patrols to Ping-Yang and on the road to Gensan (Wonsan), there was no signs of the enemy. Acording to Korean reports Ping-Yang has been occupied by six thousand Japanese who include 200 cavalrymen. No particulars have been obtained concerning artillery.

"Between 1,000 and 2,000 Korean troops have been sent to Ping-Yang from Seoul. Our patrols on February 28 were within twelve versts (8 miles) of Ping-Yang, and report that the Japanese have fortified the town. The enemy troops are arriving daily.

"At Port Arthur and in Manchuria all is calm."

St. Petersburg, March 3.—In a dispatch to the czar, Viceroy Alexieff says:

"Admiral Stark, telegraphing from Port Arthur, March 2, says the enemy did not appear off Port Arthur on either Feb. 28, Feb. 2 9or March 1. Reconnaissances made by cruisers and torpedo boats over a radius of 60 miles from Port Arthur also failed to discover the enemy's vessels."

St. Petersburg, March 3.—The Russian government earnestly desires the conservation of the ancient friendship between the United States and the empire. The belief is expressed here that the two countries are now on the eve of a better understanding of the points concerning which differences have existed. The campaign of recrimination which is deprecated, and the government here specifically disavows responsibility for the utterances of some Russian newspapers against the United States, which in turn have inflamed a portion of the American press against Russia.

An official of the foreign office pointed out to the Associated Press the erroneous impression prevailing abroad that Russian newspapers, owing to the censorship exercised over the news expressed only such news as are sanctioned by the authorities, whereas, as a matter of fact, the newspapers editorially have the widest latitude and they frequently embarrass the government by their unrestrained criticism of other countries.

The correction of the original version of the Vicksburg incident at Chemilpo has alredy affected Russian public opinion favorably.

Negotiations have been completed with France, Great Britian and Italy for the repatriation of the Russian sailors who were taken on board vessels of these countries after the Chemuipo fight. The men will be brought to Odessa under Russia's pledge not to allow them to fight again during the continuance of the war

Numerous offers have been received here from women in Germany, France, and especially England, to go to the front as nurses. Dr. Nutzer, a woman physician of Breslau, has already been enrolled for this work.

Lieut. Newton A. McCully, U. S. N., who has obtained permission to observe the Russian fleet operations, may go to Port Arthur from London Via Suez, owing to the delay which now, prevails on the trans-Siberian railroad.

ARMED BANDITS

Reported to Have Attacked Russian Post Near Chwang.

London, March 3.—From Yin Kow comes an unconfirmed report that 500 bandits, armed with modern rifles, have attacked a Russian post to the west of Haicheng (Haicheng is thirty miles east by north of New Chwang). There was severe fighting and both sides lost heavily. This report is discredited at Yin Kow, but if it is true it indicates that a serious danger is confronting Russia in these well armed brigand bands. According to the Daily Mail's account of this affair six Japanese found among the bandits were killed. This would tend to show that the Japanese are organizing the bands.

Reports received from Tokio declare that Japan has granted permission for fifty-three foreign newspaper correspondents to accompany the Japanese forces. Seventeen of these correspondents are Americans. The date of their departure has not been fixed.

A mile and a quarter of the Siberian railroad, according to Tokio reports has been destroyed in the Ninguta district between Vladivostok and Harbin.

Heartrending stories are appearing in the English newspapers of the sufferings of refuges from Port Arthur on the train journey to European Russia. It is bitterly cold and there is a scarcity of food and water.

London, March 3.—Orders were issued today to dispatch 2,000 troops to re-force the British garrison at Malta. It is believed that his movement is made to facilitate the reinforcing of the stations in China later, should necessity arise. Four hundred troops were also ordered to China to raise the local station there to war strength.

To Nominate Peck's Successor.

Lansing, Mich., March 3.—It is understood that Gov. Bliss will next week call an election in Jackson county to nominate a successor to Judge Peck, and that the election will be held on April 4, the regular town meeting day in the county.

Col. E. C. Fox Dead.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 3.—Col. E. Crofton Fox, one of the most prominent men in this part of the state, is dead from meningitis after a brief illness. Col. Fox was a leading furniture manufacturer, capitalist and lumber dealer.

WENT OUT WITH ROAR

Ice Gorge at Monroe Gave Way Under Heavy Water Presure.

MANY STREETS WERE FLOODED

Inhabitants Fled for Shelter—Wild Scene When Climax Came—Bridges Withstood Terrible Strain—Water Quickly Receded.

Monroe, Mich., March 3.—The flood in this city is over, going as quickly as it came. Up to 8 o'clock last night the water of the River Raisin continued to rise until Front, Murray, Jerome, Navarre and Humphrey streets on the south side of the river were flooded, and on the north, Elm avenue, Macomb, Orson, Tremont and Willow streets were in a like condition.

Shortly after 8 o'clock with a roar that sounded like distant thunder a huge mass of ice from west of the city broke loose and came tearing down the Raisin, carrying away the supports of many verandas of business places that overhung the river. As the large cakes of solid ice struck the bridge abutments the steel structures trembled from end to end, and people rushed to safety to the mainland, but the solid masonry withstood the savage onslaught and no damage to the bridges resulted.

Then the mass of floating ice, propelled onward by the pressure of thousands of tons of water behind it, struck the big ice gorge at the foot of Navarre street and with a grinding crushing, noise that could be heard for blocks around literally tore it to pieces and shoved it down below the Grand Trunk bridge, thus providing an outlet for the water.

The river was soon a seething torrent and in 15 minutes had lowered six feet and 10 minutes later two feet more.

Terrific Storm.

To add to the horror of the situation a terrific rain, thunder and hail storm struck the city, but those who braved the elements saw by the flashes of lightning a scene they will long remember.

Suddenly a terrific flash of lightning would shoot across the sky, showing plainly for a few seconds the river full of floating, tumbling ice, with streets, submerged houses, and here and there the dim light of a lantern as the unfortunate inhabitants were either seeking a place of safety or removing goods and live stock to higher ground.

At the Pere Marquette railway men watched continually, as the ice was within a few inches of the bridge, but the relief came just in the nick of time and the structure suffered no damage, but several telegraph poles were cut off as with a knife, putting the company's wire service out of business temporarily.

The same occurence happened at the Michigan Central, but the only sufferer was the Michigan Telephone Co., whose cable was torn down. Detroit and other towns north of here were cut off from telephonic communication for a time.

The ice is now gorged solid below the city, but is unlikely to cause any more damage, although there is still a large amount of ice to come down. West of Monroe a large portion of the county is reported as submerged.

Electric Smelter a Success.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., March 3.—From the result of the first run of the Hatch electric smelter, which has just been completed here, it looks as it what the inventor claimed for the machine—the revoluntionizing of the entire smelting business—may become a fact. The first run was made with lead in a 30-ton-capacity smelter and proved entirely successful. Lead is the most difficult of all ore to smelter, the most difficult of all ore to refine, but it came from the Hatch smelter in the finest possible condition, looking very much like nickel, so bright was it.

A "Soldier of Fortune."

Adrian, Mich., March 3.—William Geary has been arrested here by Sheriff Shepherd on a charge of complicity in a burglary at Flint some months ago. Geary has had a rather a checkered career. At one time he served a term in the house of correction After this he enlisted in the United States army, from which he soon deserted. During the Boer war in South Africa he was a member of Kitchener's "fighting Scots" and since then he has engaged in one adventure after another in different parts of the country.

Railroad Earnings Fall Off.

Lansing, Mich., March 3.—Earnings of Michigan railroads fell off to a remarkable extent during January, according to an earnings statemtnt just issued by Railroad Commissioner Atwood. The total earnings in Michigan for the month were $3,674,776.83, or a decrease of $171,058.64 compared with the month of January last year. The percentage of decrease is nearly 4½.

Jackson Street Cars Running.

Jackson, Mich., March 3.—The street cars started up here last night after being idle for two days and seven hours. Satisfactory arrangements have been made between the street railway company and the city treasurer regarding the payment of the company's taxes and it is not likely that the line will be tied up again.

Cashier Committed Suicide.

Waterloo, Ia., March 2.—M. T. Blake, cashier of the First National bank, of Dunkerton, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. The bank officials are examining the accounts of the bank.

Working Overtime.

Eight hour laws are ignored by those tireless, little workers—Dr. King's New Life Pills. Millions are always at work, night and day, curing indigestion, biliousness, constipation, sick headache and all stomach, liver and bowel troubles. Easy, pleasant, safe, sure. Only 25c at C. A. Wright's drug store.

BIG FIGHT BREWING.

Another Side to the Recent Postoffice Scandal.

Washington, March 2.—A big fight is brewing as an aftermath of the postoffice scandals. When Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General Bristow submitted his report regarding the operations of Geo. W. Beavers, the head of the salaries and allowance division, he referred to the fact that many senators and representatives were mixed up in the irregularities. Thereupon Representative Hay, of Virginia, introduced a resolution calling for detailed information. After a long delay it was referred to the postoffice committee, which immediately called upon the postoffice department for the information.

? It was furnished in detail, but it was of such a sensational character that the members of the committee have been trying to keep it quiet.

It is said that the report deals with 700 violations of allowances for clerk hire, three cases where buildings owned by congressmen were rented for postoffices, and seven cases where the relatives or friends of congressmen were given temporary places in the department, and immediately afterward boosted to fat places, thus avoiding the civil service rules.

AT BEEF TRUST.

Resolution To Probe It Reported Favorably.

Washington, March 2.—Whether the "beef trust" is violating the injunction resting against it is to be made the subject of official investigation by the department of commerce and labor, according to a resolution ordered reported favorably to the house Tuesday by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce. Should the house take favorable action on the resolution it will constitute the first instructions from congress to the new department to exercise the powers given it under the law to investigate the operation of industrial institutions.

Should the investigation show violations of the injunction the matter undoubtedly will be referred by the president to the department of justice and the "trust" proceeded against for contempt of court.

VENEZUELA SURPRISED

Over the Decision of the Hague Tribunal.

Caracas, Venezuela, March 2.—The decision of The Hague arbitration tribunal that the three powers which blockaded Venezuela—Great Britain, Germany and Italy—have the right to a preference of 30 per cent of the customs duties at La Guaira and Puerto Cabello, has produced a sensation in this city. The general opinion here is voiced by high officials, who say:

"The value of future decisions handed down by the arbitration tribunal is destroyed, because in this finding the tribunal has consecrated the triumph of might over right."

In an interview with the Associated Press, United States Minister Bowen said: "The tribunal was called upon to establish a new principle in international law, namely that all creditor nations should be treated with equal consideration, and that preferential treatment should not be obtained by blockades and bombardments.

"The tribunal refused to establish this principle, and other principles now recognized as sound by international law were also at first rejected. We must therefore have patience."

Corporation Charters Cancelled.

Springfield, Ill., March 2.—Charters of one thousand corporations doing business in Illinois have been cancelled by the secretary of state for failure to comply with the law which requires annual statements. Monday was the last day on which reports could be filed, and a large number have defaulted. About two hundred reports was received at the office of the secretary today, but whether or not they will be recorded is yet to be determined.

Hanna Memorial Association.

Cleveland, O., March 2.—The Marcus A. Hanna Memorial association was incorporated Tuesday at Columbus by several prominent citizens of Cleveland. The purpose of the association is to establish a chair of political science at Western Reserve University in memory of the late senator.

William E. Sewell Dying.

Binghamton, N. Y., March 2.—Justice Albert H. Sewell has received a telegram stating that his brother, Commander Wm. Elbridge Sewell, U. S. N., governor of the Island of Guam, had reached San Francisco, and is dying. Justice Sewell will leave for San Francisco at once.

Masons Will Lay Cornerstone.

Owosso, Mich., March 3.—The cornerstone of the new court house at Corunna will be laid May 4. It will be a Masonic ceremony and all commanderies and Masonic lodges within a radius of 20 miles will be entertained at the county's expense. Hon. Hugh McCurdy of Corunna, past grand master of the Masons of the United States, will probobly wield the rowel.

Ice 26 Feet Deep.

Manistee, Mich., March 3.—Ann Arbor car ferries Nos. 1 and 3 have been forced high out on the beach off Two Creeks, Wis., and until there is a decidede change in the ice conditions no attempt will be made to release the boats. The ice has formed around them to a thickness of 26 feet and by gradual uplifting the boats have been raised at least five feet out of water.

Clemency Denied.

Lansing, Mich., March 3.—The state pardon board denied recommendations of clemency in some cases that are well known. Prisoners at Jackson whose applications were rejected are: James B. Farrington, sent from Lenawee county for manslaughter; Charles Jessop, Lenawee county, burglary; William W. Wheeler, Saginaw, criminal assault; and Benjamin Nichols, Lenawee, burglary.

Colds are Dangerous.

How often you hear it remarked, "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight should not be disregarded. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. It always cures and is pleasant to take. Spring Medicine

There is no other season when good medicine is so much needed as in the Spring.

The blood is impure, weak and impoverished—a condition indicated by pimples and other eruptions on the face and body, by deficient vitality, loss of appetite, lack of strength, and want of animation.

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Pills

Make the blood pure, vigorous and rich, create appetite, give vitality, strength and animation, and cure all eruptions. Have the whole family begin to take them today.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has been used in our family for some time, and always with good results. Last spring I was all run down and got a bottle of it, and as usual received great benefit." MISS BEULAH BOYCE, Stowe, Vt.

People generally set their hearts most on what they need least.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Severe Cold for Three Months.

The following letter from A. Nusbaum of Batesville, Ind., tells its own story. "I suffered for 3 months with a severe cold. A druggist prepared me some medicine and physician prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I then tried Foley's Honey and Tar and eight doses cured me." Refuse substitutes. Sold by all druggists.

More Riots.

Disturbances of strikers are not nearly as grave as an individual disorder of the system. Overwork, loss of sleep, nervous tension will be followed by utter collapse, unless a reliable remedy is immediately employed. There's nothing so efficient to cure disorders of the liver or kidneys as Electric Bitters. It's a wonderful tonic, and effective nervine and the greatest all around medicine for run down systems. It dispels nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia and expels malaria germs. Only 50c and satisfaction guaranteed by C. A. Wright, druggist.

Wakeful Children.

For a long time the two year old child of Mr. L. McPherson, 59 Tenth St. Harrisburg, Pa., would sleep but two or three hours in the early part of the night which made it very hard for her parents. Her mother concluded that the child had stomach trouble and gave her one half of a Chamberlain stomach and liver tablet which quieted her stomach and she slept the whole night through. Two boxes of these tablets have effected a permanent cure and she is now well and strong. For sale by all druggists.

The man who belongs altogether to the devil is generally last to find it out.

Dangers of Pneumonia.

A cold at this time if neglected is liable to cause pneumonia which is so often fatal even when the patient has recovered the lungs are weakened, making them pecularly susceptable to the developement of consumption. Foley's Honey and Tar will stop the cough and prevent pneumonia. Sold by all druggists.

BOTH ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Mother and Daughter Were to Die at Same Hour.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 2.—Mrs. Edith Chapman and her daughter Miss Cora Bessey, residing in different parts of this city, attempted suicide at the same hour and with the same kind of poison last night. The time selected by the mother and daughter to die was 12 o'clock. Certain troubles of the daughter, it is supposed, preyed on the mother's mind, and they decided to die at the same time. The girl's marriage three years ago proved to be an unhappy one. Before her marriage she was an vaudeville actress of some reputation. The attending physicians say recovery is probable in both cases.

MYSTERY SOLVED.

John Huddy Shot His Wife and Himself.

Jackson, Mich., March 2.—Mrs. George Arnold related a pitiful story at the inquest Tuesday into the cause of the death of her sister, Mrs. John Huddy, who afterwards shot himself Saturday. Mrs. Arnold saw her sister killed, under the most heartrending circumstances, while both were pleading to the infuriated man to have mercy and spare her life.

The story told by Mrs. Arnold is the only new development, and as the doctors say that the one pistol shot which struck Mrs. Huddy was instantaneous death, the mystery is cleared absolutely. Huddy shot her, then shot himself.

A Miniature Logging Camp.

Menominee, Mich., March 2.—One of the exhibitions which will be sent from the upper peninsula of Michigan to the St. Louis exposition will be a miniature logging camp complete. The upper peninsula members of the forestry commission, which has been appointed to arrange for a Michigan forestry exhibit, are working hard to have a fine showing from this part of the state and have sent letters to all of the lumber manufacturers of this part of the country asking them to donate specimens for the exhibit. Local lumbermen are taking much interest in the matter and this city will be well represented in this line.

Advertising Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., March 2.—The Olds Mobile Company is in receipt of a cablegram announcing that their runabout has taken the gold medal at the Mohon-Mila expdsition now being held in Calcutta, India. There were French and English competitors, but the Detroit machine excelled in all tests.

SMALLPOX RATES.

Shiawassee County Doctors Will Ask $5 a Visit.

Owosso, Mich., March 3.—The Shiawassee County Medical society, at its meeting voted unanimously to charge $5 for each visit to a smallpox patient and $2 a visit for diphtheria cases.

This movement is in the same line with the policy of Owosso doctors as mapped out at a caucus held a few weeks ago. The board of supervisors has declared that only $2 a visit will be allowed for attendance on smallpox cases, but the doctors say that unless they are guaranteed $5 for each visit they will simply refuse to go when called upon to attend smallpox cases.

Took Strychnine for Salts.

Battle Creek, Mich., March 3.—John A. Vanbrocklin is dead as a result of taking strychnine instead of a dose of salts. Peculiar conditions surround his death, and the authorities are making an investigation. The poison and the salts were placed in the same cupboard in similar cans, and Vanbrocklin was not aware that strychnine was in the house. Upon returning form a private prayer meeting he took the fatal dose, dying half an hour later. Vanbrocklin carried $1,000 insurance in the Maccabee lodge.

Boy Killed Himself.

Detroit, Mich., March 3.—In the battle of life fate dealt harshly with Hans Leitzel, a sickly boy of 17 years. He was ambitious and sought to rise, but grew despondent with ill success in securing a better position, and over his failing strength. Working in a tannery offered but few incentives toward keeping up the struggle, and late yesterday afternoon he ended his existence at the home of his sister, Mrs. Edward Zemmin, 1003 Field avenue, by sending a bullet through his brain.

Closed Saloons Early.

Lapeer, Mich., March 3.—Marshall Hubbard and other officers have given the citizens of Lapeer a surprise by closing all places where liquor is sold at 10:30 o'clock. This is a new movement, still unexplained, which has been the whole topic of conversation here since. Some contend that it is the work of the W. C. T. U., while others claim that Hubbard is again a candidate for reappointment.

ALL AMERICAN VESSELS

To Be Used in Transporting Government Supplies.

Washington, March 2.—The senate Tuesday passed the bill requiring the use of American vessels in transporting government supplies and took up the bill prohibiting the use of other than American vessels in shipping merchandise to the Philippines and relieving the inter-island trade of the Philippines from the exactions of the coastwise laws of the United States.

The first mentioned requirement of the latter bill is already in force, in effect, but this measure enacts it in different form. The bill now pending as introduced provides that it shall go into effect July 1 next, but the Democrats sought to have the time deferred. Their suggestions were not accepted, but Mr. Lodge, in charge of the measure, indicated a willingness to postpone the time for a year. The senate adjourned, however, without acting on either the bill or the amendment.

Strike at the Exposition.

St. Louis, Mo., March 2.—One thousand men employed by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Company as laborers on landscape, roadbuilding, track laying and other forms of work at the world's fair, went on a strike when informed that next Monday the summer schedule of wage, twenty cents an hour, would be in force. Since October the men have been getting twenty-five cents an hour.

Lived Over 100 Years.

Holland, Mich., March 3.—Mrs. G. J. Kollen, mother of G. J. Kollen, president of Hope college, Holland, is dead at her home in Overisel, aged 100 years and 11 months. Funeral Friday. She leaves five children, 41 grandchildren and 52 great grandchildren.

Raise the President's Salary.

Washington, March 2.—Senator Gallinger has introduced a bill increasing the salaries of the executive officers of the government and also of senators and representatives in the house. The bill fixes the following scale: President, $75,000; vice-president, $15,000; speaker of the house of representatives, $12,000; members of the cabinet, $15,000; senators and members of the house $8,0000.

Gen. Vannovski Is Dead.

St. Petersburg, March 2.—Gen. Vannovski, former minister of war, is dead. The czar is deeply affected by the death of Gen. Vannovski, who was formerly one of his most trusted advisers.

Happy, Healthy Children.

Any child can take Little Early Risers with perfect safety. They are harmless, never gripe or sicken, and yet they are so certain in results that robust constitutions requiring drastic means are never disappointed. They cannot fail to perform their mission and every one who uses DeWitt's Little Early Risers prefer them to all other pills. They cure biliousness. Sold by C. A. Wright.

After arguing with a man for half an hour a woman invariably says: "Now why can't you be sensible?"

"Do it Today."

The time-worn injunction, "Never put off 'til tomorrow what you can do today," is now generally presented in this form: "Do it today!" That is the terse advice we want to give you about that hacking cough or demoralizing cold with which you have been struggling for several days, perhaps weeks. Take some reliable remedy for it TODAY—and let that remedy be Dr. Boschee's German Syrup, which has been in use for over thirty-five years. A few doses of it will undoubtedly relieve your cough or cold, and its continued use for a few days will cure you completely. No matter how deep-seated your cough, even if dread consumption has attacked your lungs, German Syrup will surely effect a cure—as it has done before in thousands of apparently hopeless cases of lung trouble. New trial bottles, 25c;

Do You want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the intestines. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure add to the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in the human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable and the only combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health and strength-giving qualities Sold by C. A. Wright.

Were the weather not always on hand as a topic of conversation some people might as well be deaf and dumb.

La grippe coughs yield quickly to the wonderful curative qualities of Foley's Honey and Tar. There is nothing else just as good. For sale by all druggists.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

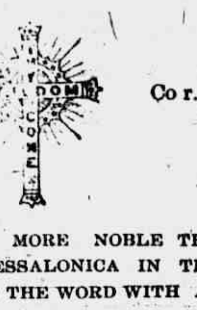
It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Concerning
THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

2 Tim. 4:2



Cor. 1 9:16

THESE WERE MORE NOBLE THAN THOSE OF THESSALONICA IN THAT THEY RECEIVED THE WORD WITH ALL READINESS AND SEARCHED THE SCRIPTURES DAILY, WHETHER THOSE THINGS WERE SO. ACTS 17:11

XI

Before passing on to consider the second of the four chief features of the Kingdom of God, it will be well to consider some difficulties that suggest themselves in connection with the subject of Baptism.

1. Is it not possible to enter the Kingdom of God without being baptized?

(1). In the case of the earthly Kingdom of God we have seen that even the child of Jewish parents might not be reckoned among the number of the Chosen People until he had been circumcised (Gen. 17:14).

(2). In appointing Baptism to be the door of entrance into the Spiritual Kingdom of God our blessed Lord commanded His disciples to baptize all the nations. That is to say, He virtually commanded that EVERY ONE should be baptized into the Kingdom of God. (Matt. 28:19).

(3). In His conversation with Nicodemus He most positively and explicitly declared—viz. with a "Verily, verily"—that "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God" (John 3:5). And by the Water here must be understood the Outward Sign, and by the Spirit the Inward Grace, of Baptism; so that it is as if our blessed Lord had said, "Verily, verily. I say unto thee. Except a man be baptized he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

(4) It is only on the same condition viz., that Baptism is the only door of entrance into the Kingdom of God, that we can understand our Lord to say, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16).

(5) It is only on the same condition that we can understand other references to Baptism in the Holy Scriptures. (E. g., Acts. 2:38; 22:16; Rom. 6:3; 1 Cor. 12:13: Tit. 3:5; 1 Pet. 3:21).

Observe that the Sacred writers never suppose for a moment that the blessings mentioned have been received in any other way than by Baptism. They understood thoroughly that Baptism was the only way to receive the blessings referred to.

So the Christian Church has always held and taught from the beginning.

2. But cannot our blessed Lord admit one into the Kingdom of God by other means?

(1) Certainly He can, but we are not talking about what our Lord can do; we are talking about what He is willing to do. From what has been said above, especially from (3), it seems that He never admits any one into the Kingdom of God in any other way than by the door of Baptism.

(2) And why should our Lord appoint the Door of Baptism unto us His ministers if He did not intend to abide by that appointment Himself? Would it not be like contradicting Himself to command us to baptise EVERYBODY into the Kingdom of God (Matt. 28:19) and yet to reserve the intention of admitting many by some other way?

3. Must we then conclude that all those persons who have not been baptized, no matter how good they may be, are outside of the Kingdom of God?

I must confess that to me that seems the only possible conclusion.

4. But they are good people?

I do not see that that makes any difference. Abraham, Moses, David, Elijah, Isaiah, etc. were good people; but they were not members of the Spiritual Kingdom of God—for the obvious reason that the Kingdom of God was not yet set up on earth. Even John the Baptist—the forerunner of the King, and as such a preacher of the Gospel—was yet not a member of the Kingdom himself. And for the truth of the statement we have our blessed Lord's own words (Matt. 11:11).

5. Then what happens to those who die unbaptized?

It would seem that they die outside of the Kingdom of God.

6. Must we conclude that they are therefore eternally lost?

Not unless you are prepared to conclude at the same time that Abraham, Moses, David, etc.—and John the Baptist—are also eternally lost. (1 Pet. 1: 10, 11, 12).

7. Do you, then think, that it is possible for one who dies outside of the Kingdom of God to be admitted into the Kingdom of God after death?

I most certainly do think it possible—for some, at least. Else it would be a dark outlook for the poor heathen—to say nothing of Abraham, Moses, David, and all the Saints of old—even John the Baptist himself. (Cf. 1 Pet. 3: 18, 19, 20).

8. Then am I to understand that it does not matter much whether one is baptized or not—so long, at least, as he is a good man?

On the other hand it would seem to matter a great deal. Can you suppose for one moment that our Blessed Lord would have been at such great pains to set up the Kingdom of God upon earth, if it made no difference whether we entered the Kingdom of God on earth or not? And why should He warn us to "Seek first the Kingdom of God," if it makes no difference whether we find it here on earth or not?

To assert that it does not matter whether a man is baptized or not, so long as he is a good man, is practically to assert that the Kingdom of God itself does not matter—that it is a thing of no account. And that is to deny the King Himself—and the Father Who sent Him.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by C. A. Wright.

Consumption

Salt pork is a famous old-fashioned remedy for consumption. "Eat plenty of pork," was the advice to the consumptive 50 and 100 years ago.

Salt pork is good if a man can stomach it. The idea behind it is that fat is the food the consumptive needs most.

Scott's Emulsion is the modern method of feeding fat to the consumptive. Pork is too rough for sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion is the most refined of fats, especially prepared for easy digestion.

Feeding him fat in this way, which is often the only way, is half the battle, but Scott's Emulsion does more than that. There is something about the combination of cod liver oil and hypophosphites in Scott's Emulsion that puts new life into the weak parts and has a special action on the diseased lungs.

A sample will be sent free upon request.

REMEDY FOR CROUP.

Mrs. Mary Cress writes letter that gives valuable information to mothers.

The following letter has been sent to this office with the request to publish for the benefit of mothers whose children are subject to croup.

Editor of HERALD:

As there are so many dear children at this season of the year suffering with croup, I feel an earnest desire to let mothers know of a remedy for this dread disease.

This is in no way an advertisement, nor do I expect one cent of remuneration, I simply feel so very grateful for the wonderful relief my child has had that I want other mothers to know of it.

I have a little daughter ten years old, who has had asthmatic croup since she was three months old, so bad she would have violent spasms. We spent hundreds of dollars doctoring her without any relief until I accidentily thought of using Hyomei. Since then she has not had a bad attack and we always go to bed with Hyomei under the pillow. I would rather be without flour in the house than without Hyomei. It is a Godsend to any mother whose children have the croup.

I will gladly answer any letters written me concerning Hyomei. All I say is, if one is discouraged from other remedies, try this.

MRS. MARY CRESS,
Third and Commercial Sts.,
Feb. 26, 1904 Atchison, Kansas

Mrs. Cress recommends a remedy that is undoubtedly well known to our readers, as one of Tecumseh's leading druggists, C. A. Wright, has the local agency for Hyomei and sells it under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction.

HE'S A GONE GOOSE

HOG THAT IS CALLED A "BIRD."

In sweetness and tenderness our pork closely resembles young chicken and has that fine, nutty flavor so noticeable in the flesh of corn-fed pigs. It is good roasted or broiled and brings forth expressions of pleasure from those who partake of it.

M. F. STEIN

THE FAMOUS OPTICIAN of Detroit,

The eye, when properly cared for affords the keenest delight because of the pleasures we are able to enjoy through its medium. When not cared for and its warnings are unheeded, it becomes an instrument of torture. Headaches, eye pains, burning, itching sensation, strained vision, nervous troubles and many bodily ills are the results accruing from over worked eyes, eyes that need help. My examination reveals all hidden troubles, and it is my province to fit the right glasses to any and all defects of vision. SATISFACTION GUARANTEED BY

Whiskey and Beer Habit

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

"ORRINE,"

ABSOLUTELY SAFE, SURE AND HARMLESS.

Physicians pronounce drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Continued indulgence in whiskey, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and stupefies the digestive organs, thus destroying the digestion and ruining the health. No "will power" can heal the inflamed stomach membranes. "ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor by acting directly on the affected nerves, restoring the stomach and digestive organs to normal conditions, improving the appetite and restoring the health. Can be given secretly if desired.

Cure Effected or Money Refunded.

Ask your druggist whom you know what he thinks of ORRINE; he will indorse our statements as truthful in every respect. If ORRINE fails to cure we will refund you every penny paid for it as cheerfully as we took it.

No Sanitarium Treatment or Publicity!
No Absence from home or loss of time!

Mothers, wives and sisters, you cannot cure those who are afflicted with this most terrible of all diseases by your fervent prayers, or eyes red with tears, nor by your hope that they may stop drinking. It can be done only with ORRINE. You have the remedy—will you use it? If you desire to cure without the knowledge of the patient, buy ORRINE No. 1; if the patient desires to be cured of his own free will, buy ORRINE No. 2. Full directions found in each package. Price $1 per box.

☞ We will gladly furnish a treatment free of cost to any physician to demonstrate that Orrine is a positive specific for drunkenness. ☜

The 63 club made a diversion from the fashionably modern evening's reception and last night when they were entertained at the home of Mrs. Cynthia Slayton on E. University avenue, fourteen members of the club were present dressed in the oldest fashioned things they had about the house. Not "duds" but gowns—gowns whose ancient splendor recalled the stories of your grandmother and brought back the old-timed perfume of lavender and myrrh. High born dames with powdered hair, tall shell combs and old fashioned flowers, falling low on their necks made up a ball room scene from long ago. The "belle of the ball" was dressed in pink satin and gauze. She was the Patti of the evening. The evening was one of the most delightful the club has spent, the hostess adding to the entertainment in many ways, making the evening a happy remembrance for days to come. —Ann Arbor Argus.

Jackson, Mich., March 2.—According to the statement of S. A. Foster of Toledo, the Toledo-Jackson interurban road is an accomplished fact. He says private right-of-way for two-thirds of the distance has been secured, all the necessary franchises through the towns en route have been granted, and just as soon as the weather permits work will be pushed from the Jackson end. It is hoped to have cars running out of Jackson by the middle of August.

Stakes have already been laid along the route, which takes in Clark's, Wampler's and Sand lakes, three of the finest resorts in southern Michigan. The projected route is through Brooklyn, thence parallel with the old Chicago turnpike to Tecumseh, thence through Ridgeway, Britton, Rea and Petersburg, to Toledo. A branch from Petersburg to Toledo is part of the present plan of construction, and another from Tecumseh to Adrian will be built after these lines are completed.—Detroit Free Press.

The Passion Play.

The intention of this Company is to give to the public in general as near an exact reproduction of the famous Passion Play (as witnessed in Oberammergau) as possible, and we conscientiously assert that there is nothing in this grand performance that will be sacreligious or irreverent, or any pictures offensive to any Christian of any denomination, but, instead, continual scenes and moving pictures illustrating the fascinating Passion Play. Every man, woman and child will not only enjoy this grand performance, but will be held spellbound at the sight of the fascinating and sublime life-size moving pictures of our Savior and the multitude, and the beautiful surrounding scenes.

Every parent and Sunday school teacher should take advantage of this opportunity to vividly impress upon the children these scenes in the Christ-life—impressions that can never be effaced while the lamp of this life holds out to burn. In no other way, short of a personal visit to the village of Oberammergau, in Bavaria, at the time of this stupendous enactment, can so lasting a realization of the Crucifixion of Christ be made. New Bradley opera house, March 7. Admission 15, 25, and 35 cents.

LOCAL OPTION

Will be submitted to the Spring Election.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

Reached this Conclusion Wednesday Morning by a Vote of 19 to 9.

After a hard fight for a few days, local option was submitted by the supervisors for the spring election. People will now have a chance to vote. The vote stood as follows:

Yeas—Supervisors Alexander, Avery, Austin, Allen, Baker, Baldwin, Buck, Chase, Dobbins, Foot, Hathaway, Kerr, Kimball, Mann, Poncher, Steel, Sutton, Vail, Wotring, 19.

On account of the large crowd Tuesday afternoon to hear local option proceedings, the board were obliged to adjourn to the court room that all might have seats. Supervisor Hathaway moved that each supervisor give his report as his name was called. Each supervisor had inspected the names on the petitions for their own town and were ready to report. A committee consisting of supervisors Vail, Darling and Wegner were appointed to look over these reports and find out the exact number of unqualified voters and those petitioned to have their names removed.

After listening to the arguments by Attorneys J. N. Sampson and F. E. Bird, who represented the saloons, W. S. Westerman and Fred W. Corbett, the optionists, the supervisors adjourned until 9:30 Wednesday morning. Supervisor Vail made the report, of the committee selected to make a total of the number of signers to the petition, the unqualified and those requesting to withdraw. His report was—total, 3,856; unqualified, 42; withdrawal by petition, 353 making 395 in all and had they been stricken from the petitions the total would have fallen 137 below the required number of voters. Supervisor Dean made the motion to have the names cut off but Supervisor Chase said the motion was out of order as no action had been taken on the report. The report was accepted and before Dean could get on the floor Chase had offered resolutions to the effect that as long as the local optionists had complied with the law therefore be it.

Resolved, By the board of supervisors of said county of Lenawee, and it is hereby determined and declared by the said board, that such election has been prayed for by the requisite number of electors, to wit: by not less than one-third of all the qualified electors of the said county.

Before this was voted upon some of the supervisors desired to hear what Mr. Joslin had to say, as to whether or not the board had a right to strike off the names of those who had petitioned to have their names taken off. Mr. Joslin thought it was for the board to decide, as the law of the state did not provide for anything like that.

The original motion of Supervisor Chase for submitting the question to the vote of the people was then carried by a vote of 19 to 9. The resolutions then offered declaring the election according to Section 6, were adopted without a dissenting voice.

Mrs. George Frasier.

Mrs. George Frasier was born in the state of New York Feb. 23, 1829, and died Feb. 24, 1904, making her 75 years old, lacking one day, at the time of her death. She was married to Mr. Frasier in 1848. In 1852 they came to Michigan to set up their new home. They spent seven years at Flat Rock, three years at Palmyra and then came to Tecumseh to end their days.

Of the six children born to them four survive both parents, to mourn their loss.

Mrs. Frasier was a member of the Presbyterian church and always interested in its welfare. Hers was a quiet, domestic life, yet filled with kindly deeds, done unostentatiously. She has been a ministering angel in many a needy home and many this day rise up to call her blessed.

After the death of her husband last May she gradually declined. The ambition to live seemed gone and the bodily powers failed. Heaven drew her and she willingly yielded her frail hold on this life. She "fell asleep in Jesus" closes the record of her earthly life, but she lives in glory, is the heavenward fact today.

Third Annual Banquet of the Up-to-Date Club held at Honeoye, N. Y.

The third annual banquet of the Up-to-Date club was held in the parlors of the Congregational church Friday evening, Feb. 19. Plates were laid for fifty. After an address by the president of the club, welcoming the guests of the evening, and a response by Mr. George Ashley, the menu was served by one of Rochester's well known caterers. Neither the length nor the variety of the menu prevented those present from enjoying the flow of wit and reason that followed. Mrs. W. C. Burns had been chosen to act as toast master and her exceptionally bright, witty introduction of each subject and speaker added immeasurably to the charm and pleasure of the occasion. The following toasts were given and most happily responded to: "Our Club, Past and Present," Miss Nellie Abbey; "Some Ladies of Long Ago," Mrs. Thomas Blackmer; "Our Town; Its Needs," Rev. S. Mills Day; "Joan of Arc," Miss Lizzie Bartlett; "Our Hobbies," Rev. W. C. Burns; "The Future of the Club," Miss Alice Ashley. The singing of the club song concluded an event, rich in all that makes life sweet and noble.—March 2d. From the Ontario Co. Times, N. Y.

Next Sunday's comic supplement of The Free Press will have a number of new features, devoting a full page to the doings of Happy Hooligan, who this time is sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment for getting himself and a number of others into trouble. Buster Brown will appear in a new role, entitled "Buster Brown Kidnapped," a scheme which Buster himself originates, gets it into the papers, then sells his own papers, and is finally discovered by his astonished parents.

The Katzenjammer Kids have a hand in the fun by shutting "Der Captain" in a folding bed and then turning the hose on him. Another chapter of the love of Lulu and Leander will also be portrayed. A new feature is called "The Faithful Kyoodle" showing the antics of a dog that persists in chewing dynamite and incidentally blows up a few buildings.

Although several thousand extra copies of last Sunday's Free Press were printed, the entire edition was sold out by noon, and many dealers could not be supplied. Next Sunday's edition will be bigger and brighter than ever before. Order at once of your newsdealer or newsboy.

HYOMEI A RECORD BREAKER.

The popularity and remarkable sales of Hyomei have broken all records. In nearly every city and town in the country, this guaranteed cure for catarrh has given most astonishing results.

The leading druggists are so enthusiastic over the remarkable percentage of cures following the use of Hyomei, that with hardly an exception, they advertise to their customers that Hyomei will be sold with the understanding that it costs nothing unless it cures.

In Tecumseh, C. A. Wright is endorsing it and guaranteeing to refund the money unless Hyomei cures catarrh. He has sold a great many Hyomei outfits, and today, no other treatment for the cure of catarrh has as many friends in Tecumseh and vicinity as Hyomei.

It is a scientific, yet common sense method of treating and curing this too common disease. It sends by direct inhalation to every cell of the air passages in the head, throat and lungs, a balsamic air that destroys all catarrhal germs, purifies the blood with additional ozone, and makes a complete and lasting cure of any catarrhal trouble.

The complete outfit costs but $1, and includes an inhaler, medicine dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment.

A good push will scare the devil more than a whole lot of preaching.

INFORMATION

Given to the Public by our Local Druggist.

We want the public to know that the most valuable and delicious tasting cod liver oil preparation known to medicine is Vinol.

Vinol contains ALL of the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, but not a drop of oil.

For this reason it is recognized throughout the world as the greatest health restorer and strength creator known to medicine, and we do not believe there is a man, woman or child in this vicinity but what Vinol will benefit them.

It makes health and strength for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers, and after a severe sickness.

Cures hacking coughs, chronic colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Unequalled to create an appetite, and to make those who are too thin, fat, rosy and healthy.

Try Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if you are not satisfied.

Mrs. J. W. Owen, wife of the well known carpenter, living in the southeastern section of Tecumseh, says: "I am very well pleased with Doan's Kidney Pills. I procured a box at C. A Wright's drug store and they did me a lot of good. I had heart trouble and my kidneys did not preform their proper duties. This condition existed for some time. I tried different remedies which were recommended to me but received little if any benefit from them. I received more permanent relief from their use than from any other medicine I ever used. I am pleased to testify in their value.

For sale by all dealers: Price 50 cents per box, Foster-Milburn company, Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

READ IT THROUGH.

To use an eighteenth century phrase, this is an "o'er true tale." Having happened in a small Virginia town in the winter of 1902, it is a story very much of the present. Up to a short time ago Mrs. John Harmon, of Melfa Station, Va., had no personal knowledge of the rare curative properties of Chamberlains Cough Remedy. "Last January," she says, "my baby took a dreadful cold and at one time I feared she would have pneumonia, but one of my neighbors told me how this remedy had cured her little boy and I began giving it to my baby at once and it cured her. I heartily thank the manufacturers of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for placing so great a cure within my reach. I cannot recommend it too highly or say too much in its favor. I hope all who read this will try and be convinced as I was." For sale by all druggists.

VLADIVOSTOK SHELLED

Japanese Battleships and Cruisers Make Attack.

AT RANGE OF FIVE MILES.

Vladivostok, March 7.—A fleet of five Japanese battleships and two cruisers appeared off this place at 1:25 o'clock Sunday afternoon and bombarded the town and shore batteries for 55 minutes.

The fleet approached from the direction of Askold Island, at the east entrance to Ussuri Bay and about 32 miles southeast of Vladivostok. Entering Ussuri Bay the enemy formed in line of battle but did not approach to a closer range than five and one-third miles. They directed their fire against the shore batteries and the town but no damage resulted, as most of the 200 lyddite shells failed to burst.

The Russian batteries commanded by Gens. Veronetz and Asiamonoff did not reply, awaiting a closer approach of the enemy.

The Japanese fire ceased at 2:30 p. m. and the enemy retired in the direction of Askold island. Simultaneously two torpedo boat destroyers appeared near Askold island and two more near Cape Maidel. The Japanese ships were covered with ice.

The attack resulted in no loss to the Russians, but cost the enemy 200,000 roubles ($100,000) in ammunition. Most of the projectiles were six and twelve-inch shells. The population of Vladivostock was warned in the morning.

EVACUATE NEW CHWANG.

Indications Are Russian's Are Preparing to Do So.

Yin Kow, March 7.—The removal of the furniture of the police and military quarters at New Chwang, the withdrawal of unnecessary rolling stock and equipment from the New Chwang railway terminus and the removal from the bank indicate an intended evacuation of New Chwang. The bank authorities have arranged to leave French and German agents in charge of their interests.

Russian private letters disclose the fact that in the recent engagements between the Yalu river and Ping-Yang the Russians with superior numbers defeated the Japanese but lost heavily.

Refugees arriving here say that Port Arthur has not been attacked since February 26, but that stores and ammunition are still arriving. Work on the mud dock in which it is expected to repair the battleship Czarevitch, has been abandoned for the past three days, the foreign engineer being unable to raise the Retvizan, quitting Port Arthur together with the only other Anglo-Saxon there.

That considerable damage within the fortifications has been caused by the Japanese fire from Pigeon Bay is corroborated and the defences on that side are being strengthened by barbed wire entanglements and additional artillery.

HEAD OFF THE JAPS.

Russians Send 1,500 Men Against Those Headed for Hunchun.

St. Petersburg, March 7.—Official dispatches received here concerning the bombardment of Vladivostok by a Japanese fleet this afternoon do not mention any Russian losses, but private advices say that five were killed four sailors and the wife of an engineer. It is apparent the Japanese were afraid to risk exposing their ships to the plunging fire of the land batteries and it is considered probable here that the attack was really for the purpose of drawing the fire of the Russian forts compelling the Russians to disclose the position and calibre of their guns and also for the purpose of ascertaining whether the Russian squadron is in port.

Advices from Vladivostok say that the 2,500 Japan troops who landed at Plaksin Bay (on the east coast of Northern Korea) are advancing toward Musan (218 miles from Gensan) with the intention of ultimately reaching Hunchun (on the left bank of the Tumen river about 100 miles west of Vladivostok) and threatening the Russian flank.

In order to checkmate this move the Russian output 1,500 strong, which recently crossed the Tumen and is advancing to occupy Koyryong on the Tumen river, a walled city commanding the trails along which the Japanese must pass.

Clergue Will Head It Again.

Detroit, Mich., March 7.—The reorganization plans of the Consolidated Lake Superior are beginning to assume tangible shape. If the present plans are carried out, it is said that James J. Hill president of the Great Northern, will be the man behind the financial gun. It is also stated upon what is believed to be excellent authority that Mr. Clergue will once more become the guiding spirit of the consolidation, and will be given a free hand to plan and carry out extensions with the consent of Mr. Hill.

It saved his leg.

P. A. Danforth of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For ulcers, wounds, piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25cts. Sold by C. A. Wright, druggist.

UPHOLD THE PRINCIPLE

Would the Mormons, of Plural Marriage, if Attacked.

LEADER SMITH STILL ON STAND

He Places Revelations Above Law—Should Not Like to Be Placed in Position Where He Would Have to Desert His Children.

Washington, March 5.—Interest in the investigation before the senate committee on privileges and elections of the protests against Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, was debated Friday, although most of the time was devoted to introduction of documents subscribed to as the law of the Mormon church. In that connection, President Joseph Smith, who again was on the stand, testified that if the principle of plural marriage should be attacked it would be defended by the church.

Intense feeling was exhibited by President Smith against individuals, who, he said, had spied on the domestic and marital relations of the high officials of the Mormon church and for that reason he had favored the passage of the Evans bill to prevent prosecutions for polygamous cohabitation, unless complaints were entered by husband or wife against the other. This bill was passed, but vetoed by the governor of Utah.

It was brought out that all of Mr. Smith's predecessors, as presidents of the Mormon church, had been polygamists and that the man chosen to succeed him has more than one wife.

Mr. Smith was asked which he would obey, the law of the land or revelations from God if the two were in conflict. He said he might obey the revelation though it was not compulsory. He added, "I should not like to be put in a position where I would have to desert my children—I could not do that."

QUESTION OF SITE

For Lake Naval Station Subject of Much Discussion.

Washington, March 5.—For three hours Friday the senate wrangled over sites for the proposed naval training station on the lakes. Senator Spooner and Quarles of Wisconsin, which has several sites, said divers things to show that the Lake Bluff site, just over the border of Illinois, was the worst ever that could possibly be selected. Senator Hopkins of Illinois took 40 minutes to convince the senate that Wisconsin's were not ideal sites. Senator Foraker of Ohio argued that nothing on all Lake Michigan could compare with Put-in-Bay for the station. Senator Alger suggested they look over Lake Huron as well as Lakes Erie and Michigan for a site. Finally when they had talked themselves out the resolution was called up to have a civilian commission of three appointed to select a site. Senator Gorman objected to a vote being taken on it.

The matter went over until another day. Representative Lucking, who had permised to vote for Put-in-Bay before the common council's action of Tuesday, did so at the desire of Detroit vessel interests.

Sent Her Poisoned Candy.

Pierre, S. D., March 5.—Miss Rena Nelson, who lives with her parents on a farm six miles north of this city, is believed to have been fatally poisoned from eating candy sent through the mails. The box containing the candy was mailed at Boone, Iowa. Miss Nelson accuses a married woman residing at Boone, Iowa, of being the sender of the candy, and gives jealously as a reason for the act. The sheriff will leave for Boone with the necessary papers tomorrow, and an arrest is expected to follow.

Brutal Prince Goes Free.

Berlin, March 5.—The military court of the first guards division, which Thursday began an inquiry into the sanity of Lieut. Prince Prosper von Arenberg, who is serving a term of imprisonment for the murder of a native, suspected of being a British spy, while commander of a station in German Southwest Africa, has decided that the prince was mentally irresponsible when he committed the murder and therefore declared his sentence of death and subsequent commutation to 15 years' imprisonment to be null.

Men Killed by Boiler Explosion.

Towanda, Pa., March 5.—By the explosion of the boiler of a saw mill at Greenwood P. T. Brown, the proprietor and his two helpers, Wallace Tice and Robt. Compton were instantly killed. The bodies were mangled horribly. Both of Brown's legs were blown off. Tice's head was blown away and almost every bone in Compton's body was broken when he struck the frozen earth after being thrown into the air. The men were all married and leave families.

Count Von Waldersee Very Low.

Berlin, March 5.—There is no improvement, according to dispatches form Hanover, in the condition of Count von Waldersee. Prof. Orth of Berlin and Prof. Eppstein of Goettingen have diagnozed the disease as intestinal inflamation. The count is very weak and the worst is feared. Emperor William has ordered that full reports of the field marshal's condition be wired him frequently.

Wedded to Her Husband's Nurse.

Battle Creek, Mich., March 5.—W. J. Johnson, Jr., formerly a sanitarium nurse, and Mrs. Caroline Sam, of Houston a wealthy woman whose husband died 18 months ago in Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Sam came here three years ago, Sam being ill. Johnson nursed him so tirelessly that he himself became ill and upon returning to Texas with his patient Johnson was nursed by Mrs. Sam. After her husband's death she came here and soon after Johnson had an automobile. The romantic marriage was made public today. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will make their new home in California.

RAN FROM GUARDHOUSE

Soldier Prisoners at Fort Wayne Gain Liberty.

PRIED OFF THE PRISON DOOR.

Guards Given the Alarm, but were not Quick Enough—All Three Were Lads From Michigan Towns—Reported Seen at Flint.

Fort Wayne, Mich., March 7.—Another successful break for liberty occurred at Fort Wayne. Arthur H. Richardson, 21 years of Saginaw; William J. Buyes, 23 years, of Flint, and Herman Briggs, aged 18, of Wolverine, Mich., escaped from the third floor of the guard house, which is located inside the fortifications, probably about 8:30 o'clock, by tearing away the casing around the door of their room and lossening the hinges. They departed by the rear window in the attic above, crawled along the eves until they reached the next terrace, then dashed down stairs, ran out of the sally port, jumped the fence on the River street side and the last seen of them in that neighborhood they were "legging it" along Cavalry avenue.

Sergt. Fearman heard the fugitives running down stairs and gave the alarm, but the guards were not quick enough. The three men were seen in Flint yesterday morning by L. C. Knack, who is on a furlough. He asked a policeman to arrest them but he would not do it because he was in citizen's dress.

Richardson is said to be the toughest man at the fort. This isthe third time he has escaped. The first time was while he was helping a plumber. He was rearrested in Detroit. It was Richardson who ran away with the unfortunate C. S. Warren, who was killed by the sentry, Stoddard, and Richardson came near getting the same medicine. This time he was serving a three years' imprisonment. Briggs had escaped from Fort Sheridan and had but recently been captured in Detroit. Buyes was serving one year.

SHE DIDN'T APPEAR.

Detroit's Mayor Opposed Appearance of Mrs. Soffel on Stage.

"Detroit, Mich., March 7.—Kate Soffel, who assisted the Biddle brothers, who was convicted two years ago of murder, to escape from her husband's jail in Pittsburg, was in Detroit Saturday, and attended the Empire theater. Mayor Mayburry, who suspected that it was the intention of the management to exhibit her on the stage, wrote Dr. Campbell, the owner of the house, threatening to put his theater out of business if he allowed such a thing. Mrs. Soffel did not appear.

To Be Maccabee Hearquarters.

Detroit, Mich., March 7.—There is a strong probability that, before six months have passed, Detroit will have become the headquarters of the Maccabees of the World, and the site of the home building of the order, at present located at Port Huron. When seen by a reporter F W. Budrow, deputy state commander of the order, said: "The final decision in the matter is left to the supreme tent to be made at the annual review, which will be held this year in Detroit, on uJly 25, but I can say that Detroit has been informally selected for the new headquarters and has no competitors.

JUDGE PAGELSEN DEAD.

Grand Haven Loses Her Best Known Resident.

Grand Haven, Mich., March 7.—Judge Charles T. Pagelsen, the city's best known resident, is dead from heart disease, aged 74. The deceased was born in Denmark and followed the life of a sailor from his 14th to 40th year, during which period he had been around the world four times and had visited nearly every known country.

Since 1867 he has been police judge here, in which capacity he has presided over every important criminal case which has arisen in the county since. He was a member of the city's first council in 1867, being recorder. In 1876 he had been vice-consul for Norway and Sweden in Michigan and was knighted by King Oscar in 1899. Six children all of whom are graduates of the University of Michigan, and a widow survive him.

Mr. Pagelsen was prominent in Masonic circles, being secretary and past master of the local lodge at the time of his death.

BIBLE SUNDAY.

Observed in London and Washington By Notables of Both Nations.

London, March 7.—The celebration of "Bible Sunday" by the Bible society at St. Paul's cathederal Sunday was robbed of considerable interest owing to the absence of King Edward, who is suffering from a cold. Queen Alexandra, Princess Victoria and the Prince and Princess of Wales drove to the cathederal and were met at the west door by the lord mayor, the high sheriffs, the bishop of London and the dean of St. Paul's, who escorted them to a railed off portion of the cathederal in front of the choir. The archbishop of Canterbury, who preached the sermon, referred regretfully to the absence of King Edward and then traced the history of the bible society during the past century.

Washington, March 7.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt, Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court, Senator Dollivar of Iowa, the British Embassador and Lady Durand and many other persons prominent in official, diplomatic and social circles attended the service today in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the British and Foreign Bible society at St. John's Episcopal church.

Justice Brewer and Senator Dollivar were the principal speakers. Dr. Daniel C. Gilman, president of the American Bible society presided and made a few remarks in which he said that during the life times of the British and American societies they had circulated 270,000,000 copies of the bible and parts of the bible to the peoples of the world.

Groff Given Like Sentence.

Washington, March 7. — Justice Pritchard has overruled the motion of Samuel A. Groff, one of the recently convicted defendants in the postoffice trial, and sentenced him to two years in the Moundsville penitentiary and to pay a fine of $10,000, sentence to begin on arrival at the penitentiary. This is the same sentence given the other defendants. Groff immediately furnished bond for $20,000 pending an appeal.

Pistols and Knives Used.

Winterset, Ia., March 7.—After a terrible fight in which pistols and knives were used, John Thornborough, a young married man living near here, shot and instantly killed Fred Peacock, and perhaps fatally wounded Peacock's father, a man of 60 years. The fight grew out of an effort upon the part of Thornborough to induce his wife, from whom he is separated, to leave the Peacock home and accompany him.

Man of Many Wives.

Elizabeth, N. J., March 7.—When James H. Shipple, 33 years old, a street car conductor, was arraigned in court on a charge of bigamy he astonished the judge by admitting that he had been married many times, "about 47 times," he thought. Two of his wives were in court, and it was stated that he had married at least four other women, one living in San Francisco and the others in this state.

Mormons to Settle in Canada.

Winnipeg, March 7.—Another great trek of Mormons from Utah to Southern Alberta is about to take place. Between 400 and 500 families, exceeding 2,000 persons, will invade Alberta with their live stock, farm implements and household effects. Most of them will drive across country. The district in which they will locate is known as Taber.

THREE MEN HURT.

Scaffold Fell at Paw Paw With Probable Fatal Results.

Paw Paw, Mich., March 5.—Philip Lee will die and William Fowler and Alonzo Curtis are badly injured as the result of a scaffolding giving way at the new residence of Jacob Lindsley.

The three men were working on the second story when without warning the supports under them broke and they were hurled upon a pile of stones in the basement. Lee's back was broken, Fowler sustained a broken wrist and other injuries and Curtis had his shoulder smashed and was hurt internally.

Alger Aids Rural Carriers.

Washington, March 5.—Senator Alger introduced an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill amending the provision inserted by the house prohibiting rural carriers from engaging in other business, so that carriers may carry articles authorized by law not authorized to be accepted for mailing, also to make contracts with publishers to distribute newspapers and periodicals upon which one rate of postage has been paid.

Burned Up Their Home.

Detroit, Mich., March 5.—Frederick Burchell and his wife, who have been locked up at the Elmwood police station since last Tuesday on a charge of setting fire to their home at 339 Hibbard avenue, have made complete confessions to the police and Fire Marshal Baxter. They admit they conspired to destroy what furniture had been left in their house so that they could obtain $2,200 insurance.

Country Lad Shot Himself.

Leslie, Mich., March 5.—Clarence Lounsberry, aged 19, while walking in the road near his home, in Tompkins township, drew a revolver and put an end to his existence. He told his parents when he left home that they never would see him again alive. He was an industrious young fellow and no cause is known for the deed. An inquest will be held Saturday.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

WELL KNOWN MINISTER.

Rev. John McEldowney is Dead—Thirty-Seven Years in Michigan.

Detroit, Mich., March 7.—Rev. John McEldowney, D. D., one of the best known and dearly beloved Methodist ministers in Michigan, passed away at 4 o'clock Sunday morning at the home of his son, 52 Koch avenue, at the age of 80 years.

Dr. McEldowney was born in Ireland, Jan. 6, 1824, and came with his father to this country when six years of age. His father was engaged in educational work, and he inherited studious habits, graduating from the University of Pennsylvania in 1846. He was converted in early life and entered the Christian ministry in Pittsburg in 1846, and has been continuously engaged in active service ever since.

From 1867 to 1870, professor at Albion college; from 1870 to 1873, pastor of the old Lafayette street M. E. church, now called the Tabernacle; from 1873 to 1877, pastor of the Court street church at Flint; from 1877 to 1879, pastor at Salt Lake City, where he located to be near his friend, Sumner Howard, who was United States district attorney in that city; 1879 to 1881, pastor of the Jefferson street church at Saginaw; 1881 to 1883, pastor of the Washington avenue church at Bay City; 1883 to 1887, presiding elder of the Detroit district; from 1892 to 1897, pastor of the M. E. church at St. Clair; from 1897 to 1903, pastor of the Asbury church of Detroit; in the fall of 1903, superanuated at the conference held in his old church at Flint.

Big Time at Soo Canal.

Washington, March 7.—Senator Alger has introduced a joint resolution providing for congressional recognition of the semi-centennial celebration of the completion of the ship canal at the Soo, which takes place on July 12. The resolution establishes a congressional commission of five senators and ten representatives to represent congress on that occasion and to provide for suitable ceremonies to take place upon the national reserve adjoining the canal. It is also provided that the secretary of commerce and labor be authorized to have erected a monolith on which to be placed suitable memorial tablets. Ten thousand dollars is provided for the monolith and tablets, a similar sum for the preparation of a historical and statistical volume relating to the canal and five thousand dollars to defray the expenses of the commission.

Captured Five Slot Machines.

Port Huron, Mich., March 7.—Sheriff Davidson and his deputies, assisted by Port Huron police officers, made a clean-up raid on nickel-in-the-slot machines at Algonac and confiscated five machines. On two former occasions trips were made down there, but the officers' coming had been tipped off each time. This time, however, the raid was a total surprise and the game was caught in full blast.

Convicted of Attempt to Murder.

Kalamazoo, Mich., March 7.—Clarence Miller was convicted in the circuit court of attempt to murder Edward Coe and two others by means of poison in beer given them to drink. The case involved the Galesburg feud, and has excited considerable interest during the week it was on trial. The jury was out three hours.

Gelock Told Two Stories.

Grand Rapids, Mich., March 7.—At an examination in police court Martin Gelock swore that he had been approached by Deputy City Marshal Edward Wierenga, acting as agent for Lant K. Salsbury, and offered money for his influence in the Salsbury trial. This was in direct opposition to the statement he made when examined as to his eligibility to sit as a jurir in the case. Then he swore that he had never been approached by any one.

Woodmen Burned to Death.

Grayling, Mich., March 7.—Tompkin's lumber camp, located about seven miles northeast of this place, has been totally destroyed by fire and Otto Pierce, of Port Huron, and Orin Ranse, of this place, were burned to death. Both men were intoxicated, having been to town the evening previous, and could not be rescued.

Confessed Burglary.

Marshall, Mich., March 5.—Roy Lester, aged 22, was arested here Friday and confessed to burglarizing John Wiseman's store Wednesday night. He said he took about $3 in small change and 22 cigars and that he gained entrance through a window. Upon being arraigned before Justice Deuel he was held for trial at the present term of the circuit court.

Eyes With Double Pupils.

Cicero says that "the glance of all women with the double pupil in the eye is noxious, blighting and withering." Cadmus tells us that such persons would not drown. Still others say that if they did drown the body would never sink, neither would it decay. They could cure the disease of the chest—consumption—by rubbing their perspiration on the affected parts of the individual, and in case the double pupils were red instead of black they could cure the lepers and the blind.

Caught the Students.

There was formerly a barber in Harvard square who caught the university custom with this classic appeal which some friendly patron suggested:

Siste, viator,
Submitte collum tonsori
Et abi alter Adonis.

"Traveler, stay, submit your neck to the barber and depart a second Adonis."

Businesslike.

"Some people," said the caller with a slight sneer, "seem to think that signing checks is the most important thing in life."

"I know it," rejoined Senator Sorghum, "and it's a mistake, my boy; a sad mistake. Getting the money in bank in the first place is what counts."—Washington Star.

Agreed on One Point.

"But I am so unworthy, darling," he murmured as he held the dear girl's hand in his.

"Oh, George," she sighed, "if you and papa agreed on every other point as you do on that how happy we could be!"

Superstitious.

"What! Did you let the examinations go by again, Carl?"

"I'll tell you, father. On the way to the college I met an old woman, and then I turned back again."—Fliegende Blatter.

Several robins were seen in this vicinity Wednesday, but yesterday the blizzard struck us and made it very uncomfortable for the birds as well as our citizens.—Clinton Local.

A. S. Beach fell from a scaffold some eight or ten feet high to the ground while working on Richard's ice house last week. Considering the fact that Mr. Beach weighs over 300 lbs. his escape without injury is remarkable.—Onsted News.

A Milwaukee chemist has found 96,000,000 germs in a dollar bill. That settles it. Don't carry another one with you, but pay that subscription you owe with it. We have arrangements made whereby we can disinfect them very rapidly, if we have a chance.—Williamston Enterprise.

The farmer may not be "in the swim" just now, but one came to Constantine last week with a bale of hay and a basket of eggs and the eggs figured just 7 cents less than the hay. The basket was small and the bale was large, too. They are not given to poetry up at Constantine and the lay of the hen would be more appreciated than "last lay of the ministrel."—Adrian Press.

Reconstructs your whole body, makes rich red blood. Drives out impurities that have collected during the winter. Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea is a family tonic. 35 cents. Tea or tablets.

Were the weather not always on hand as a topic of conversation some people might as well be deaf and dumb.

Happy, Healthy Children.

Any child can take Little Early Risers with perfect safety. They are harmless, never gripe or sicken, and yet they are so certain in results that robust constitutions requiring drastic means are never disappointed. They cannot fail to perform their mission and every one who uses DeWitt's Little Early Risers prefer them to all other pills. They cure biliousness. Sold by C. A. Wright.

After arguing with a man for half an hour a woman invariably says: "Now why can't you be sensible?"

Do You want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the intestines. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure add to the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in the human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable and the only combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health and strength-giving qualities Sold by C. A. Wright.

It makes much difference whether a man has great desires, or whether he desires greatness.

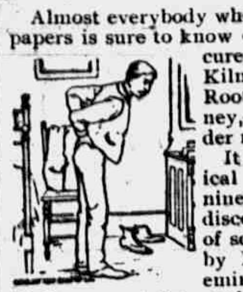
Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.



It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

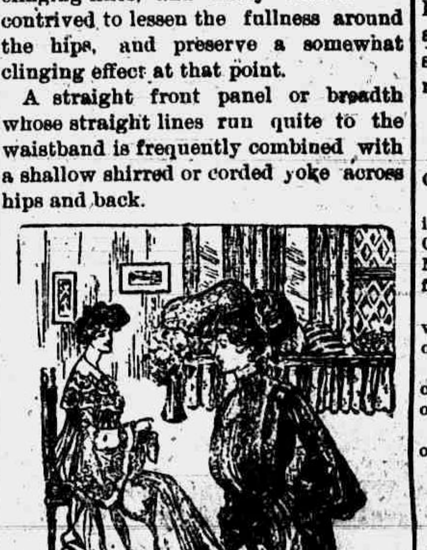
MILADI'S NEGLIGEE.

The full skirt and its Modifications.

The American woman is still dubious about the full skirt. She refuses to take it seriously and insists upon compromises—and correctly so—making the most of every nation's best and rejecting the ugly features. And this is why she is called "the best dressed woman in the world!"

While the American woman accepts the full bottomed skirt, she demands clinging lines, and many devices are contrived to lessen the fullness around the hips, and preserve a somewhat clinging effect at that point.

A straight front panel or breadth whose straight lines run quite to the waistband is frequently combined with a shallow shirred or corded yoke across hips and back.



Lengthwise side plaits, stitched half way to the knee adapt themselves readily to the new skirt line, and horizontal skirt trimming retains its vogue although, particularly in rich and heavy materials a perfectly plain skirt with no ornament save its long graceful folds is much in evidence.

My illustration shows an excellent model in a lengthwise side plaited skirt. Made of deep blue silk krash, this model with its prettily plaited blouse, while easily copied is distinctly up to date.

The artistic negligee is rapidly gaining ground among American women, and room gowns made with the flowing sleeve effects are irresistable. Made of China or India silk they are extremely pretty, and among the successful innovations for this use nothing equals the soft and lustrous peau de crepe, of which, in a soft DuBarry rose, the charming room gown I have illustrated is composed.

This dainty conceit is made with the wide pagoda sleeve, and deep fichu collar, giving the long shoulder effect. It falls in graceful folds from the bust line—not too scant—nor yet full enough to be clumsy. The entire gown is edged with wide rather coarse thread ecru lace.

And careful dressing "from the skin outward" is of the utmost importance with these garments. The day is passed for ill-fitting under garments, and the corset must fit like a glove, and at the same time should be entirely comfortable. A properly cut corset, such as any one of the C—B a la Spirite models, instead of extending up to the breast bone and cramping the chest and its muscles, does not extend more than five inches above the waist line, leaving free the shoulders and chest, as well as the muscles of the diaphragm.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by C. A. Wright.

He who is useful is the incarnation of the highest religion or creed.

The hard rain of Sunday night and all day Monday got around just in time to make good the predictions of Weather Prophet Hicks for a grand wind up of the month of February from a weather standpoint. The old gentleman has called the turn on the weather pretty closely for the past ten years, and thus far in 1904 he is keeping his record right up to the best there are in the business in his line. A hard thunder storm in February is a little out of the ordinary, but of course Hicks said we were to have it and it came and there is no use of making any great amount of fuss about it.—Hudson Gazette.

Occasionally one will hear the remark, "I wish I was out of town," and then one feels like saying, "I wish you were." A man who stands on the street corners, chewing and spitting, telling obscene stories, cursing the town, finding fault with his grandmother because she was a woman, claiming that the merchants are a lot of thieves, that the lawyers would skin a man to a finish, and a whole lot more such worthies would be justified in having cowhide authority exercised on the bosom of their pants. No one is obliged to live where he is not suited. If one hasn't an encouraging word for the business enterprises and institutions of his town, he should shut up and "go way back and sit down." If things don't suit you, move to where they will. A growler and a sorehead in a town are an enterprise killer every time. It would pay a town to donate him $5 and tell him to move.

You may forget the man who praised, or even him who blamed you, but not him who saw clear through you.

Good Spirits.

Good spirits don't all come from Kentucky. Their main source is the liver—and all the fine spirits ever made in the Blue Grass State could not remedy a bad liver or the hundred-and-one ill effects it produces. You can't have good spirits and a bad liver at the same time. Your liver must be in fine condition if you would feel buoyant, happy and hopeful, bright of eye, light of step, vigorous and successful in your pursuits. You can put your liver in fine condition by using Green's August Flower—the greatest of all medicines for the liver and stomach and a certain cure for dyspepsia or indigestion. It has been a favorite household remedy for over thirty-five years. August Flower will make your liver healthy and active and thus insure you a liberal supply of "good spirits." Proverbs

"When the butter won't come put a penny in the churn," is an old time dairy proverb. It often seems to work though no one has ever told why.

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Children take to it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Whiskey and Beer Habit

PERMANENTLY CURED BY

"ORRINE,"

ABSOLUTELY SAFE, SURE AND HARMLESS.

Physicians pronounce drunkenness a disease of the nervous system, creating a morbid craving for a stimulant. Continued indulgence in whiskey, beer or wine eats away the stomach lining and stupefies the digestive organs, thus destroying the digestion and ruining the health. No "will power" can heal the inflamed stomach membranes.

"ORRINE" permanently removes the craving for liquor by acting directly on the affected nerves, restoring the stomach and digestive organs to normal conditions, improving the appetite and restoring the health. Can be given secretly if desired.

Cure Effected or Money Refunded.

Ask your druggist whom you know what he thinks of ORRINE; he will indorse our statements as truthful in every respect. If ORRINE fails to cure we will refund you every penny paid for it as cheerfully as we took it.

No Sanitarium Treatment or Publicity!
No Absence from home or loss of time!

Mothers, wives and sisters, you cannot cure those who are afflicted with this most terrible of all diseases by your fervent prayers, or eyes red with tears, nor by your hope that they may stop drinking. It can be done only with ORRINE. You have the remedy—will you use it? If you desire to cure without the knowledge of the patient, buy ORRINE No. 1; if the patient desires to be cured of his own free will, buy ORRINE No. 2. Full directions found in each package. Price $1 per box.

☞ We will gladly furnish a treatment free of cost to any physician to demonstrate that Orrine is a positive specific for drunkenness. ☜

The Blissfield Advance has been kicking with both feet most lustily for several weeks, rounding up the Telegram and appealing to Blissfield people to patronize the home paper. Instead we noticed this: "Editor Grandon of the Telegram, made the Advance a pleasant visit yesterday".—Press.

THE FAMOUS OPTICIAN of Detroit,

The eye, when properly cared for affords the keenest delight because of the pleasures we are able to enjoy through its medium. When not cared for and its warnings are unheeded, it becomes an instrument of torture. Headaches, eye pains, burning, itching sensation, strained vision, nervous troubles and many bodily ills are the results accruing from over worked eyes, eyes that need help. My examination reveals all hidden troubles, and it is my province to fit the right glasses to any and all defects of vision.

Life Guards.

The Life Guards are two regiments of cavalry forming part of the British household troops. They are gallant soldiers, and every loyal British heart is proud of them. Not only the King's household, but yours, ours, everybody's should have its life guards. The need of them is especially great when the greatest foes of life, diseases, find allies in the very elements, as colds, influenza, catarrh, the grip and pneumonia do in the stormy month of March. The best way that we know of to guard against these diseases is to strengthen the system with Hood's Sarsaparilla—the greatest of all life guards. It removes the conditions in which these diseases make their most successful attack, gives vigor and tone to all the vital organs and functions, and imparts a genial warmth to the blood. Remember the weaker the system the greater the exposure to disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes the system strong.

A GOOD LETTER

From

E. HAUSE,

Who is sojourning in the Sunny South.

Sorrento, Fla., Feb. 29, 1904.

DEAR HERALD:—

The weather here is very enjoyable, no frost this month peaches are as large as filberts, melons are up, corn is being planted and orange trees are blooming. By the way, now is the time for a man with a little money to make a fortune, by securing an orange grove, there are young trees that never blossomed before that are now full of buds and bloom. There are a few such trees here, in groves of from 2½ to 5 acres each that can be bought from $150 to $200 per acre.

My friend, C. A. Slayton, informs me that he and wife will make us a visit soon. When he does come we will "show him 'round," take them to Rock Springs, where nature presents a very pleasing and attractive sight, as they can explain to you on their return to our old home.

The most impressive point about the Springs is the spring itself, there you can see a river 50 feet in width flowing out from beneath a rock, the walls of which rise perpendicularly 28 feet, to a level of the road, which passes within 50 feet of an oak tree that stands on the top of this wall of the rock. The roots from one side of the tree reach out and hang over the face of the sandstone composition, mingling with grape vines, ferns, and flowers presenting a fine back ground for an artist's sketchings. As you follow the windings of the roadway down underneath the huge branches of the live oaks, where trailing moss is hanging like a curtain 20 feet long, just across the road on the side next the river, you will see the place where visitors take their lunch in the grove of wild plums and magnolia trees.

We might fill a book with the beauties of this and other springs near Sorrento, but we will let this suffice. One must come and see to be fully convinced of the pleasures awaiting Tecumseh people that wish to get away from the cold for three or four months and enjoy the open air treatment in Florida.

Yours
E. HAUSE.

ELECTRIC ROAD

But still the road is expected up Chicago Street.

Saginaw, General Hospital,
W. S. Mich., Mar. 5, 1904.

DEAR FRIEND STACY:—I am up for temporary repairs, sort of in "dry dock." Will be out on the "fighting line" in a few days. This is no Vladivostock affair. I am not "bottled up." I am smelling all the bouquets that are being sent in and am frank to say what I feel that I prefer the bouquets now rather than at that other time when a fellow gets them and may be knows it, but likely don't. And if he does, he has more important interests of the one sort or the other to attend to just then than mundane flowers.
